

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.

+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.

+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.

+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at `http://books.google.com/`

JUVENILE BOOKS NET from JANUARY 1, 1913

WE announce to the trade that beginning with January 1st the prices of all our juvenile books will be made net on the following basis:

All books formerly published at $1.25, regular, will be $1.00 net.

All books formerly published at $1.00, regular, will be 80 cents net.

All books formerly published at 60 cents, regular, will be 50 cents net.

All books formerly published at $1.20 net, will be $1.25 net.

There will be a new series for children to be published at 25 cents net.

These prices will be net permanently

As this change is made in the interest of the trade and in some cases means a lower wholesale price than formerly, it is hoped that all branches of the trade will not only support us in the movement but will lend their aid in maintaining the prices and thus securing the added profit for themselves.

We suggest also that any books of ours now in stock be re-marked at the new prices.

Because of its largely increased circulation

we referred, three weeks ago, to the imprint edition of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY Book Review supplement as "the cheapest book advertising" with which we were acquainted.

We doubt if that fact is fully realized.

The advertising rate of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is $25 a page. For advertising placed also in the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY'S imprint edition (the monthly Book Review) a supplementary rate of $25 is charged, making the basic rate for PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY and Book Review together $50 a page. For the $25 extra charged for the supplement edition of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY an imprint circulation in excess of 27,500 copies monthly is now given. This makes the cost of Book Review imprint advertising work out, per agate line per thousand of circulation, to . . . . . .351 cents

Advertising in the best known book jobbing house organ costs approximately, per agate line per thousand of circulation, ... .476 cents

Advertising in the imprint book list of largest circulation costs approximately, per agate line per thousand of circulation, ...833 cents

Advertising in the metropolitan newspaper, usually regarded as having the highest percentage of book buyers in its clientele, costs approximately, per agate line per thousand of circulation, ...926 cents

Advertising in the American book magazine, recognized as the best, costs approximately, per agate line per thousand of circulation, . 2.189 cents

Does not this look as if we were justified in claiming that the Book Review offers you the least expensive book advertising to be had?

We believe our subscribers, if you ask them, will tell you that, from a book selling standpoint, it is the best. Why don't you ask them?

For, remember that every copy carrying your advertisement goes, by virtue of the way the Review is distributed, direct to a book buyer.

The creator of Raffles

Returns to the field of his fame with which will be published in February

The hero is a young Englishman only like the famous Raffles in being an equally striking individual. He and the narrator, forced into the parts of semi-detectives, pass through a series of mysterious episodes that at least equal those of the Amateur Cracksman in intensity of interest. But there is a quality, wanting in the Raffles book, which gives a singular atmosphere of romance and mystery;—the scene is the former estate near London of a celebrated and wicked Lord, which has just now been cut up into small suburban lots; and the criminal acts committed are, in a mysterious way, due to the wild and vicious character of the long dead owner of the land.

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help and an ornament thereunto."—BACON.

THE published plans of the Ways and Means Committee of Congress, to handle the tariff revision proposed, at the special session for the purpose which President-elect Wilson has announced he will call, have aroused general approval. Public hearings will begin before the committee at Washington on January 6 and end on the last day of the month. One day each will be given to chemicals, earthenware, metals, agricultural products, cotton, flax, wool and sundries, and one day will be divided between wool and silk, one between sugar and spirits and one between tobacco and paper, the latter schedule (which includes books), in which the publishing trade is most particularly interested, coming on Friday, January 17. A systematic order of hearings has been devised, time will be apportioned and a particular form of brief has been decided on. Witnesses will be required to furnish in advance an outline of their arguments.

The rules for the hearings, which should be carefully noted by those desiring to be heard, include previous notice to the clerk of the committee. In such applications, the following information should be given: name; permanent address; temporary address in Washington; person, firm or corporation represented; paragraph of the act concerning which testimony will be given; brief mention of attitude to revision of the tariff, and the amount of time desired. In addition to this, the person intending to give testimony should forward in advance to the clerk a copy of his brief and of any documents he desires to file with the committee.

In preparing this brief, it is desired that the following outline be observed: "State by items and paragraphs the changes in rates recommended, assigning in each instance reasons for recommendations. Estimate the increase or decrease in imports by paragraphs and items which would result from suggested modification of duties. Explain methods or experience relied upon in making estimate. Suggestions as to changes in phraseology of present tariff law. Suggestions as to the betterment of the administrative features of the present law. All briefs and other papers filed with the committee should have endorsed on them the name and address of the persons submitting them and the numbers of the paragraphs of the present tariff law to which they relate."

The PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY has not yet heard of any intended representation at these hearings from the publishing trade.

THE Supreme Court of the State of New York rendered a decision, recently, that forms a precedent of interest to every man receiving shipments of merchandize. In the case referred to, a railroad company claimed that it could not make delivery because the consignee's siding was crowded, and that before a space was cleared for the goods forty-eight hours had elapsed, with the consequent accumulation of demurrage charges of $11. These the consignee refused to pay, on the ground that the siding was not crowded, and that a proper delivery should have been made. The cars were then shunted to a nearby siding, there to remain till $300 in charges had been accumulated. Then they were sold, the railroad company reimbursing itself for the demurrage charges. The railroad's defence to the action was that there was a "constructive" delivery. It lost the case, however, largely on its failure to notify the consignor promptly of its inability for any cause to deliver, the court holding, in substance, that common carriers must make actual deliveries of the goods entrusted to them or speedily advise the shippers of the goods of their inability to do so.

FURTHER CHANGES IN 1913 AMONG THE TRAVELERS.

THE following notices of changes in the traveling staffs of the publishers were received too late for insertion in last week's issue:

Company, in New York. Personal and domestic reasons have influenced Mr. Magel to desire an inside position and to retire from the road.

JOHN D. MCGREW, for the past few years proprietor of the Crossroads Book Shop, in Honolulu, will be the Pacific coast representative of the Bobbs-Merrill Company, beginning January 1, and will have the Far Western territory generally.

W. N. STURGIS, formerly of Rand, McNally & Co. and Raphael Tuck & Sons Co., is now connected with the Gibson Art Co., with headquarters at the New York office, Fifth Avenue Building, 200 Fifth Avenue.

H. G. KRAUSS will represent C. S. Hammond & Co. in the metropolitan district, and in the smaller cities of New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

LENNOX CLIFTON, of the American Baptist Bookstore, St. Louis, will, after February 1, join the traveling staff of the Dodge Publishing Co.

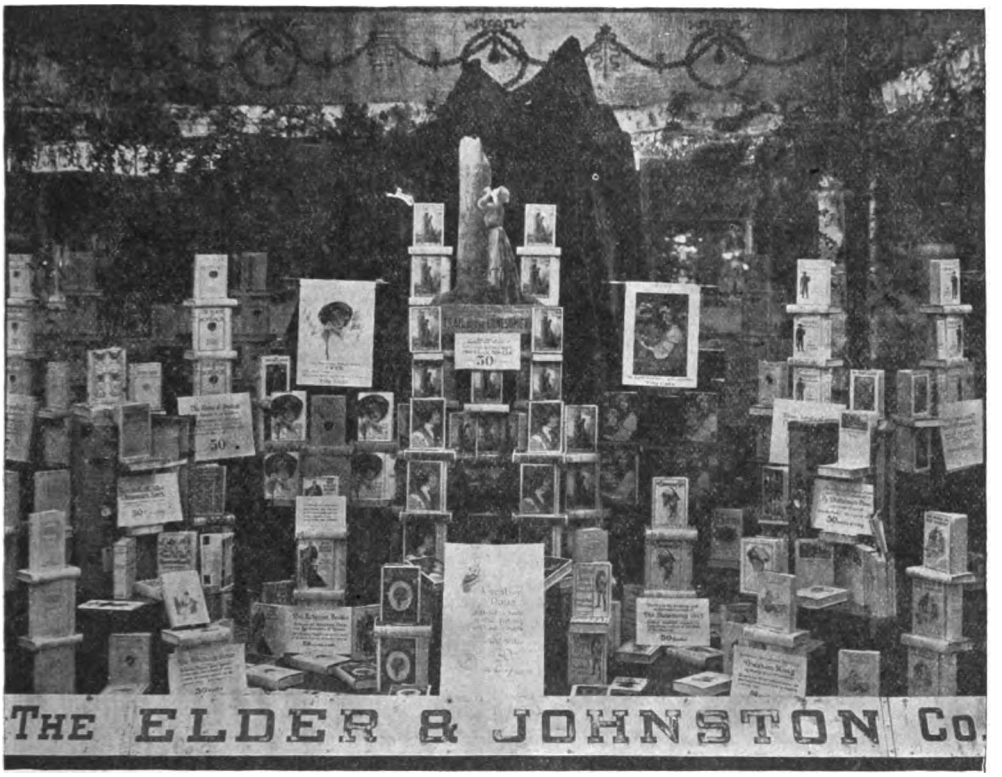
CHARLES B. MARSHALL, formerly with the Broadway Publishing Co., goes to Moffat, Yard & Co. as a salesman.

M. A. WHITMAN, of Rand, McNally & Co., who covered the Eastern territory, has become sales manager of his firm at their Chicago offices.

WILL S. SIEGEL, formerly with Rand, McNally & Co., who was announced in the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY of December 28 as a new representative of the Saalfield line for the New Year, has decided not to accept this offer.

BOOKS AND READING.

AN ARTICLE IN THE "INDEPENDENT" BY WILLIAM J. GAYNOR, MAYOR OF NEW YORK CITY.



AND so you wish to visit me here in my library and get from me an article on libraries, and books, and reading, and learned men, and bookish men, and bookshops, and so on. It is a large subject. I can only skim over it with an every-day recollection. You can help by asking a question here and there. There are so many public libraries here now that people do not need to buy books. And these libraries have all kinds of books, even rare and curious ones. The number of familiar old bookshops diminished as these public libraries grew. According to Professor Mahaffy there was a bookshop in ancient Athens. I never think of the burning of the great library of Alexandria without a pang. It is said that when consulted by his general who had captured that city in the seventh century, the Arabian Caliph Omar said that if the books of the library contained only what was in the Koran they were superfluous, if anything else they were heretical, and that, therefore, in either case they should be burned. This story was invented long afterwards. The Arabians were a learned people. They were not burners of books. Every department of science was enriched by their learned men. Western civilization owes them much. The very numerals in which we keep our accounts we got from them. Libraries preserve errors as well as truths. I suppose there are as many errors as truths in them. The errors as well as the truths of each age are stored in books. That written down in books as the height of wisdom in one age often becomes the height of folly in the next. This is so in science, in theology, and in everything. And so books lead us into many false paths unless we are wary. I suppose we all know a few very wise people who are unable to read at all. There is a large amount of innate knowledge in all of us. It develops with the growth of our minds and bodies from birth. It is the same with all animals. Who taught the ant to bite every grain of corn she carries into her hill lest it take root and grow? She did not read it in any book.

But I fear I am wandering away from what you want. Reading, you say? Reading is to no purpose without thinking, except for pastime or amusement. Reading is thinking with the head of another person instead of your own. One who reads without thinking gradually fritters away his power of thinking. Reading may be an aid, but to possess a thought we have to work it out ourselves, and make it a part of ourselves. The self-thinker is equipped for action. He who reads without thinking is not. When called upon for action he is all the while trying to recollect the words or thoughts of others which he has read, and to shape his words or acts thereto. No one ever did a considerable work in the world who was not a self-thinker. Too much reading weakens the judgment. What we absorb by reflection becomes part and parcel of our mental processes and comes forth spontaneously for use when the mind enters the society of facts or ideas to which it belongs. Mere feats of memory are of little or no use. To be able to remember and repeat many names, or verses, or the like, may be likened to the physical feats or tricks of acrobats. They excite the same attention by their novelty, and are alike of little worth. The Roman general who is said to have been able to repeat the names of all of his soldiers seems to have had no other distinction. Absorption, not verbal memory, forms judgment. There was for a long time in this country a distrust of scholarly and bookish men in respect of business or public affairs. We have not altogether got over it yet. They were called "literary fellers." But history shows that such men have given the best government and achieved the best results when given the opportunity. We elected a learned, literary and bookish man President of the United States the other day in Woodrow Wilson. Such men acquit themselves well when called into government. But that happens only to a few. It is the same in general business and affairs. Men who make themselves learned in a certain calling or business by means of study excel the men of long experience, but without learning. Of great rulers who were learned, it is easy to cite instances. Alexander the Great was a student, philosopher and learned man. He possessed all the learning of his time. Aristotle was his tutor, and he served for a time as his amenuensis. When he went into Asia on his great military expedition he took a retinue of learned men with him. Wherever he went he sought out learned men and philosophers and conversed with them. He called to see Diogenes in his tub at Corinth, and after conversing with him said, as he turned away: "Were I not Alexander I would wish to be Diogenes." Cæsar was also a man of learning, an orator, and given to philosophy. He wrote a book of apothegms. which is unfortunately lost. The philosophical mind has always been prone to express itself in parable, or aphorism or fable. As an orator he was capable of holding his own against Cicero. His "Commentaries" have not been excelled as a model of pregnant narrative. At the same time, he could be nimble and jocose of wit, as when being hailed as king by some of the populace he responded that his name was not King, but Cæsar—King being a surname with the Romans as with us.

The Emperor Marcus Aurelius left his philosophical thoughts in writing. He seems never to have had any desire or intention of publishing them. In the midst of camps and great affairs he mused over them and wrote them down on tablets as a solace to his own soul. He had a true conception of God and the universe. As I finished reading his book again, not long ago, I could not help writing on the flyleaf as follows: "Consider that the great universe, of which thou art only a trivial speck, is governed by fixed laws, and be therefore content in all things, and especially to die at any time and abide God's will of thee, whether of individual future life, or dissolution into universal mind and matter." That is the sum and substance of what his mind leaves other minds pregnant of.

A WELL ARRANGED WINDOW OF "REPRINTS."

By courtesy of Grosset & Dunlap.

Napoleon was one of the greatest readers of his time and much given to the society of learned men. He took a large body of scientific and learned men along with him in his military expedition to Egypt. When he came back he dressed in the garb of the academicians for a time and consorted with men of learning. He read in his coach as he traveled on his campaigns, and if a book impressed him as worthless he threw it out of the window. It is said his route could be traced by the litter of books along the roadside. But I suppose this is an exaggeration. Lord

Rosebery, in his book on Napoleon, says that he had a library of 800 volumes on the field of Waterloo. Did you ever hear of a more astonishing thing? You cannot help doubting it, you say. Nor can I. But it is true that he carried many books about with him, and had special editions printed and bound for his own library. Frederick the Great was a literary man. He kept Voltaire, the greatest thinker and literary genius of that age, by him for a time to commune with him over poetry, philosophy and learning. Do you not think the minds of these two men were much alike? No? Well, it has always seemed so to me. They were each what some call queer, jealous of each other, and spat and quarreled like cats.

Queen Elizabeth was learned to a singular and rare degree. To the end of her long life she had set hours for study and reflection. She was fond of men of learning and philosophy. There never seems to have been any objection to literary men in public affairs or as statesmen in Great Britain. England presents a long list of literary men who came to eminence in public affairs, as Burke, Disraeli, Gladstone, and I hope you will let me add Balfour. His book, "Foundations of Belief," has been taken too little note of. Nor should the present Churchill be omitted. Gladstone was the most bookish of English statesmen. He thrust his spoon into every dish. But he was superficial. He will not survive either as orator or writer. He was a rhetorician, but not an orator. Seldom have the rhetorician and the orator united in the same person. Most of the world's orators have been only plain, some of them poor, speakers. It is hard to believe that Demosthenes, being asked for the first, then the second, and then the third requisites of an orator, answered each time "action." Instead of being a requisite, action can be dispensed with. The three requisites for an orator are, first, the man (an honest man with a purpose); second, a message to deliver (something to say); and last and least, the way of saying it. Some orators have been stutterers. Francis Bacon says Moses stuttered. Rhetoricians have always been distrusted as dishonest. Orators never. The Roman Republic banished the rhetorician several times. How would it do for us to do the like?

The name of Francis Bacon cannot be omitted when learned men and philosophers who were eminent in public affairs are mentioned. His writings are one of the world's marvels. It is seldom so prodigious a mind has ever been conferred on any of the sons of men. It might not be easy to give a list of literary men among the Irish statesmen. A few of them were orators. Parnell does not seem to have read anything. He was the bookless statesman. He was ignorant even of Irish history. And he was neither rhetorician nor orator. We had philosophers and literary men in public affairs in this country at the beginning more than later on. Benjamin Franklin stands out incomparable at the head of them all. Jefferson was a great student, as the writings he left after him attest. He was also a philosopher. Hamilton does not seem to have had even a touch of philosophy, but in political economy, in history, and in the art of government was the ablest man of his time in all the world. Nearly all of the men developed by the French Revolution were learned or literary men. The only exception I can think of at this moment is the brewer Santerre, whose names survives only because he had a voice which could be heard all over Saint-Antoine, and, as I think some say, half way out to Saint-Cloud. We find Robespierre, at the age of nineteen, corresponding with Benjamin Franklin on a scientific topic. Even Marat was an educated and scientific man. He was an eminent and fashionable physician in Soho Square, London, for ten years. He returned to France to participate in the French revolution. Carlyle tries to damn him by calling him "horse-leech." He also pictures him as unclean, even nasty, in his person. He hints even worse than he says. You may know what I mean if you read Gibbon's Latin footnote concerning the same thing said of the Emperor Julian. But, all the same, Marat was murdered while in his bathtub in his own home—rather conclusive proof that he was of cleanly personal habit. At the head of the Champlain delegation which recently came over here from France was Hanotaux, formerly head of the French Foreign Office. He is a bookish and literary man. He is often seen in the bookshops of Paris, or groping along the long row of little bookstalls on the opposite side of the Seine—more than a thousand in number. The late John Hay, in this country, was also the better equipped as Secretary of State by his literary accomplishments.

But I must not run on this way further. You want me to say something about my own library and books and reading? I would rather pass that over. I have collected my books one by one. As I wanted a book I bought it. In that way a library grows fast enough, and you have the books you want. And your library is part of you all the time. My advice is not to buy a whole library at once. Yes, I have spent some time in the old bookshops of New York. They are now, alas, nearly all past away. I saw men in them who have since come to eminence. It would serve no purpose to enumerate the names of these old bookshops. You could get any sort of book in Leggatt's. One of the last of them was Miller's, in Nassau Street. How he liked to talk with you about books, and what infinite trouble he would take to get a book for you! One day I went in and asked him for "Goschen on Exchange." He scratched his head and said he did not have it, but would get it and send it to me next day. After three days I got a letter from him that there was not a copy of it to be found in the city of New York, and that he had sent to England for it. I had recently heard the debate in the British Parliament, in 1893, on the closing of the Indian mint to the coinage of silver, and the speech of Balfour on bimetalism, and had bought and read the best books on that subject. I then wanted to read the leading books on exchange, as the growing disparity between gold and silver was dislocating the international exchanges of the world. I mention this incident as it made me doubtful of following the lead of our bankers and financiers and business men on these subject, then much rife among us, for if they were students thereof the standard books treating of them would have been for sale here. By the way, Goschen is an example of how a man of learning on any subject may come to the front in public affairs in England. The appearance of his book on exchange caused him to be made Chancellor of the Exchequer over the heads of others, at a bound—per saltum, as the phrase is.

Uncut editions are annoying to those who frequent bookshops. And the "expurgated edition"—what will I say of that? Just think of an expurgated edition of Rabelais! I picked one up in a bookshop in London some years ago. I think it had a very short sale. What places of infinite solace the old bookshops were! You ask me to give a list of ten or fifteen of the greatest books. I would rather not try to do that. But I have no objection to giving you a list of the books which have affected or shaped me the most. They are as follows: The Bible, Euclid, Shakespeare, Hume's "History of England" (especially the notes), Homer's Iliad, Milton ("Paradise Lost"), Cervantes ("Don Quixote"), Rabelais, "Gil Blas," Franklin's "Autobiography and Letters," Plutarch's "Lives," "The Autobiography of Benvenuto Cellini," "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire," Adam Smith's "Wealth of Nations," and Bacon's works. I should add the leading books which deal with what I may call the philosophy of history, such as Draper's "Intellectual Development of Europe," Lecky's "History of European Morals," Buckle's "History of Civilization," and the late Emil Reich's "Success Among Nations." The "Imitation of Christ," filled with religious philosophy, line after line, should not be omitted. More copies of it have been read in the Christian world than of any other book save the Bible. It has soothed the hearts of more than forty generations of Christians. The author of is not known with certainty. Protestants and Catholics claim it and read it alike. The Bible is incomparably the greatest book of all. The philosophy, the poetry, the imagery, the elevation of thought, of the Old Testament have never been approached. No one has since come into the world capable of writing the Twenty-third Psalm, for instance.

By the way, Shakespeare was born on the day Cervantes died, wasn't he? Some of the commentators on Shakespeare say that the word "handsaw" in Hamlet is a copyist's error for "hernsaw," some sort of a bird. It occurs in the passage, "I know a hawk from a handsaw." But here is the same thing in "Don Quixote," namely, "There is some difference between a hawk and a handsaw." The most jaunty and nimble piece of narrative in our language, if not in any other, is Lord Bacon's "New Atlantis," Just read it and see. To bring your style down from stilts, and make it easy and plain, read Newman's "Apologia." We must not fail to mention Burton's "Anatomy of Melancholy," which is the greatest collection of curious learning to be found in any book, ancient or modern. It is a marvel of learning and research. The Baconians claim that Bacon wrote it as well as the Shakespeare plays. They say they trace his cypher through it. I hope you will not think I am loquacious if I tell you how I once convinced three of my four associates when I was a Justice of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court by citing Burton's "Anatomy of Melancholy" as an authority. It was a divorce case against a man. The proof showed that he met the woman at the railroad station, that they came together in a hack with their baggage to the hotel, that the man registered them as man and wife, and that they went to the bedroom assigned to them. One of the judges wrote an opinion that this evidence was not sufficient. I wrote an opinion that the legal inference of misconduct could and should be drawn from it, that they did not go there to say their prayers, and cited that passage of the "Anatomy of Melancholy" which says of a man under such conditions, "it is presumed he saith not a paternoster." The case is known as the "paternoster case.".

Now, we cannot keep on this way, and maybe we might as well stop here. We have looked all along the shelves, and you see that some of my books are below the mark. If they had been in Don Quixote's library when his books were put on trial by the curate and the barber, after he got home from his first sally and was put to bed by his housekeeper and nurse, I am quite certain they would have been burned up in the same heap with the foolish books they condemned and committed to the flames. The comparatively few books which were printed in the first century or less after the art of printing was discovered are called the "incunabula." The images of the minds of writers are preserved forever in their books, while images of the body are lost after a few ages. I am all the time wondering if in the excavations of houses at Pompeii and other places they will not finally discover the lost books of Livy.

Yes, artistically bound books are great sources of pleasure. I have not talked with anyone on that subject since the death of the late William Matthews. He had a choice collection of exquisitely bound books. As good an authority as I know on that subject, and particularly on inlaid books, is Mr. Daniel Treadwell, who still survives among us at a fine old age. How do I read? If the book be worth while, always pencil in hand. Many of my books are spoiled in that way. Just look at them. Yes, I often copy into notebooks the passages I mark. See this passage marked in the Odyssey—how Ulysses in his wanderings sighed to see again "the smoke rising from the hearths of his native land." And this one, that "When he escaped from the den of Cyclops he did not go back for his cap and belt." He was out of danger and knew enough to stay there, unlike some other people. There are a large number of proverbs and wise maxims in "Don Quixote"—more than in any other book I can now think of save the Bible. See this curious one I have marked: "Between the yea and the nay of a woman, I would not undertake to thrust the point of a needle." And here is this marked: "The mountains breed learned men, and philosophers are to be found in the huts of shepherds." But we cannot go into this. I have several times thought of publishing a full collection of them.

BOOKS FOR THE BUSY MAN.

WHAT books shall a man read who has but little time for reading, asks The Nation in a recent editorial. There are thousands of men in business life and in the professions to whom the question is very real. On the one hand there is the desire to keep one's self from being completely absorbed in the daily struggle for existence. The longing for the printed word can never be quite extinguished where once the appetite has been indulged. The memory persists of those spacious realms of human thought into which one just caught a distant glimpse during the pleasant, idle days at college, and cheerfully passed by. On the other hand there is the discouraging reflection that such reading as one undertakes must be necessarily carried on by fits and starts, prolonged over ridiculous periods of time, and without assurance that the book begun will ever be finished. Under such circumstances the proper answer would seem to be that if the busy man of the world is to do any serious reading at all, he must read little books, or else bigger books condensed for the purpose of rapid consumption. Such at least is the belief of the publishers in this country and in England, as appears from the present profusion of literary handbooks, scientific handbooks, historical primers, and the like. The presumption is that the tired business man will pluck up the necesary courage when confronted by a thin, small volume, which can be disposed of in a few half-hours.

Experience, however, by no means justifies such a conclusion. It is no paradox to state that, for the man who has little time for reading, the only proper book is the very big book; and if the book consists of half-a-dozen volumes, so much the better. In this connection we may quote a bit of sound advice administered the other day by President Butler of Columbia to an audience made up of men who, like the busy man of the world, seem to find little time for reading—namely, our college undergraduates. "Resolve to pass the year," said Dr. Butler. "in company with some one high and noble character." And he went on:

"Let the year be made noteworthy by passing it in company with the poetry of Alfred Tennyson. Or, if in another mood, pass the year in close and familiar company with the essays of Emerson, or with that masterpiece of biography, Lord Morley's "Life of Gladstone." The nineteenth century left no nobler or more inspiring life than that of Pasteur. Perhaps you may prefer to pass the year in company with that life as told by Vallery-Radot."

The point is that a man should choose a big book for companionship, and, having made his choice, should be content to spend a year in its company. The speaker had in mind the moral influence of such an exercise. But it has also educational and recreative value. With the same amount of time and attention to invest, the casual reader will derive a higher profit by making his investment in one solid piece of work than in a dozen scattered volumes.

We may take specific examples. Smith confesses that, with a great fondness for historical reading and with little time to indulge his passion, he chances upon Bryce's "Holy Roman Empire." As it turns out, the press of business compels Smith to spend several months even over that admirable example of compact historical writing. Under such circumstances what use is there in trying? But perhaps we shall find another reason for Smith's slow progress with Mr. Bryce's book if we compare his case with that of Robinson, a business man like Smith, laboring under approximately the same disadvantages. Robinson's choice fell upon the six volumes of Carlyle's "Frederick the Great." It was a stupendous task, but Robinson set himself no daily stint and no time limit. He simply made Frederick the Great his principal intellectual concern for an indefinite future. He read little at first, but gathered impetus as he went on. It resulted in Frederick the Great and Thomas Carlyle and Robinson being brought together in an intimate companionship that constituted one of the deepest sources of pleasure to the least celebrated man of the three. It may be confessed that Robinson was at times in danger of becoming a nuisance to his friends. His anecdotes were no longer about his latest-born but about the man who laid the foundations of modern Germany. Robinson seemed also in danger of losing all sense of proportion between present and past. Mr. Bryan or Mr. Roosevelt interested him chiefly because they reminded him of something in those six heavy volumes by Carlyle.

We have spoken of history because that is a field which, for obvious reasons, exercises a broader appeal than any other form of literature outside of fiction. Robinson chose Carlyle's "Frederick the Great" as much, undoubtedly, for the sake of Carlyle as for the sake of Frederick. This is proved by the fact that after he had finished with Frederick, Robinson passed on—we are discussing an authentic case—to Carlyle's Cromwell. Robinson would have chosen well if he had taken Macaulay's England in five volumes. He would probably have fared well with Gibbon's Rome. He might have done well with Grote's Greece. For Robinson had this great advantage over Smith who began with Mr. Bryce's "Holy Roman Empire": he found in the array of volumes a breadth of horizon, a dramatic sweep of narrative, a world of human action and human character and human motive which the most perfect handbook on history can never hope to provide. In other words, once Robinson had conquered his initial awe of the vast stretch of pages before him, their very amplitude became an attraction. He had made acquaintance not with a book, but with a world. His half-hour's reading at night speedily ceased to be an exercise, and became a habit.

So much for the ultimate ease with which big books can be read. Of their value there can, of course, be no question. No man can spend half a year with Gibbon or Macaulay or Carlyle without finding his mental stature expanding in that high company. Even if Robinson had not passed on from Frederick to Cromwell, he would have gained a great deal. For he would have accomplished what the best type of thinker and writer tries to achieve, he would have attained, in degree, the ideal of the true scholar; namely, the mastery of one small field of human knowledge. With a mind trained in that one field, Robinson, in his humble way, is the better prepared to approach life, men—and other books.

THE RESTORATION OF OLD PRINTS AND BOOKS.

Too often, alas, old prints and books that come into the possession of collectors and booklovers have not withstood the passage of years (in many cases centuries) without showing signs of more or less serious damage. If only the paper be considered, the prints frequently display margins "tattered and torn," or altogether wanting; while the books present whole pages which are "things of shreds and patches," or deficient in other necessary respects. It is not a question of the sleight-of-hand of certain specialists, veritable fake artists, who so expertly "doctor" old prints and books, and give to relatively common and worthless specimens the characteristics of this or that rare edition, so that even collectors are at loggerheads over them. These are dubious processes which sometimes entrap even the wariest and most experienced collectors. To satisfy curiosity, however, a short description may be given of those methods which, among divers works of restoration, are more particularly connected with the paper trade—that is to say, the remounting of dilapidated engravings, and the repairing of books, operations which resemble more the "making-up," or even the manufacture, of paper.

The operation of remounting prints consists in removing what remains of the old margin and in putting an entirely new margin around the print. This may be done by professional mounters or by amateurs themselves. The margin, or what remains of it, is removed exactly level with the "frame," so as to render the repairs as little visible as possible. The edges of the print are then beveled by means of an extremely sharp knife. In a strip of paper of exactly the same quality and "grain" as the paper of the print, a "window" is cut of the same dimensions as the print to be inserted in it, but with edges beveled in an opposite direction to the bevel of the print. The sheet from which the "framing" is cut is previously tinted, if necessary, to the exact shade of the print, this tinting being effected by immersion in tea or coffee grounds of the required strength, and carefully filtered. Coffee gives better results than tea, which imparts to the paper a less natural tint. The two parts prepared in this way insures the perfect fit of the print in its "frame," the parts being then glued together at the bevels by means of fish glue. An ivory folding stick is used to smooth the line of gluing and to insure the adhesion of the two parts, a strip of paper being interposed to avoid rubbing the print and the margin at the point of junction. A print thus remounted, without possessing the marketable value of a print of the period having the original margins, has nevertheless in the eyes of its possessor the well-proportioned and harmonious appearance of the work of primitive art.

The professional book repairer is content to merely replace the missing portion of the page by another piece of paper. The modus operandi is the same as previously described, except that the bevelings are geometrical in form. All this necessitates a dexterity and skill that is only acquired by long practice, conjoined to a natural aptitude, but it is simply a work of manipulation.

An ardent booklover, Monsieur Bochet (an engineer in the firm of Frédéric Fouché, well known in the paper trade for his aero-condensers), penetrates, however, into King Paper's domain. In order to render the repairs more perfect, Monsieur Bochet conceived the idea of remaking the paper at those parts where it was wanting. For this purpose the book is first carefully unbound, care being taken not to damage the fly leaves. The separate leaves are then washed in a bleaching liquid, chlorid of lime, chlorohydric acid, oxalate of potash or permanganate of potash, the permanganate treatment being followed by passing through soda hyposulphit, so as to remove the violet hue of the paper, which, having reassumed its pristine whiteness, is rinsed several times in clear water to remove all traces of the bleaching agents, and is then stretched in its moist state over a wire cloth. Meanwhile, a very strongly diluted paper pulp is prepared by pounding cigarette paper in a mortar, a certain quantity of this pulp being taken up in a small tube and very carefully spread over the metallic cloth at the missing portions. The pulp drips across the cloth, and thus reconstitutes the missing portion of the leaf; it is united by means of a penknife or a fine spatula with the old paper and pressed closely between the felts. Repairs thus executed are, so to speak, invisible. The bleached paper is then retinted, in tea or coffee grounds, to the color it had before treatment; then regummed according to the standard method—namely, gelatin and alum.

The original text will naturally be defective upon the joined portions. Writers—artists, indeed, in their particular line—rewrite this by hand, using inks resembling ancient inks, and taking as models, if possible, intact copies of the same work. So that it be well executed, such a copy immediately attracts the intelligent amateur. Better than writing the text upon paper, is the making of a good block and printing the text on those portions where the text is wanting. Certain printing firms can make inks that perfectly imitate the printing of the period treated. The operations of remounting prints and of restoring books by gluing paper in the holes necessitates the use of a paper analogous to the original as regards grain and—in the case of books, as regards "laying" and water-marks, if the original is "laid." It is, therefore, a claustral task to dispose the piece in such a way that the "lay" and the water-marks unite. A paper similar to, or at least of the same period as, the work to be treated must be found, and certain merchants specialize in old papers employed for this purpose. Monsieur Bochet's process appears to be more suitable for the restoration of vellum papers. In the case of laid papers, if the value of the work to be treated justifies it, a small special mold may be made or even a portion of a mold, with wires and water-marks.—La Papeterie.

NO COPYRIGHT IN A TITLE.

As has been often previously decided, the English High Court of Justice, in a suit for injunction, brought last month, ruled that there was no valid copyright in a title.

Rose Broemel, professionally known as Rose d'Evelyn, sought injunction restraining the defendant, Louis Meyer, from infringing the plaintiff's copyright in a play entitled "Where There's a Will There's a Way," by presenting at the Criterion Theatre a play entitled "Where There's a Will——," and by selling programmes. In each instance a double entendre in the word "Will" was intended, and the plaintiff claimed that this use of the word "Will" was original and subject to copyright protection.

No mention was made in the reports quoted of the connection between these titles and the recent novel by Mary Roberts Rinehart, well known on this side.

NEW CUTS IN CABLE RATES.

DEFERRED MESSAGES FROM ENGLAND WILL BE 3 CENTS A WORD.

THE English Postmaster-General announced last Tuesday several reductions in charges for telegrams to Canada, Newfoundland, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, Rhodesia, British Central Africa, and the United States. The reductions became effective on January 1.

The rate for deferred telegrams to Canada, Newfoundland and the United States is reduced by 1½ pence (3 cents) a word if sent by the Anglo-American, Direct United States, or Western Union companies.

The rate for cable letters to eastern America is reduced from 6 shillings ($1.44) for twenty-one words to 3 shillings (72 cents) for thirteen words, and will be delivered on the day after its dispatch.

For week-end cable letters the rate will be 4½ shillings ($1.08) for twenty-five words, and will be delivered on Monday instead of Tuesday.

NEW PUBLISHING HOUSE IN NEW YORK.

A NEW publishing house has entered the New York field, under the firm name of Sully & Kleinteich, with offices at 373 Fourth Avenue, New York. The new house will do a general line of publishing.

Mr. George Sully was for a number of years with Little, Brown & Co., Boston, as their head salesman, and for the past year was with L. C. Page & Co., Boston, in the same capacity.

Mr. Herman Kleinteich, who has just severed his connection (as buyer of books and stationery) with the Greenhut-Siegel Cooper Company, of New York, where he has been for the past five years, was for a long number of years buyer for the same departments for the R. H. White Co., Boston. He had been before that, also for a number of years, with Leggat Bros., of New York, where he served his apprenticeship.

Both Mr. Sully and Mr. Kleinteich are well known to and popular with the trade, and as both are thoroughly familiar with both the retail and publishing ends of the business, success in their new joint venture can be easily forcasted.

WHEN IS A BOOK "MERCHANDISE"?

SAYS a correspondent of the New York Sun: "After reading the new parcels post rules, I am moved to inquire if a book cannot cease to be printed matter and become merchandise. The rules say that printed matter must still be sent at the old rates, but merchandise may be sent at the new and reduced rates. Now, if I buy half a dozen books and mail them to a friend they are printed matter, and I pay postage accordingly. If, on the other hand, I am a publisher, producing books as merchandise and sell half a dozen books to a customer, should I not have the right to mail them as any other merchandise under the new rates? Should there not be a line drawn between printed matter as literature and printed matter as merchandise?"

BRIEF FILED IN "MACY CASE."

THE final round of the so-called "Macy case" litigation opened, December 27, in the Supreme Court of the United States when a printed brief was filed by Macfarlane & Wise, attorneys for the plaintiffs-in-error, asking for an injunction against the carrying into effect of agreements between publishers and booksellers, alleged to control the supply and sale of books.

The question has been in the lower courts for years. These courts finally held that the injunction should be issued as to uncopyrighted books, but not as to copyrighted ones. The question now presented to the Supreme Court is whether the alleged agreements as to copyrighted books are in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law.

The recent "bathtub" case, decided by the Supreme Court, was declared in this brief to have determined the illegality of the contracts for the maintenance of the prices of copyrighted books.

TRADE ASSOCIATIONS.

ANNUAL BANQUET OF THE BROTHERHOOD OF COMMERCIAL TRAVELLERS.

ON the night after Christmas, the Brotherhood of Commercial Travellers sat down to their twenty-eighth annual feast of choice viands at the Waldorf-Astoria, New York. Although the date would have affected the attendance of almost any other gathering of its kind, a full attendance of the faithful ones was recorded. The only notable absentees were the two invited speakers, Mitchell May and Arthur Sommers. The joy of the evening, however, was not seriously impaired, as the "brothers" of famed eloquence, when called upon by the president, Lee R. Matlack, made good, every one of them. The festivities were further aided by a professional quartette of male voices. Following the time-honored custom, Brother "Bill" Kelly presented to the retiring president, in an address of touching eloquence, the treasured decoration of the gavel and scarf. Towards midnight, Viva la compagnie was sung with spirit as a finale of a notable night, and the brothers departed in peace and deep contentment.

At the regular annual business meeting of the Brotherhood, held early in December, the following officers were elected for 1913: President, L. C. Page; vice-president, William B. Walker; secretary and treasurer, John Hovendon. The following new members were enrolled: Dunlason Chatterton (A. L. Chatterton & Co.), J. J. Coakley (Dana Estes & Co.), Joseph F. Greene (Little, Brown & Co.), Harold C. Kinsey (Doubleday, Page & Co.), Lewis B. Westbrook (Dodge Publishing Co:), and J. L. Nerney (F. A. Stokes Company).

POSTAL MATTERS.

PROPOSED EXTENSION OF PARCELS POST.

IN an interview last week, Representative Lewis, of Maryland, joint author with Senator Bourne of the parcels post law, declared himself in favor of an immediate extension of the parcels post. He would include in it printed matter, now exempt, and increase the weight limit to one hundred pounds.

OBITUARY NOTES.

BRIG.-GEN. THEOPHILUS FRANCIS RODENBOUGH, U. S. A., retired, who was honored for distinguished service during the Civil War, died, the latter part of December, at his home in New York, at the age of 74. He was the author of several books, among them "From Everglade to Cañon with the Second Dragoons," 1875; "Afghanistan and the Anglo-Russian Dispute," 1885; "Uncle Sam's Medal of Honor," 1886; "Autumn Leaves from Family Trees," 1892; and "Sabre and Bayonet," 1896. He was editor of "The Army of the United States," 1896, and of the Journal of the Military Service Institution, 1899.

HENRY CAREY BAIRD, Philadelphia's oldest publisher of industrial and technical books, died, December 31, in his apartments at Wayne, Penn. He was 87 years old, and founder and head of Henry Carey Baird & Co. Mr. Baird was born at the United States Arsenal, Bridesburg, in 1825. His father, Capt. Thomas J. Baird, was a West Point graduate, and was in command of the post. In 1841, Mr. Baird came to Philadelphia and entered the publishing house of Carey & Hart, which had been founded by his grandfather, Mathew C. Carey, in 1785. Mathew C. Carey had been the publisher of a newspaper in Dublin, Ireland, and had been imprisoned for a libel upon the House of Commons. He was induced to come to Philadelphia because he had seen notices in the Philadelphia papers of his trial and imprisonment, and believed he would find friends. The Marquis de Lafayette, who was in Philadelphia at the time, befriended him. In 1859, Henry C. Baird married Elizabeth Davis Pennington, of Philadelphia. She died in 1901, leaving a daughter, Mrs. William Howard Gardiner. Mr. Baird was a disciple of the "Carey school" philosophy of statesmanship. In early life a Whig, he became a Republican in 1865, left that party after the Civil War, but supported Blaine as a Protectionist in 1884, since which time he has had no political affiliations. He was an expert witness on silver before two committees of the House and before the United States Monetary Commission in 1876. During the last few years, Mr. Baird had been ill, and devoted comparatively little time to business. Among the many economic tracts and pamphlets of which he was the author are "John Sherman—a Critical Examination of His Claims to Statesmanship," 1907; "American and English Banking Methods Contrasted," 1908; "Fiat, the Sign and Token of Real Money," 1908; "The South," 1908;

PERIODICAL NOTES.

JAMES CREELMAN, who retired last week as president of the New York Civil Service Commission, is to be associate editor of the New York Evening Mail. Mr. Creelman will receive a salary of $12,000 a year.

MRS. FRANCES HODGSON BURNETT'S new novel, "T. Tembarom," beginning serially in the January Century, traces the story of a boy who began life as a New York newsboy, worked himself up to the position of Harlem reporter for a newspaper, and later became a landed proprietor in England.

The Lantern, a monthly publication, designed to fill the regretful editor with regret indeed, publishes only "discarded truth and rejected fiction"—manuscripts spurned by the undiscriminating. The January number contains, for instance, a story rejected as "too strong" by 38 publications; another which the Black Cat and Red Book turned down, as well as many hitherto friendless poems, sketches and drawings.

A LETTER in the Börsenblatt für den Deutschen Buchhandel from a publishing house in Athens notes that the influence of the war between Greece and Turkey in decreased sales was only felt for the first few weeks, while there has been a large demand for maps and other war literature. There has been no money shortage, and credit with foreign firms has remained normal. This is in striking contrast with reports from Vienna, where business is described as at a practical standstill on account of the fear of war.

ADOLPH OCHS, of the New York Times, has sold his interest in the Philadelphia Public Ledger to John Gribbel and Cyrus H. K. Curtis, publisher of the Ladies' Home Journal and Saturday Evening Post. This gives the Ledger a local and independent ownership. For the present, at least, Mr. Ochs' brothers, George W. and Milton B., will continue as editor and business manager, respectively, of the Ledger. The Ledger is seventy-seven years old, and was never more prosperous than now.

Popular Mechanics Magazine has brought suit in the United States District Court of Massachusetts for $5000 damages and an injunction against the School Arts Publishing Company of Boston. This company is the publisher of the School Arts Magazine, which has been offering Popular Mechanics Magazine in a cut-rate combination with its own publications. The cut-rate offer was made without consulting the Popular Mechanics people in any way, and in spite of the fact that Popular Mechanics Magazine has printed for years in large type on its front cover, every month, the statement that "Popular Mechanics Magazine Offers No Premiums; Does not Club, and Employs No Subscription Solicitors." This suit is said to be the first of its kind ever brought.

PERSONAL NOTES.

D. R. HOOLE, representing the publishing house of Stanley Paul & Co., London, will be at the Hotel St. Denis, New York, until January 15.

SHEPARD DILLINGHAM, son of Charles T. Dillingham, was married, December 26, to Miss Charlotte Elizabeth Smart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick R. Smart, of Flushing, N. Y., in the chantry of Grace Church, New York City. Only the parents of the bride and bridegroom and several friends attended the wedding. Mr. and Mrs. Dillingham sailed for Bermuda last Saturday on their wedding trip. Miss Smart is well known in New York society.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

THE AMERICAN BOOK CO. have just published "Philip Massinger" in their Masterpieces of the English Drama Series.

THE book on library economy and allied topics, by James Duff Brown, R. A. Peddie and others, published originally by Libraco, Ltd., will in future be issued by Grafton & Co., of 69 Great Russell Street, London, W. C.

MARIE THOMPSON DAVIESS, now a standby for lovers of cheerful fiction, has written another story, said to be as amusing as "The Melting of Molly." "Andrew, the Glad," will be brought out by the Bobbs-Merrill Company this month.

C. D. CAZENOVE & SON, of 26 Henrietta Street, Covent Garden, London, notify us that after the 31st of December, 1912, their address will be 12 and 13 Henrietta Street, Covent Garden, where they have taken new premises on the ground floor.

DR. ARNOLD LORAND, author of "Old Age Deferred," has written another work of truly vital interest—"Health and Longevity Through Rational Diet"—published by the F. A. Davis Co. The tremendous popularity of the former volume insures a warm welcome for the second.

To authors, actors, managers and the general public, J. Albert Brackett's "Theatrical Law" (Bobbs-Merrill) will come as a useful guide. It covers matters of contract, copyright, ticket speculation and other subjects with which those connected with the theatre are concerned.

THE Century Co. is to issue, early this year, a new book of short stories by Anne Douglas Sedgwick, author of "Tante." "The Shadow," by Arthur Stringer, will be the first of their 1912 issues, said to be a tale of detective adventure of a kind which never reaches the newspaper reporter.

IN line with his "One Way Trail" and other outdoor romances of adventure, Ridgwell Cullum has written "The Night Riders," to be published February 1 by George W. Jacobs & Co. The publishers, believing the book is its own best advertisement, offer advance sample copies free to the trade.

HENRY HOLT & COMPANY expect to commence their publications of books for general readers, for 1913, on January 25, when they will issue W. P. Pycraft's "The Infancy of Animals," W. Lloyd Bevan's "The World's Leading Conquerors," and Samuel P. Orth's "Socialism and Democracy in Europe."

ARE first editions of Dickens' novels going out of fashion? According to a recent sale at Sotheby's, they are practically valueless. Five of them—"Nicholas Nickleby," "Bleak House," "Little Dorrit," "Dombey and Son," and "Martin Chuzzlewit," with illustrations by H. F. Browne (Phiz)—changed hands at a total of $3.14.

BEGINNING January 1, the Penn Publishing Co. has adopted net prices for all its juvenile publications. The books formerly published at $1.25 regular, will be $1 net; books formerly $1 and 60 cents will be, respectively, 80 cents net and 50 cents net. Books formerly $1.20 net will be $1.25 net. A new series for children will be published at 25 cents net.,

AFTER an intermission of three months, Arnold Bennett's name reappeared in October in the list of best-selling non-fiction, and is still there. With the exception of the three months mentioned, and three others, this popular author has had place in every list of the six best-selling works of non-fiction since February, 1911. In seven of these sixteen lists, two Bennett books were included.

THE annual meeting of the stockholders of the Stationers' Board of Trade of New York, for the election of trustees for the year 1913, and the transaction of other business, will be held at the office, 97 and 99 Nassau Street, New York, on Tuesday, January 7, at 3.30 o'clock p.m. The officers request that members will evince their interest in the welfare of the corporation by being present, in person, if possible, or by proxy.

JOHN FOX'S new book, "The Heart of the Hills," will, of course, be warmly welcomed by the many readers of "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" and other novels by that author. It is promised for early March publication by the Scribners. The same firm will publish in February a tale of mystery colored by criminal deeds—"Witching Hill"—by E. W. Hornung, whose gentleman burglar "Raffles" has become almost a classic character.

A GIRL and a man in an automobile are after a million dollars which had contrived to get lost—such is the situation in "The Lost Million," by Winthrop Alden, whose real name—said to be well known to novel readers—is suppressed. Dodd, Mead & Company offer to booksellers a special advertising and selling proposition with this new January novel, as they did in the case of "Barbara Winslow," "The Red Mouse," "The Man Outside," etc.

"THE FRIENDSHIP OF NATIONS," by Lucile Gulliver, just published by Ginn & Company, is significant of the growing sentiment in America in favor of peace and arbitration. The book is intended for younger readers, and aims to give in an interesting fashion the achievements of the world in art, science, commerce and industry, in order to show the debt of each country to the others. The author also gives special attention to the story of the Hague conferences.

FREDERICK WARNE & Co. will issue at once "Rights of Citizenship," a survey of the safeguards for the preservation of the rights of the people, with a preface by the Marquess of Lansdowne, K.G., and contributions by Sir William R. Anson, Bart; F. E. Smith, K.C., M.P.; Prof. A. V. Dicey, D.C.L.; Lord Hugh Cecil, M.P.; the Earl of Selborne, K.G., describing the evolution of many political constitutions and the methods adopted in all to secure the balance of power for the people.

DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & Co., who, for a number of years, have made it a practice to bring out one strong fiction book in the middle of January, just at the time when the book trade is traditionally supposed to be at its slowest, have in preparation Harry Leon Wilson's new book, "Bunker Bean," a serio-humorous novel, which nevertheless will set a great many people to thinking. Harry Leon Wilson will be remembered as the collaborator with Booth Tarkington in "The Man From Home," and as the author of "The Seeker," "The Spenders," "The Lions of the Lord," etc.

THE new Chicago firm of F. G. Browne & Co. will publish, on January 18, its initial volume, "The Lapse of Enoch Wentworth," a story of New York, telling how a game of poker changed the lives of two men, by Isabel Gordon Curtis, author of "The Woman From Wolverton." "The Turn of the Sword," by C. MacLean Savage, will appear February 26; "Pilgrims of the Plains," by Kate A. Aplington, February 8; and "The Stain," by Forrest Halsey, and "Keeping Up Appearances," by Max Foster, in March. Two booklets—"The Madonna of Sacrifice" and "The Two Samurai"—will also be published in February.

THE G. W. DILLINGHAM COMPANY announces for early issue in 1913: "The Master of the House," from the play by Edgar James, novelized by Edward Marshall; "The Suttee of Safa," a Hindoo romance, by Agnew Zeelan; "The Souls of Men," by Martha M. Stanley; "Her Right Divine," by Oliver Kent; "Faro Nell and Her Friends," the new "Wolfville" story, by Alfred Henry Lewis; "The Voice of the Heart," a sex-problem novel, by Margaret Blake, author of "The Greater Joy"; "Isles in Summer Seas—Beautiful Bermuda," by J. Law Redman, with over eighty illustrations by J. Hodson Redman; "The Modern Heloise," a love romance, by Alfred Buchanan; "Crooked Trails and Straight," a story of Arizona, by William MacLeod Raine; "Udare, Prince of Bidur," a romance of India, by Arthur J. Westermayr, author of "Rudra."

BIBLIOGRAPHICAL NOTES.

CHECKLIST OF UNITED STATES PUBLIC DOCUMENTS, 1789-1909.

THE period covered by this third edition of the checklist of government publications is, for Congressional documents, from the 1st Congress to the end of the 60th Congress, and for departmental publications from the organization of the United States government to the end of the calendar year 1909. The volume claims to be only a checklist, not a catalogue. In all cases the collation is omitted, unless such information is required in order to identify the documents listed; and in the case of serial publications, titles are omitted, numbers only being given. The American state papers appear first of all, arranged by zero numbers from 01 to 038. These are followed by the series of Congressional documents and reports, 15th-60th Congress, arranged by serial numbers from 1 to 5561. Then come the departmental publications, arranged alphabetically by departments, and subdivided alphabetically by bureaus. A liberal view of what should be considered a public document has been taken, all publications bought or published by Congress or published at government expense being included. No attempt is made to enter publications of certain issuing offices which are large publishers of government charts, maps and specifications; but in all such instances the classification of the series is clearly indicated, showing how the class would be booknumbered.

In 1892, the first edition of this checklist appeared as a slender pamphlet of 120 pages, listing Congressional documents for Congresses 15 to 51. Three years later its compiler, Dr. J. G. Ames, turned over to F. A. Crandell, the new Superintendent of Documents, the manuscript for edition two, which was issued the same year. This volume was nearly twice the size of the original edition, and contained the "serial numbers" for the documents of Congresses 15-53, with Nos. 01-038 for American state papers, a selection from the documents of the first 14 Congresses. This edition, though of the greatest value, was far from complete, and the third edition, contemplated for some time, was undertaken by the present superintendent, who assigned the immediate charge of the compilation to Miss Mary A. Hartwell.

The work is primarily based on the great documentary library of the Superintendent of Documents Office, the shelves of which show complete files of all official publications from the establishment of the government to 1909, with the exception of some of the publications of very early Congresses and a few miscellaneous publications which the library has been unable to obtain from various sources. The publications are arranged after the classifications used in the Superintendent of Documents Office. A concise but clear exposition of the system is given in the introduction. This remarkable bibliography, probably more comprehensive in its scope than any list of documents yet issued, will be invaluable to historians, librarians and others. Volume 2 will consist of a full index.

Brebner, Percy, ["Christian Lys," pseud.] The little gray shoe; a romance; with il. by F. Vaux Wilson. Bost., Little, Brown. c. 349 p. D. $1.25 n.

The hero—big, good-natured and courageous, an exile from his native land, is a trooper in the King's Guard at Dravstadt, in Saxe-Oldenburg, when the romance that he is unconsciously awaiting comes to him in assisting a charming maiden in distress. Saxe-Oldenburg is a romantic country, ripe for revolution, and there follow plots and counter-plots, the scurry of hoofs, the clash of swords; and things happen swiftly and with unexpectedness until finally Trooper Heselton reaches the kingdom of his desire and the delightful heroine turns out to be not what she seems at all. Fight in the banquet hall, the strange happenings at the Castle of Syere, Heselton's escape from the castle dungeon, and the combat in the forest on which a woman's happiness is staked are thrilling enough to satisfy the most exacting lover of adventure.

Breckenridge, Lester Paige, and Goodenough, G: Alfr. An extension of the Dewey decimal system of classification applied to the engineering industries. [Rev. ed.] Urbana, Ill., Univ. of Ill. 117 p. O. (Univ. of Ill., Engineering Experiment Station, bull.) pap., 50 c.

to the usual gratuitous distribution, and the subsequent demands were such that a second edition was printed and ultimately distributed. Altogether 20,000 copies were sent out. The demand having continued, it was finally decided again to revise and to print a limited edition. This has now been accomplished and the revised bulletin, much extended as compared with the original edition, is ready for distribution. It presents subdivisions of subjects in such detail as to constitute a complete classification for most engineering industries, even though they are highly specialized. The revision has been made in accordance with the 1911 edition of "Decimal classification," by Melvil Dewey.

Bulloch, Edna Dean, comp. Selected articles on compulsory insurance. Minneapolis, Minn., H. W. Wilson Co. 35+266 p. D. (Debaters' handbook ser.) $1 n.

Social insurance, the term usually given to the subject of the selections included in this book, is the formal provision made by or for working people against the vicissitudes of life, including sickness, industrial accident, invalidity, unemployment, old age and dependency. Book includes information and argument on some of the questions arising from such insurance. No one question for debate is considered in the selections, but the topics most widely discussed in the United States are suggested. In lieu of a brief a résumé of the principal arguments on the general subject is included.

Gantz, W. H. Postal riders and raiders; are we fools?; if we are not fools, why then continue to act foolishly, thus inviting railroad, express company and postoffice officials to treat us as if we were fools?; by the man on the ladder. Chic., Independent Postal League, [5037 Indiana Ave.] 360 p. front. O.

Book is issued by the Independent Postal League, an organization having for its object greater efficiency in the administration of the postal affairs of this country. In the judgment of members of the League the Postoffice Department has failed to grasp the possibilities which the business needs of the American people have placed before the officials. In other words, the responsibilities are too great for a politically controlled branch of the government to properly conduct it, and as a consequence interests have been sacrificed and inadequate service rendered. Book is a statement with arguments to support this judgment, and the setting forth of facts which bear on second-class mail matter legislation.

Hoyt, C: Wilson. Scientific sales management; a practical application of the principles of scientific management to selling. New Haven, Ct., G: B. Woolson Co. c. 8+204 p. il. O. $2.

The author makes this startling statement: "I want to say to the manufacturers and jobbers of America that $1,000,000 is wasted every day through inefficient management." In this book author has set himself the task of developing methods by which this waste can be done away with. It is not intended to teach salesmen how to sell goods, but to teach the executive how to get results from the work of a sales force, and the principles laid down apply to the small and to the large concern.

Begun eleven years ago in connection with the solvate theory of evolution, which had been proposed shortly before that time. Work was continued because when reference was made to the literature for the conductivity of any electrolyte at any given temperature, and for the temperature coefficients of conductivity, it was difficult to find what was desired, or the data were often so discordant that it would be impossible to decide what were the true conductivities and dissociations in question. Oliver, Basil. Old houses and village buildings in East Anglia, Norfolk, Suffolk, and Essex; il. by collotype plates from photographs specially taken by Horace Dan and others; with numerous il. in the text. N. Y., Helburn, 10 E. 16th St. 21+100 p. O. (Old cottage ser.) $8.40 n.

Norfolk, Suffolk and rural Essex are here taken to constitute East Anglia. Gives representative examples of all types of small buildings—other than ecclesiastical—which were erected between the latter part of the fifteenth century and early years of the eighteenth. Plans are not generally given, as these are as a rule inconvenient according to modern ideas, but much may be learned from the external treatment, and that is what is specially developed here. Absence of stone in these counties caused use of timber, brick, plaster and flint, singly or in different combinations, which may be studied most profitably by modern architects.

FRENCH—GERMAN SPANISH—ITALIAN

Is Easily and Quickly Mastered by the

LANGUAGE-PHONE METHOD

Rosenthal Method of Practical Linguistry

This is the natural way to learn a foreign language. You hear the living voice of a native Professor pronounce each word and phrase. He speaks as you desire—slowly or quickly, night or day, for minutes or hours at a time. It is a pleasant, fascinating study; no tedious rules or memorizing. It is not expensive—all members of the family can use it. You simply practice during spare moments or at convenient times, and in a surprisingly short time you speak, read and understand a new language.

THE CLIQUE

The Recognised Organ of the ANTIQUARIAN BOOK TRADE

This "unique paper" was founded for the benefit of the ANTIQUARIAN BOOK TRADE in 1890; and so marked has been its success that no bookseller of any standing can now afford to be without it.

The paper is issued every Saturday, and supplied to the Trade only. This unique feature renders it the ONLY paper published in Great Britain in which trade prices can be fearlessly advertised, and it is thus the BEST MEDIUM for wholesale houses who desire to appeal direct to the trade.

As a means of obtaining "BOOKS WANTED" its columns have long been recognised, not only here but abroad, as the MOST SUCCESSFUL which have ever been placed at the service of advertisers. It is received and read by every ANTIQUARIAN BOOKSELLER in the United Kingdom and the chief houses abroad.

SUBSCRIPTION, 8s. 8d. PER ANNUM. Subscriptions end at December 31st. Subscribers joining after January 1st should therefore deduct 2d. for each week that has passed. Any "live" bookseller can make the subscription out of the first number he receives.

SPECIMEN NUMBER GRATIS on receipt of trade card.

Our terms for advertisements are lower, notwithstanding that we stand FIRST among Antiquarian Book-trade organs, than those of any paper in the world.

THE CLIQUE is the official organ of the International Association of Antiquarian Booksellers.

Reference List of New Publications

Recorded in DECEMBER, 1912

This Reference List enters the books recorded during the month under (1) author, in Clarendon type, anonymous books having Clarendon type for the first word; (2) title in Roman; (3) subject-heading in SMALL CAPS; (4) name of series in Italics.

A colon after initial designates the most usual given name, as: A: Augustus; B: Benjamin; C: Charles; D: David; E: Edward; F: Frederick; G: George; H: Henry; I: Isaac; J: John; L: Louis; N: Nicholas; P: Peter; R: Richard; S: Samuel; T: Thomas; W: William.

For books received sizes are given in CAPS, Q, O, D, etc., books not received sizes are given in Roman numerals, 4°, 8°, 12°, etc. Prices are added except when not supplied by publisher or obtainable only on specific request. Where not specified the binding is cloth.

Those desiring to learn the entire publishing output of the month in any one field should look under one of the following MAIN HEADINGS:

PHILOSOPHY	MEDICINE	LITERATURE
RELIGION AND THEOLOGY	AGRICULTURE	POETRY
SOCIOLOGY	HOUSEHOLD ECONOMICS	DRAMA
LAW	BUSINESS	FICTION
EDUCATION	ENGINEERING, TECHNOLOGY	BIOGRAPHY
PHILOLOGY	FINE ARTS	GEOGRAPHY AND TRAVEL
SCIENCE	GAMES, SPORTS, AMUSEMENTS	HISTORY

Besides the titles listed under each of these headings cross reference is made from each to a limited number of cognate headings which collectively give all the new publications of the month in the given subject or group of subjects.

Inquirers looking for books on a specific topic should look under the general subject to which that topic belongs, i.e., GEOLOGY rather than SILURIAN PERIOD; MATHEMATICS rather than CALCULUS; ECONOMICS rather than WAGES. Books regarding specific Religious denominations, countries and persons, however, should still be sought for under their individual names.

CHEERING VERSE TO THE TRADE

Some time ago we gaily published,
For all our friends, including you;
A book about how Molly melted
Both in heart and body, too.

If we remember right you liked it,
Which made us anything but sad,
So we're bringing out another,
Which is called ANDREW THE GLAD.

It is also by Miss Daviess,
A sufficient guarantee
That the title is well chosen,
And it's funny as can be.

AUCTION OF TODAY

By MILTON C. WORK

Mr. Work originated the New Count, and successfully demonstrated its worth against the judgment of the older authorities, until today it is the universal method of scoring.

In "Auction of Today" Mr. Work explains the up-to-date development of declaration and play under the "new count," and gives his readers the benefit of his own methods—not those of others.

In "Auction of Today" Mr. Work publishes the latest code of Revised Rules of the New York Whist Club, under which the clubs of the country play. Mr. Work is Chairman of the Card Commmitee of this club.

The Happy Warrior

By A. S. M. HUTCHINSON

THOSE who have read this new novel by the author of "Once Aboard the Lugger—" predict that it will be a remarkable literary success. The plot of "The Happy Warrior" is unusual, its love interest is sweet and pure, and there is a fight of which it may truthfully be said that there is nothing more virile and tense in literature.

Some Early English Opinions:

The outstanding novel of the season.—Bystander, London.

"The Happy Warrior" is a book in a million.—London Morning Post.

A very remarkable and a very impressive novel. A story of a very rare and beautiful order. "The Happy Warrior" establishes Mr. Hutchinson among the artists.—London Daily Telegraph.

He triumphs completely. . . . A fresh and spacious novel.—London Daily News.

A fine, serious romance. It has pathos, virility and a welcome, healthy sentiment.—London Globe.

His fight with Foxy Pinsent will always remain one of the notable fights of fiction. It is magnificent.—London Times.

A great story, and one which must surely win for its author a high place among the novelists whose work endures.—From the Boston Transcript's London Literary Correspondent.

Some Early American Opinions:

From a letter written by one of the Publishers' Weekly staff:

"It's the best thing I have read in a long, long time. I only wonder how you could praise it so modestly. . . . It's great stuff, that's all; if it doesn't sell, and sell big, I shall lose my faith in the American reading public."

From Temple Scott, of Brentano's:

"One of those rare books the reading of which is a great occasion in life. It left me entranced. With this book Mr. Hutchinson takes rank with the master writers of fiction."

From Harriet Prescott Spofford:

"A great novel has arrived. . . . It is difficult to speak of the rare charms of 'The Happy Warrior' in moderate terms."

STARTING IN THE BOOK BUSINESS.

WITH the start of the new year, thousands of young men are starting in business for themselves; and, since it is the season of change and readjustment, thousands of others, not yet actually taking this conclusive step toward independence, are seriously considering it. Undoubtedly there are many of these latter in the book trade, on the publishing side, on the bookselling side. What are the present chances and earnests of success in such a proposed venture?

Judging from statistics alone, the odds are discouragingly long against. Two out of every three new ventures, we are told, come to early financial grief. With the proportion so large, well calculated to daunt even the stoutest-hearted, it should not be amiss to point out what have proved to be the chief hazards, and to suggest how and in what measure they may be avoided.

Only eighteen per cent. of all failures, if we may trust the statistics of the big rating agencies, are due to causes outside the business, causes, that is, over which those concerned have no control. And even this percentage is probably unduly high, for it includes panic-time failures, against which the shrewd merchant considers it necessary to prepare, and temporary adverse conditions special to a particular trade which it should be possible for the prospective business to foresee, to a certain extent, at least.

What, for instance, is the outlook to-day in the book trade for a new venture? Not unpromising, surely. The field is not overcrowded; scores of fair-sized towns and cities lack adequate bookstores. The new store will not face cutthroat competition: trade co-operation is the spirit of the day. It is assured a living margin of profit on sales made; the net-price system is firmly established. General business conditions presage no financial cataclysm; every indication — despite tariff, trust and currency agitation (and against them we are largely foreguarded) — is that we are entering on a period of stable and increasing prosperity.

So much for the trade conditions exterior to a new book trade venture. What of the internal ones? Out of the eighty-two per cent of failures due to faults inherent in the business, sixty-five per cent., we are told, are due, in about equal proportions, either to inexperience and incompetence, or lack of sufficient capital.

Incompetence is difficult to gauge in advance. The natural tendency is, of course—though there are exceptions—to overrate one's own ability. The book business is a most complex one. It requires for success vast resources of specific information. Its apprenticeship is a most exacting one. It demands a viewpoint different from that of almost any other retail business, and a mental equipment more varied than that in any other sort of merchandising. Knowledge sufficient for success cannot be gained in a week or in a year; book-trade experience is a plant of slow growth. It is well not to be too hasty, therefore, in seeking independence; be convinced, in short, that you know the book business before you venture to "go it alone."

The amount of capital necessary to start a retail business may seem also a point on which only vague generalization is possible. Nothing could be further from the fact; any experienced retailer or credit man will tell you the irreducible minimum. Before you start a new bookstore, be sure you have enough capital to: (1) Pay at least one month's rent in advance, and all your store expenses for the same period; (2) pay for your fixtures and equipment; (3) pay at least one-half cash on your initial stock. This is the minimum; if you are able to discount all your stock bills you will decrease by just that percentage your capital liability to failure.

Don't confuse capital and credit. The abil ity to borrow money is an asset, a very great asset, indeed; but it isn't capital. The eagerness of the modern manufacturer to secure retail outlets is so great that he has made credit too cheap for the retailer, "too cheap" because he has made it possible for the retailer to start in business on almost nothing at all. Then he wonders why the latter goes to smash—at "twenty cents on the dollar"—six months later. A man who has earned and saved his capital is going to pinch every cent of it before he lets it go, keeping an eagle eye on chances for profit on the one hand and possible leakages on the other. Borrowed money is too easily come by; it gets itself spent in "schemes"; it seems to tie itself up naturally in dead or slow-moving stock.

Publishing needs more capital than bookselling, a great deal more. Printers and paper people in this case, as publishers in the other, are accommodating in the matter of credit, too accommodating, oftentimes, for the real good of the young publishing house. But if manufacturing expense can be, to a certain extent, carried over, and office and salary items are comparatively unimportant, not so the author side or the advertising. Authors nowadays are canny folk, and it oftentimes needs a long purse to bring them into one's imprint fold. Advertising books in this age is a very complex and expensive process, and as necessary, especially for the new house, as it is expensive. The book publishing house that starts business to-day without cash in the bank in at least five figures—better six—invites disaster.

Reports made public early in the week by Postmaster Morgan indicated that in New York City, at least, the parcel post had been accepted as an established fact, and its success practically certain. During the first three days of its existence the local parcel post accepted 142,294 packages in Manhattan and the Bronx, and this included a holiday. Every day showed a marked increase of business over the day preceding. About ten per cent. of all packages received necessitated wagon delivery, and fully five per cent. of all packages mailed were held up because of the use by the sender of improper stamps. Several big mail-order houses have already decided to use the parcel post as a money saver, and a New York wholesale cloak and suit establishment has agreed to buy a million dollars worth of stamps a year if the government's ruling on a small point in the law is satisfactory.

The report from New York City but duplicates that from the post offices of Chicago, Philadelphia and other cities. Certain defects in the parcel post law are, of course, already apparent and were expected. Mr. Morgan is of the opinion, for instance, that provision should have been made for permitting packages to be left in the regular post boxes, instead of insisting they be turned in at branch post office stations. Improvement in this and other points is, however, undoubtedly only a matter of time and adjustment. Meanwhile, Postmaster-General Hitchcock and his subordinates are to be congratulated at the smoothness with which they have set this enormous and complicated piece of machinery running.

SCHOOL BOOKS IN THE ANTIPODES.

South Australia's Scheme of Putting the School-Book Trade in the Hands of Teachers rather than Booksellers — How it Works Out.

It seems that in South Australia the Department of Education, some time ago, made the selling of school books a part of the work of school teachers, the department itself practically going into the school-book jobbing business on a large scale.

A correspondent of the Australian Bookfellow, writing upon the present situation, says:

"The experience of the South Australian Education Department, as viewed by the booksellers, does not encourage the N. S. W. Minister of Education in his project of purchasing wholesale and distributing through the teachers school materials and books. Up to about four years ago these articles were imported or manufactured by the large Adelaide houses and retailed to the scholars by small traders adjacent to the schools. Then (in consequence, it is stated, of his discovery that one enterprising retail dealer was charging more than the regular amount for her goods) the present Minister of Education (Mr. Peake) decided that the department should take over the whole business. Many small shopkeepers were thus almost deprived of a living, and the school business of the large traders was hard hit.

"In South Australia the use of specific readers, arithmetic books, and grammar books is compulsory. These volumes are imported wholesale and retailed to the teachers for sale to the children. This system has, of course, entailed considerable extra expenditure on the department, and has thrown additional irksome burdens upon the teachers, who are strongly urging a return to the old methods of sale by shopkeepers. The cost of all books and utensils ordered is docked from the teachers' salaries at the end of the month.

"The department denies that the children are compelled to purchase from the teachers and forbidden to buy from booksellers; but if a teacher's orders to the department storekeeper fall off he is quickly admonished, and, so, in turn, to save his skin, he exerts influence on the scholars to make them purchase from him. Cases have occurred where teachers, in fear of the department, have told their pupils that they will fail at examinations if they use books bought from shopkeepers.

"Further, the department is liable to have a heavy stock of out-of-date books left on its hands unless great care is exercised; and this, it is stated, has occurred with one history reader to the tune of 5000 volumes.

DEPARTMENT CUTS PRICES.

"A point taken by booksellers is that the department retails books at less than published price. They point out, for instance, that Book 2 of Nelson's "Highroads to History"—the title of which is altered for the department to 'The Adelaide History Reader'—is issued by the publishers in London at 1s., whereas the department retails it for 10d. Book 3 is published at 1s. 3d. and sold by the department for 1s. Macmillan's 'Modern Dictionary,' London price 1s. 4d. net, which ordinarily would be retailed in Adelaide for 1s. 9d., is sold by the department for 1s. In addition, 5 per cent. discount is allowed to the teacher to cover his loss on supply of books to children whose parents do not furnish the money for them. (In practice, the teacher is often out of pocket.)

"'The Australian Reader,' No. 2, published by Macmillan at 10d., is retailed by the department under the title of the 'Adelaide Reader' for 8d. Competition by the booksellers is thus effectually stifled. We are not asking for a monopoly,' remarked one tradesman, 'merely for fair and open competition.' The booksellers are very sore over the matter, and are even boycotting a publisher who supplies books direct to the department. It is said that some publishers have refused to deal direct with the department.

"The Booksellers' Association intends shortly to have certain pertinent questions put to the Minister of Education concerning the working of the system and the keeping of accounts. The Liberal government now in power is professedly opposed to the slaughter of private enterprise by State monopoly—more especially when that monopoly involves, as it is alleged this one does, a loss to the State. The booksellers hold that the S. A. Department has found, as Mr. Carmichael would find, that the booksellers' profits cannot be saved without incurring the booksellers' expenses and perhaps their losses, and that the process causes dissatisfaction among the teachers."

EDITORIAL COMMENT ON THE SITUATION.

The Bookfellow, the organ of the Australian book trade, says:

"This interesting story brings Adelaide's discontent to a head. Let us 'clear our minds from cant' and look the facts in the face. There are four parties to the quarrel—the Minister for Education, the teachers, the publishers and the booksellers.

"In the first place, there is no doubt that free school books and materials are popular; they are regarded by many people as a natural corollary to the existing system of free education. Already, in several States, school materials and many school books in lower classes are given free, or the use of them is given free. The tendency is to extend the gift, at least as far as primary schools are concerned. The gift is good political bait for electors, and it is probably only a question of time till every Parliament accepts the principle—as far as primary classes and standard books are concerned.

"We need not discuss that; if we are right, booksellers must accept the fact, as in a considerable degree they have had to accept it already. If they cannot do the whole trade, they must be content to do a part—there is a considerable margin left above primary grades, and in books for private schools and for home use. This side of the question is not business, but politics. There will, of course, be a great wastage under a free system; a good thing for publishers.

FREE SCHOOL BOOKS PROBABLY COMING.

"We cannot even say that the gift will stop at books for use in schools; children want books to take home; and probably politicians will be found to offer them. That is a ground for booksellers' action, with some hope of success; on the simple argument of waste of public money, since things not paid for are not valued; and the parent who does not pay will not be careful to see that a book is not destroyed.

"When the 'free' policy extends, it may be stopped at 'free books in the schools'—where the teacher can take care of them; out of school, books to be paid for. That is the rule in New South Wales now, as far as the free system extends; but the free system always tends to make inroads upon it, since a teacher with free stock to spare will give a poor or pet pupil a book for home use, and other children will clamor for them, and the teacher will order more stock.

"South Australia has paused at the 'pay' system, with the government wholesaling stock and the teachers retailing it. The S. A. Education Department issues to its teachers an order form with 150 priced items, from copy books at 1s. per dozen, past woolwork cards at 1s. per gross, to handkerchief boxes at 1s. 6d. each—leaving us to wonder what part handkerchief boxes play in the S. A. scheme of State education.

"The 'pay' system, with government holding stock, is bad in a public view; it embodies a vicious principle. In our opinion—since we make no doubt that the Education Department, however mistaken, is trying to do its honest best—the error is bound to be found out and the system discarded. The permanent public choice is between free goods and booksellers' supply.

SCHOOL SHOPS BAD IN ANY CASE.

"The S. A. pay system is bad because a teachers' business is tuition, not traffic; and any system that turns him into a trafficker with the children under his charge injures teacher and children. Not only does it divert the teacher's attention from his proper duties; not only does it add to his labor and attack his energy and time—reducing his efficiency as teacher; not only does it involve him in a number of small financial transactions which—with a department at one end and an impecunious child at the other—are often irritating, and in the long run must be carried on at the teacher's loss.

"The S. A. pay system is bad because it tends to thwart the scheme of education in altering evilly the educational relation of the teacher to the child. It puts the teacher and child on a 'business' footing. It establishes often the relation of creditor and debtor; since a teacher who wishes his classes to proceed in harmony, often cannot refrain from trusting with a book the child who is 'going to bring the sixpence on Monday.' If the child fails, the teacher must dun. The traffic is incompatible with the full preservation of a teacher's right attitude to his children.

"Again, the vicissitudes of classes are numerous. Children leave a school unexpectedly. We have no doubt that many S. A. teachers, turned into booksellers, are suffering in a microscopic way the agonies of 'overstock.' They have miscalculated their requisition; and they must sell or suffer loss. We have no doubt that many S. A. child customers are suffering from the inconvenience of 'understock' and delay. Once bitten, teachers will be twice shy of loss; and the children will wait for a second primer which a careful teacher, who has had to guess at the number required, is 'ordering from Adelaide.' As teachers cannot afford to guess at new pupils, we have no doubt that the beginning of every term the teaching of some country schools is impeded while the goods for the new pupils are 'coming from Adelaide.'

PUBLISHERS HAVE NO CHOICE.

"We take leave to doubt that any publisher ever refused to 'deal direct with the department' if the order was big enough and the terms good enough. The alleged 'boycotting' is bad business; as soon as a bookseller refuses to take books on their merits for sale he is spoiling his own trade. The boycott knife has two edges, and one of them is turned to the boycotter. There are two things which a bookseller who knows his business never will do, other profitable things being equal—he will never try to sell unsaleable books, and he will never refuse to sell saleable books, no matter where they come from. The limits within which trade can be influenced are narrow, and it costs money to step over them.

"In S. A., the Minister is dictator. Any man with 50,000 customers behind him is a dictator. The publishers who supply him know that if they don't do it another will; all rules and regulations must be broken for 50,000 monopolized customers. If, by a stretch of imagination, we suppose that the Publishers' Association was able to make—and enforce—a rule for non-supply, that would only mean that the supply would be got outside the association.

"Except for special uses, there is not much educational difference in the merit of many competing school books. A Minister, determined to have his own way, could set his staff to make his own series of school books, print them himself in England or in Adelaide, and retail them to his pupils at any price he chose. With 50,000 children behind him, a Minister is virtually his own publisher; however, for convenience or profit, he employs others to do the work of publication. Publishers would prefer to deal with booksellers, but their hand is forced by a 50,000 customer—just as a bookseller's would be.

"The point for Adelaide pressure, as stated, is in the teachers—to break down the school-shop system. But when that system is abolished, it will do the booksellers no harm to be ready with a scale of fixed prices to put in its place."

PLANNING EVERY LAST ADV. FOR THE DEALER.

VICTOR TALKING MACHINE CO. FURNISHES COÖPERATION THAT LEAVES THE DEALER NO EXCUSE FOR INACTIVITY—HOW EVERY STEP OF LOCAL CONSUMER APPEAL IS PLANNED, AND HOW IT WORKS OUT.

WHAT the Victor Talking Machine Company really sells, says Ernest John, of the advertising department of the Victor Talking Machine Company, in a recent article in Printers' Ink, is the records of great operatic and concert voices of to-day; the talking machine itself is an incident, though an all-important one. Commercially speaking, the records are advertised by the reputation and performances of the singers. When these singers go out on concert tours, visiting the principal cities of the countries, it is the best possible advertising the records can get in those localities, and it is one of the important tasks of the advertising department to see that the local dealers take advantage of the fact and link up the big personal publicity to their own store by suitable local advertising. Our experience along these lines has now at length crystallized into a system. But first a word as to the experience.

A year and a half ago I went into New York for the Victor Talking Machine Company to conduct Victrola recitals in a special and somewhat ambitious manner, and I did it with some trepidation. I knew that New York had been the graveyard for so many good ideas that a potter's field for such defunct inspirations would of necessity approximate the size of Central Park or the Bronx.

I found my trepidation quite groundless, for, with the Metropolitan Opera House only a few blocks away, my audiences, while they were more critical, were also more appreciative than elsewhere. They knew Caruso's art, the personal peculiar timbre of his voice—the methods by which he produces certain effects—and so they could gauge Victor music at very nearly its full value.

The idea for us was to show as many people as possible that a Victor record, while it was truly enough a commercial product, nevertheless contained, as John Burroughs once pointed out, the soul of the singer.

I take it that my readers know well enough what an array of talent the Victor catalogue contains. Many of the most prominent artists of the day are on concert tour every year. Let us say, for example, that twenty-five of them are on tour this year.

That is our dealer's opportunity, and because it is a mutual opportunity we join forces with him. There are scores, indeed, hundreds of our dealers, who do not need to have their opportunities pointed out, who do not need to be urged to co-operate with us; but there are hundreds more who are perfectly willing to do so if they know just how to go about it. Because of this, we have taken the matter into our own hands.

We produced this year a definite system of advertising which is designed to identify the local Victor dealer with the visiting Victor artist.

Our system contained a number of advertisements, each one intended to convey one idea. That idea was in every case obvious and reasonable enough to carry conviction. The type in our ad was arranged so that the casual eye could scarcely pass it without deliberate effort.

A booklet was furnished to all our dealers in every city where Victor artists were scheduled to appear. This booklet contains proofs of all advertisements and advertising matter. Electrotypes and supporting advertising matter were furnished free by us. Because these booklets must be placed in the hands of both the quick and the dead, the cover did not bear a formal title, but an announcement which read as follows: "Victor advertising, which will help you to profit by the visit of Victor artists to your city this year."

On the first inside page was a description of the fundamental idea and a description of each piece of advertising matter. On the following pages was a list of Victor artists on tour, the cities they would visit, and the date of such visits. This was as complete as could be furnished at the time of going to press. It practically covered the season of 1912-1913, but our dealers were notified that further bookings would be announced in our house organ—The Voice of the Victor.

The first advertisement announced that, for instance, Mme. Gadski was coming. That, "for one night her glorious voice would be heard." That after that she would be gone, but that she might be "heard at any time by those who owned a Victrola."

The next shot in the campaign was not an advertisement, but a postcard mailed by our dealers to "desirable" citizens. Our reason for doing so is this—to simplify matters, let's confine ourselves to "Mr. A."—let us suppose that he reads, more or less consciously, the first advertisement. His interest is quite casual, and because of that fact, he would be likely to deliberately pass over a second advertisement if offered immediately, thinking that he already knew what was "doing"; so, instead, the dealer sends him a postal card inviting him to call and hear any of the Gadski records.

Next comes another advertisement backing up the postcard, to the effect that "in music we enjoy most what we know best," a statement which is obviously reasonable. That our dealer will be glad to play over any Gadski records, and that "Mr. A.'s" appreciation of the actual concert will be the greater for having heard the numbers previously.

Then comes another postcard, showing Gadski in costume, and bearing also the announcement that she makes records only for the Victor.

Then an advertisement: Gadski's own opinion of Victor records over her own signature, and the question, "Could anyone ask more?"

"Mr. A." is being pretty well bombarded.

On the way to business in the morning there is a street banner or window strip confronting him announcing the fact that while Gadski sings at such and such a theatre on such and such a date, she sings at our Victor dealers or in the home of the Victrola owner at any time.

On the night of the concert we double the space, dwelling on the tragic evanescence of musical performance, and our advertisement concludes with, "A Victor-Victrola costs only so much—just think what it gives."

A ribbon ad across four or five newspaper columns is published the day after the concert. It consists of an urgent invitation to compare her records with her voice, while the personal quality of her voice still lingers in the ears of her hearers.

The day after that a Gadski programme is mailed to a hundred or five thousand persons, depending on the size of the city. On the front page is written this, "You heard Mme. Gadski. Here is another programme. She will sing it for you whenever you wish."

We use writing on the front page instead of type, because on what is obviously a programme or a circular of some sort one expects to find printing, and when one finds writing one is the more curious—a fact which is not at all detrimental to the man who went to the expense of addressing and mailing it. The two inside pages contain a portrait of Mme. Gadski and a complete list of her records—on the fourth page there is a cut of the highest type of a Victrola.

Though this system has been in the hands of our dealers only a week or two, we have tripled the original order for electrotypes and other advertising matter, and there is every reason to believe a further order is about to be placed.

QUEBEC MODIFIES WOOD-PULP EMBARGO.

THE Quebec government has made an order in Council modifying the order made by it in April, 1910, by which it prohibited the exportation of pulp wood cut from Crown lands. The exact terms of the order modifying the terms of the original order have been kept from the public, although the order itself was made and signed on December 31. The order in Council made in 1910 provided that "All timber cut on Crown lands after May 1, 1910, must be manufactured in Canada."

This piece of summary legislation was followed last year by the only clause of the Canadian reciprocity bill which became operative, which provided for free entry to the United States of paper and pulp, "On the condition precedent that no export duty, export license fee or other export charge of any kind whatsoever (whether in the form of additional charge or license fee or otherwise), or any prohibition or restriction in any way of the exportation (whether by law or order regulation, or otherwise directly or indirectly), shall have been imposed upon such paper, board or wood pulp, or the wood used in the manufacture of such paper," etc.

As a result of the operation of this regulation, mills which became owners of freehold lands enjoyed the free entry to the United States markets, while the larger Canadian paper manufacturers found themselves in an inferior position where they were compelled to pay the full duty on their product of paper and pulp.

The recent order made by the Quebec government removes the restriction relating to the export of pulp wood from certain areas of the larger Canadian paper manufacturers, and it is now up to them to convince the United States Treasury that the exceptions made in their favor really constitute a removal of restrictions of the export of pulp wood, such as will entitle them to free entry of their manufactured product to the United States market. The order does not open the great Crown lands areas of Quebec to the privileges of free exportation, and to quote the language of the Quebec Chronicle, of December 31, "It remains to be seen if the astute Uncle Sam is likely to be flimflammed by any such transparent device."

LITERATURE IN THE UNIVERSITY.

A HALF-HEARTED defense of the arid doctoral dissertation in literature is offered in the Columbia University Quarterly for December by Prof. Calvin Thomas. It is true, he grants, that some of these literary studies prepared by candidates for the Ph.D. degree are a little trying in their unreadableness and lack of horizon: "Taken by and large, however, these products of the academic mill—I have had occasion to read a pretty large number of them—are now rather creditable. A hundred of them chosen at random will average up very well with a hundred specimens of any genre that swells the book market. Why should the austere reviewers who delight to fall foul of the doctoral dissertation as such expect more of the tyro in research than of the hardened sinners in fiction and drama?" The answer to this should be easy, and Prof. Thomas's excellent little paper, in which he sets forth true ideals of literary study, supplies the material for it.

The reason why the doctoral dissertations in literature arouse protest outside of academic circles, says the Springfield Republican, is that they convey the impression that the universities are maltreating literature. They indicate either that the unliterary can best win academic advancement, or that the potentially literary are being spoiled by premature specialization and false ideals. Prof. Thomas himself notes and regrets this divorce between literature and scholarship:

"I am of the opinion that there is room for much improvement in the conditions which surround what may be called the professional study of letters in the United States. Judging by all analogies one would expect that the work of the universities would aim at the training of authors—persons who at least dream of producing literature for the general public. But it is not so. We have taken over the German degree of Ph.D. and the German method of securing it. In Germany, however, the degree signifies, if taken in the field of letters, that its holder has won his spurs as a contributor to Literaturwissenschaft—a branch of science created by and for specialists and quite alien, for the most part, to the literary interests of the general public."

Alien, for that matter, to the literary interests of the cultivated public or of any public. The services of German scholarship to literature have been immense—they can hardly be overstated. From the humble but necessary task of the restoration of mutilated texts to the systematic development of criticism and literary history its contributions have been of remarkable bulk, range and value. But from the very thoroughness and perfection of German discipline arises the greater danger from unintelligent imitation. So far as training for literature goes, German universities are as badly off as our own—worse, if anything, Prof. Thomas thinks, and it is in his field: "Like our own, their authors come up by dint of native talent aided by a general education, or else they evolve out of scholars teachers, journalists, doctors, lawyers, etc." But the difference is that while in Germany those who go in for literary research plunge deep and come back with something, little is apt to come of the niggling investigation of some trivial and quite useless point to which our budding doctors of philosophy give the precious years when they ought to be acquiring some tincture of letters.

With no literary horizon, no sense of style, no cultivated gift with the pen, the industrious young man is set to three years of highly specialized study. Not for him the zest of freely ranging among the great books; as Prof. Thomas says, "How can one afford to browse when there are academic honors to be won, a doctor's dissertation to be written?" Then comes the crown of his academic career, the doctoral dissertation. With the help of his professor he finds some author so obscure and unimportant that no doctor before him has been tempted to write a dissertation about him. If there is a "problem" as to whether

John Doe was or was not indebted to Riccardo Roe, all the better; some day a Ph.D. will be telling our grandchildren whether the author of "Graustark" had read "The Prisoner of Zenda." The problem once set, the candidate is at once deeply immersed in details, and when his notes will fill several waste baskets he is ready to compile, in arid doctoral English, innocent of any compromising suggestion of a style, an essay which is in a sense a contribution to knowledge—whether the contribution was worth while is a wholly irrelevant consideration which only the unacademic are heartless enough to raise. Having thus qualified as a literary expert he sets out to teach the young, and the chances are that his creative activity stops there. However it may be in Germany, in the United States there is little incentive to a life of strenuous literary investigation. Thus of the three professions, teaching, letters and scholarship, only the last is well served, and it is the one of which America can make the least use.

What, then, might the university do for literature? We may at once dismiss the idea that it should be or can be a school of creative literary art. It is not the business of the university to train poets or novelists or short story writers. Genius makes its own way, and it flourishes better out of doors than in the hothouse. But the university might and should create an atmosphere more favorable to literary culture than can be achieved by undue concentration upon Literaturwissenschaft. If it cannot produce a Dr. Johnson or Coleridge or a Taine, it can offer courses which would attract and interest a potential great man of letters. It can find a way to enlist talent and genius as well as docility and industry. Genuine research, the voluntary doing of a thing that needs to be done, ought to be better rewarded than now; and spurious research, the mere faithful execution of a useless task, ought not to be rewarded at all.

There is no reason why a well-equipped university should not do equally well by all three classes mentioned by Prof. Thomas. To the specialist in literary origins or in textual criticism it can offer unlimited opportunities for research. To the born teacher it can offer sound linguistic drill, thorough historical courses, and a wide knowledge of books from which to draw inspiration and by which to fix his tastes. To the potential man of letters it can give access to books, leisure for "browsing," discipline to check a desultory habit, stimulus and guidance. How these three dissimilar kinds of work are to be marked and revealed is the affair of the university, but till they are all adequately provided for the unfortunate divorce between scholarship and letters of which Prof. Thomas speaks is likely to continue.

SUIT OVER GUARANTEED CIRCULATION.

The Cream of Wheat Company has secured a judgment against the Pearson Publishing Company, in the Supreme Court, New York County, for $3362.41, being the amount of rebate due the Cream of Wheat Company for shortages in the circulation of Pearson's Magazine from September, 1908, to December, 1911. On November 15, execution was issued on the judgment for a net sum of $2214.91, the Cream of Wheat Company having withheld payment of $1147.50 which would have been due the Pearson Publishing Company if the circulation specified in the last advertising contract between the parties had been actually secured. There were three actions brought by the Cream of Wheat Company against Pearson's Magazine growing out of advertising contracts which specified pro rata rebates if the circulation fell below a certain amount. The first contract was made in August, 1908, for a page per issue from September, 1908, to December, 1909. Payment was to be made at the rate of $172.12 per page (less five per cent. discount for payment within ten days), provided the guaranteed circulation of 200,000 copies per issue was maintained. The second contract was made in June, 1909, for a page an issue from January, 1910, to December, 1910, at the rate of $191.25 per page, less five per cent. in ten days, if a circulation of 223,000 copies per issue was maintained. The third contract was dated August 4, 1910, for a page an issue from January, 1911, to December, 1911, at a similar rate for a similar circulation. Each of these three contracts called for a pro rata rebate in case the guaranteed circulation was not secured, and the Cream of Wheat Company was expressly authorized in the contract to make circulation audits of Pearson's Magazine whenever it felt that such action was necessary. An audit made by the Association of American Advertisers in December, 1909, showed that during the period of the first contract, the circulation of Pearson's Magazine, instead of the guaranteed 200,000 copies per issue, was 104,733, and a rebate of $1311.79 was demanded. An audit by Searle & Nicholson, certified accountants, after the termination of the period covered by the second contract, showed that the circulation, instead of 223,000, was only 112,066 copies per issue.

THE "BOOKMAN" IN 1913.

The Bookman, as usual, offers a feast of good things literary for the new year. The first of several series of special articles deals with "The Grub Street Problem—The Daily Life of a Man of Letters in Many Periods." In this series will be five papers as follows:

I. "In Shakespeare's Time."
II. "In Johnson's Time."
III. "When Dickens Wrote 'Pickwick.'"
IV. "When Balzac Faced His Debts."
V. "When Poe Lived in Fordham."

Everybody is more or less interested in the cost of living, which was a problem which confronted Oliver Goldsmith in the London of 1750, and Edgar Allan Poe in the New York of 1840, just as it confronts the literary worker of to-day. There is the story of Dr. Johnson dining behind a screen in the tavern while the literary bigwigs were being regaled in the main hall. What the shabby Samuel had to pay for that furtive meal, what his landlord exacted for the humble lodgings in the neighboring street, what were the expenses of the occasional journey to Brighton or Bath—these questions will outline in a general way the scope of these projected papers.

In the numbers of the spring and early summer will appear a series of articles under the general title of "The Literary Baedeker." These will be designed to show how the American of literary tastes, travelling in Europe, can best find the landmarks of great fiction. There have been rambling books written on such subjects as "The London of Dickens," "The London of Thackeray," and "The Scott Country," but these have been designed for library use, and are of little practical value to the hurried traveller, who, with ten days or so in London for example, might wish to devote two or three of these days to visiting the scenes of his favorite books, such as the house in Curzon Street where Mr. and Mrs. Rawdon Crawley lived on nothing a year, or the corner of Southwark, where there still remain slight vestiges of the Marshalsea Prison of "Little Dorrit." A series which was announced for 1912, but which had to be held over is "Great Publishing Enterprises," which will tell of: I. "The Making of an Atlas;" II. "The Making of a City Directory;" III. "The Making of an Encyclopedia." Under the general title of "Confidential Communications," Mr. John Kendrick Bangs is to contribute a series of whimsical literary letters. The first of these is addressed "To a Best Seller in Need of Replenishment of Ideas"; the second is "A Plea for a Literary Show," and the third gives advice "To a Young Man Whose Novel Has Not Sold Well." Further papers in the series, "Best Sellers of Yesterday," will deal with "The Breadwinners," "Tempest and Sunshine," "The Lamplighter," "The Wide, Wide World" and "Reveries of a Bachelor." Few persons know how many books have figured in Court, in connection with points of copyright laws—for instance, "Uncle Tom's Cabin," "Ben Hur," "Trilby," "The Wandering Jew," "Lady Audley's Secret," "The Little Minister" and "Peg Woffington." This subject, under the title, "Famous Books in Copyright Suits," will be the first of a two-part series—"Literature and the Law." A second paper will deal with "Famous Authors on the Witness Stand."

A SUCCESSFUL BOOKSTORE.

THE story of a Canadian bookstore that grew from total assets of $50, twelve years ago, to a present stock of $17,000, is told in a recent issue of the Canadian Bookseller and Stationer, and however one interprets it, it is not without inspiration.

The business is that of the W. H. Baldwin Company, Ltd., in West Toronto. The room in which this retail business had its inception twelve years ago was about ten by twelve feet. From there, Mr. Baldwin moved into a store renting at $25 a month; then to the present site at 1694 Dundas Street. On the day before Christmas, last year, 3800 customers were waited upon in the Baldwin store, as an indication of the extent of business done. It is a considerable contrast to the receipts of the first day's business a dozen years ago. When Mr. Baldwin counted up the cash on that memorable day the total was twenty-seven cents, and the aggregate takings for the first week amounted to $1.27! The receipts of the single big day of Christmas trade last year exceeded the total sales of the first year's business. Mr. Baldwin pays special attention to the news trade, and sells every week about 3000 copies of British periodicals alone. He does no subscription business whatever.

Besides books and stationery, we are told that the stock now carried includes fancy goods and china, leather goods, trunks and valises, wall paper, cameras and photographic requisites, a year-round toy department, jewelry specialties, novelties, dolls, sporting goods, phonographs and records and the company's news and magazine trade; and one cannot help wondering what proportion the profits of these departments bear to the profits of the book department.

EXPRESS-POSTAL MATTERS.

CONGRESSMAN WEEKS introduced, last week, a bill providing for the reduction of postage rates on first-class mail matter.

BILL TO INCLUDE THIRD-CLASS.

REPRESENTATIVE TOURNER introduced, last week, two bills (H. R. 27487-8), each providing for the inclusion of third-class (printed) matter in the parcels post. They were referred to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

EXPRESS RATES WON'T BE CUT.

OFFICERS of the Wells Fargo Express Company said that the report from San Francisco that the company was preparing to fight the parcel post through rate-cutting was without foundation. The Wells Fargo Company has no such intention, it was said, and is contemplating no reduction of rates.

It was pointed out that its attitude is best evidenced in the instructions to employees to be sent out. This circular says:

"The parcel post becomes a competitor not only of the company, but of every man in its service. Hence the newcomer, as an important factor in small parcel transportation, is neither to be belittled nor overestimated, but calls for renewed efforts on the part of Wells Fargo men to maintain the company's standard of service as the basis of public favor and patronage."

The Adams Express Company has issued a circular to its employees along similar lines. The heads of the Adams and the American

Digitized by Google

Express companies said that their companies had no intention of reducing rates to meet the parcel post.

PARCEL POST FOR CANADA.

Postmaster-General Pelletier, after having sent several officials of the department to the United States to observe the workings of the parcel post, has prepared a zone map for Canada, dividing the country into five zones, and is about ready to promulgate an order establishing a parcel post system for Canada.

The country is divided into five zones, consisting of the maritime provinces, Quebec, Ontario, the Prairie Provinces and British Columbia. Local zones are also established; rates have not been finally decided, but will probably be the same as in the United States.

The Postmaster-General has power, under the postal service law, to establish and put into effect a parcel post system without legislation; but the advisability of submitting the whole question to Parliament for its approval after the holiday recess is being considered by the Cabinet, and as the subject is regarded as of the highest importance, it is likely that Parliament will be asked for its approval of the project. The express companies are expected to make a vigorous protest against the scheme. The express companies are controlled and owned by the Canadian railways. A complete revision of express rates from United States points to Canadian points is expected to be put into effect immediately as a result of the necessarily lower rates on small parcels resulting from the establishment of the parcel post in the United States.

TRADE ASSOCIATIONS.

BOOKSELLERS' LEAGUE.

The January dinner of the Booksellers' League will be held at the Hotel Brevoort, Fifth Avenue and Eighth Street, Wednesday evening next, January 15, at 6.30 o'clock..

It will be a Philadelphia night. The speakers will be Dr. John Bach McMaster, author of "A History of the People of the United States"; Dr. Ellis Paxson Oberholtzer, editor of American Crisis Biographies, and Thomas A. Daly, author of "Madrigali."

Members are urged to be as prompt as possible in arriving, and to notify the treasurer, Charles A. Burkhardt, 31 West 23d Street, by January 13, if they intend to be present.

The membership of the League is still growing, and growing fast. At the last meeting, the following new members were received into fellowship: O. Buechner, Lemcke & Buechner; Albert Boni, C. F. Heartman; John C. Champion, B. W. Huebsch; C. W. Culman, Harper & Bros.; Edward D. Crane, Grosset & Dunlap; W. M. Davis, Kingston, N. Y.; L. Howard-Smith, John C. Winston Co.; E. M. Leaven, John C. Winston Co.; Louis M. Levy, Hurst & Co.; James A. Meikel, Presbyterian Board; George E. Nevins, Tabard Inn Book Co.; Friedrich Pietsch, Brentano's; F. D. Rich, Barse & Hopkins; Ernst Richers, John Lane Co.; H. F. Savage, F. A. Stokes Co.; Edgar D. Schlamm, Syndicate Trading Co.; Henry F. Schwarz, F. A. O. Schwarz; Sigmond G. Sparth, Dorothy Priestman; Leroy J. Weed, Ginn & Co.; H. Wolff, H. Wolff; Charles O. Zimmerman, Baker & Taylor Co.

The following resolution was presented at the November meeting of the League by Mr. Pratt, and adopted:

"Resolved, That the grateful thanks of the Booksellers' League of New York be accorded to Mr. H. W. Wilson primarily, to Miss Potter, Miss Emma and Louisa Teich, and Miss Tannehill, to the printer, binder, and all concerned, for their patient labor, concentration and unremitting efforts in bringing forth that remarkable and monumental work, the acme of all bibliography—the 'United States Catalogue' of 1912."

OBITUARY NOTES.

Charles Carroll Soule, long identified with the book publishing business and interested in library work, died, January 7, in his home in Brookline, Mass, aged 70. Mr. Soule was born in Boston, June 25, 1842, was educated at the Boston Latin School, and graduated from Harvard in 1862. With the formation of the Forty-fourth Massachusetts Regiment, he joined it as a private in October. Three weeks after he was commissioned lieutenant in Company B. When the term of service expired, he joined the Fifty-fifth Massachusetts as captain of Company K, remaining with it through the war.

In May, 1866, he became a clerk with Little, Brown & Co., in Boston. In October, 1869, he went West, and became the senior partner in a new firm of Soule, Thomas & Winsor, law and general booksellers in St. Louis. This firm later became Soule, Thomas & Wentworth, but in May, 1878, Mr. Soule accepted an offier of partnership in Little, Brown & Co., sold out his interest in the St. Louis firm and came back to Boston. He was with Little, Brown & Co. until May, 1881. At that time he formed a partnership with James A. Bugbee, of Boston, under the name of Soule & Bugbee, doing a law book business in Boston. Mr. Bugbee retired from the firm October 1, 1884, and the business was then carried on by Mr. Soule alone, first at 37 Court Street, then at 26 Pemberton Square, which location Mr. Soule always considered a temporary one, all the time looking for larger quarters for his increasing stock and growing business, and yet near enough the Court House to be within the reach of lawyers. In 1886 he secured Freeman Place Chapel, on Beacon Hill, with an entrance off Beacon Street, opposite the Boston Athenæum, this chapel having been built in 1848 for James Freeman Clark's Society, and having been passed through various hands up to the time Mr. Soule secured it for a law book store.

In 1889, Mr. Soule incorporated the business under the name of the Boston Book Co., becoming its first president and its only president up to the time of his death. At the time of incorporation, a library department was added to the law book store, specializing in back files of periodicals for libraries. This was a direct result of a need for such material that Mr. Soule had felt, probably through his connection with the Brookline Public Library as trustee. Freeman Place Chapel became too small for the business, and in the fall of 1901 removal was made to its present location, 83-91 Francis Street, Fenway, about twenty minutes' ride by trolley from the City Hall. In connection with this removal, a downtown office was taken on Pemberton Square, where new publications and law books interesting to lawyers could be displayed and sold. Mr. Soule had always been much interested in library work, and was probably as well known in the American Library Association as any librarian.

Mr. Soule was the author of "The Lawyer's Reference Manual of Law Books and Citations," 1883; "Library Rooms and Buildings," 1902, and "Year Book Bibliography," 1901. He has been an adviser on library planning since 1908. He is survived by his wife and three children, one of whom is Lieut. C. C. Soule, Jr., U. S. N.

HARRY PEYTON STEGER, a member of the literary staff of Doubleday, Page & Company, died on Sunday in the Polyclinic Hospital, New York City. Acute kidney disease was the cause of death. He was taken first to Bellevue Hospital. On January 3 he insisted on leaving the hospital and did so against the advice of the surgeons and without signing the customary release. After he left Bellevue, Mr. Steger went to the apartment of a friend in the Hotel Caledonia, 28 West 26th Street, where he collapsed shortly after his arrival, and was removed from there to the Polyclinic Hospital.

Mr. Steger was born in Moscow, Tenn., in 1876. After attending public schools there he entered the University of Texas. Following his graduation, he attended Oxford as a Rhodes scholar and later studied in Germany for about a year. He then entered the newspaper field, and was employed by The Daily Mail and other dailies in London. He returned to this country about five years ago, and since then had been associated with Doubleday, Page & Company as literary adviser and editor of Short Stories. He was the literary executor of "O. Henry," and had just completed the compilation of the latter's works. His book, "Up From College," was published last year.

His parents and a sister, who live in Texas, his wife and a five-year-old stepson survive him. Mrs. Steger is in Paris. She went abroad for her health last November with Margaret Porter, daughter of Sidney Porter ("O. Henry"). Mrs. Steger will sail for home on the Kaiser Wilhelm. Mr. Steger was a member of the Friars and Lambs clubs. His home was at Freeport, L. I.

As we go to press, word comes of the death, Thursday afternoon, of James W. McIntyre, the managing partner of Little, Brown & Co., of pneumonia, after a brief illness. Fuller notice will be given next week.

PERSONAL NOTE.

JOHN O'HARA COSGRAVE and Mrs. Jessica Garretson Finch were married last week at the bride's country home at Bellehaven, Conn. Mr. Cosgrave was the managing editor of Everybody's, and is now editing the magazine of the Sunday World. Mrs. Finch is the founder and head of the Finch School of New York, and is well known in educational and suffrage circles. She was president of the Equal Franchise Society last year.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

McBRIDE, NAST & Co. are issuing a neat monthly pamphlet house organ, which they call The Quill.

SCHULTE'S bookstore, 132 East 23d Street, New York, are advertising special January clearance sales in both their old and new book departments.

EIGHT novels in ten years is the record of Ridgwell Cullum, whose "The Night Riders," said to be his best work, is to be published February 1 by George W. Jacobs & Co.

"MY LITTLE SISTER," a remarkable story by Elizabeth Robins, which recently appeared serially in McClure's Magazine, will be published in book form, January 18, by Dodd, Mead & Co.

"FOUNDERS OF OUR COUNTRY," by Fanny E. Coe, just published by the American Book Company, is at once a history reader, a language book and a source book for moral training.

PARCELS POST information is given completely and concisely in "Ogilvie's Parcel Post Hand Book," published at 15 cents by the J. S. Ogilvie Publishing Co. Maps, rules and regulations are all included.

THE writing of best-sellers being a fixed habit with Harold Bindloss, he has prepared for his ever-eager public another story of love and adventure, "Ranching for Sylvia," which Frederick A. Stokes Co. have just published.

FLORENCE IRWIN, author of "The Fine Points of Auction Bridge," has written a new handbook on the game, which the Putnams publish. "The Development of Auction Bridge Under the New Count" is a clear exposition of the recent changes in bridge playing.

IN "The Story of Panama," by Frank A. Gause and Charles Carl Carr (Silver, Burdett & Co.), the authors give accounts of the early days of Panama, gleaned from old records, as well as a full description of the successful operation whereby the continents were cut in two.

"The Love-Seeker; A Sentimental Handbook," is to be published in the early spring by Sturgis & Walton Company. The author is Maud Churton Braby, whose "Modern Marriage, and How to Bear It" attracted much attention and favorable comment a year or so ago.

Frederick Warne & Company announce that hereafter the twelve volumes of their Peter Rabbit Series, and number one of the new series, The Tale of Mr. Tod, together with "The Pie and the Pattypan" and "Ginger and Pickles," are made strictly net retail 50 cents per volume.

"The New Hostess of To-day" (Scribners), by Linda Hull Larned, a complete exposition of the arts of cooking and serving, is based upon Mrs. Larned's "Hostess of To-Day." There was a great deal that Mrs. Larned felt ought to be put into a book of that standard character, and in this technically new edition, but actually new volume, she has put it in.

The Hospital Book and Newspaper Society, which provides books and magazines for hospitals and missions throughout the country, has sent out an appeal for more reading matter with which to carry on its work. Foreign books and papers are in particular demand. Gifts of reading matter should be sent to the United Charities Building, 105 East 22d Street, (Room 417.)

Dana Estes & Company will publish, on or about January 20, "Miss Jimmy," by Laura E. Richards. This is another story of New England life, and is a combination of Mrs. Tree, Mary Sands and other well-known characters. Mrs. Richards has no equal in portraying the shrewd and kindly characteristics of the Down-East Yankee, and in Miss Jimmy she has fully maintained her well-known ability.

The print paper manufacturers of the United States carry nearly 100,000 tons of newsprint paper, of which the supply at the mill averages 40,000 tons, or nine days' supply for all newspapers of the country; six days' supply in transit, equalling 27,000; seven days' supply in places of consumption, equalling 31,500 tons; total, 98,500. This total of approximately 100,000 tons of paper represents a selling value of about $3,500,000.

Louis Joseph Vance, the rapid-fire novelist who wrote "The Brass Bowl," "The Bandbox," etc., has temporarily forsaken England, where he has been hibernating this winter, for Paris, where he finds more sunshine and congenial atmosphere. Mr. Vance's next novel will be published in February. It will not have a "B" title, but will be called "The Day of Days." The entire action takes place in New York within a period of twelve hours.

Both sides of the Balkan war are presented in an astonishingly prompt volume, to be published immediately by Small, Maynard & Co. The joint authors of "The Balkan War: Being Adventures with Cross and Crescent," are Philip Gibbs, author of "The Street of Adventure," etc., special correspondent of the London Graphic with the Bulgarian army, and Bernard Grant, special correspondent of the London Daily Mirror, with the Turkish army.

"The Eternal Maiden," by T. Everett Harré, announced for early publication by Mitchell Kennerley, elicited, on its serial appearance in The Forum, expressions of praise from many well-known people, among others, Mrs. Florence L. Barclay, Miss Mary Garden, Richard Le Gallienne, Mrs. Wilson Woodrow, Reginald Wright Kauffman, Mrs. Amelia E. Barr, Anthony Hope and G. K. Chesterton. "The Eternal Maiden," the publisher announces, is an absolutely original story, and invades a field entirely new to romance.

Peculiar interest attaches to "Tradition," the title play in the new volume of one-act plays by George Middleton, author of "Embers." Though dealing with a phase of the woman question, but not strictly concerned with woman suffrage, it will be produced at the Berkeley Lyceum, New York, January 24, by the Woman Suffrage Party. The author's wife, Fola La Follette, for whom the play was written, will create the leading part. Henry Holt & Co. will publish the book in February.

The author of "A Vagabond Journey Around the World," Harry A. Franck, mailed from Quito, December 31, the complete manuscript of his new book, "Zone Policeman 88," which the Century Co. will publish as soon as it can be put through the press. The new book deals with Franck's experiences as plainclothes policeman and census taker during five months in Panama before he started on his long tramp through the wilds of South America.

"The Ghost Girl" is to appear on January 24, the apparition being accompanied by "General Mallock's Shadow." Henry Kitchell Webster, author of "The Whispering Man," is responsible for the invocation of the intangible lady, and W. D. Maxwell, author of "In Cotton Wool," has called forth the military shade. Other Appleton publications promised for the same date are "Adnam's Orchard," a New England story, by Sarah Grand, author of "The Heavenly Twins," and "Everbreeze," by Sarah P. McL. Greene, whose "Cape Cod Folks" created something of a stir.

A Houghton Mifflin volume on Pan-Germanism, is announced for publication in February. The author, Professor Roland G. Usher, has already attracted public attention by recent searching articles on the subject in the Atlantic Monthly. His new book gives a detailed account and discussion of the great movement of Pan-Germanism, the actual effects of the war in the Balkans upon the balance of power in Europe, the relation of the United States to these new conditions in European diplomacy, and, finally, the close connection between the European imbroglio and the new nationalism that is appearing in the Orient.

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY are bringing out a goodly collection of novels by well-known authors—Robert Herrick's "One Woman's Life"; S. R. Crockett's "Patsy," a romance of Galloway; "Comrade Yetta," a story of social agitators, by Albert Edwards, author of "A Man's World"; "Poor Dear Margaret Kirby," a collection of stories by Kathleen Norris, author of "Mother"; "The Crock of Gold," an unusual book by James Stephens; "The Impeachment of President Israels," a story laid in the future, by Frank B. Copley; "The Feet of the Furtive," in which Charles G. D. Roberts tells the life story of the wild animals; and a New England story, by Alice Brown, "Vanishing Point."

IN its issue for December 18, the London Daily Mail was able to report a "record year" for English publishing houses. Mills & Boon say they have done very good business throughout the year, and their Christmas prospects are excellent. Cassell say they are certainly sharing in the "boom." Fisher Unwin takes off his hat to the "boom in trade." Hodder & Stoughton are able to report "an absolutely record year." Methuen's expectations have been "greatly exceeded." Mr. Nash says his novel sales are down a little, but his memoirs and historical works are "booming." Messrs. Hutchinson are so busy that they found it difficult to find time to give any figures. The Amalgamated Press has all its publications out of print, and is paying another forty per cent. dividend.

SAMUEL G. BLYTHE'S experiences as a newspaperman began when, at the age of eighteen, he sent the report of a murder trial at the little county seat where he was born to a newspaper of the nearest city. Although the editor cut out a column or so of the very best part, he left enough in to insure the aspiring journalist the sum of eight dollars—which clinched him for the newspaper business. The story of his subsequent career is told in "The Making of a Newspaper Man," just published by Henry Altemus Co. As editor of the Buffalo Express, Buffalo Courier and Enquirer, Cosmopolitan Magazine, Washington correspondent of the New York World and staff writer of the Saturday Evening Post, Mr. Blythe has acquired a pretty good understanding of the business which he believes offers better opportunity for working for the public good than any other business or profession a young man can choose.

THE GEORGE H. DORAN COMPANY is planning to enter the reprint field by issuing, about February 1, a new series of popular works, to be called the Fifty-Cent Fiction Library. The books now in preparation are: "Hugo," by Arnold Bennett; "The Grand Babylon Hotel," by Arnold Bennett; "Buried Alive," by Arnold Bennett; "Spanish Gold," by G. A. Birmingham; "The Heart of a Woman," by Baroness Orczy; "The Cage," by Harold Begbie; "Leila," by Antonio Fogazzaro; "Out of the Night," by Mrs. Baillie-Reynolds; "The Other Side," by Horace Annesley Vachell; "The Faithful Failure," by Rosamond Napier; "The Lonely Queen," by H. C. Bailey; "The Lone Adventure," by Halliwell Sutcliffe; "The High Calling," by Charles M. Sheldon; "Duncan Polite," by Marion Keith; "Treasure Valley," by Marion Keith; "The Frontiersman," by H. A. Cody. These novels have all had big sales in the regular editions.

COMPLAINTS of publishers' lack of enterprise and obtuseness to unheralded genius are as common in England as they are here, or more so, and as unfounded. Some weeks ago a Miss Kathleen O'Brian wrote to the editor of T. P.'s Weekly about a novel she had read in manuscript, entitled "The Marriage Contract," "which," in her opinion, "far surpasses H. G. Wells' book, 'Marriage,'" and which no publisher would accept for publication. Herbert Jenkins, newest of English publishers, challenged Miss O'Brian's absurd statement that publishers would not issue the works of new writers, and instanced his own list. He offered, if Miss O'Brian would send him the manuscript to which she referred, to submit it to three well-known publishers' "readers," adding, "If Miss O'Brian wishes it, I will read this story and express an opinion upon it myself, as I have no desire to hide behind the opinions of my literary advisers." Mr. Jenkins stipulates that the readers' reports, together with all the correspondence, shall be at the disposal of the editor of T. P.'s Weekly to publish if he thinks fit. The challenge has been accepted by Miss O'Brian on behalf of the author of the manuscript. There the matter at present rests, with Mr. Jenkins and his three readers sitting in solemn judgment upon this alleged masterpiece. In the meantime, we are informed, Mr. Jenkins is receiving manuscripts and letters of congratulation by every other post, showing that Mr. Jenkins is not unaware of the advertising value of his challenge.

PICK-UPS.

ENGLISH MUSIC HALL SONG.

A BABY and a box of pills,
A puppy and a rat,
A roly-poly pudding and an old Tom Cat,
A pound of tallow candles,
And a round of buttered toast,
All came to me this morning in the parcel post.

A LONG LANE.

THEY were telling stories of the late Andrew Lang in one of the clubs the other night. One man told of a dinner invitation given by Lang. He was staying in Marlowe's Road, Earl's Court, a street away at the end of that long Cromwell Road, which seems to go on forever. The guest was not very sure how to get there, so Lang explained:

"Walk right along Cromwell Road," he said, "till you drop dead, and my house is just opposite!"—Answers.

A WET AD.

IF we are to believe the Novelty News, a brand-new form of advertising recently made its appearance in Paris. It is a by-product of the stringent police decree prohibiting the dropping of handbills in the streets. This ordinance has hampered the business of handbill distribution very seriously, and advertisers are on the alert to discover other means of bringing themselves and their wares before the pedestrian audience of the boulevards.

The latest device to which we have referred consists of specially constructed shoes, with immense soles of india rubber. There is, of course, a man inside them to keep them on the move. By an ingenious contrivance, the rubber soles form a pad which is continually kept damp by water contained in a can on the man's back, and flowing to his feet through pipes concealed beneath his clothes.

Thus at every step an advertisement is imprinted in wetness on the pavement. It lasts for quite sufficient time to enable quite a large number of people to peruse it.

Bland, J: Otway Percy. Recent events and present policies in China. Phil., Lippincott. '12. 11+491 p. pls. fold. map, O. $4 n.

By joint author with E. Backhouse of "China under the Empress Dowager." Portion of present volume was made up of articles contributed to British periodicals. He draws comparisons between China and Young Turkey, showing that the former is quite as unfit for constitutional government as the latter was. The fundamental problem is an economic one, over-population as a creed, and accompanying struggle for bread on a level of chronic starvation. Better government, and the application of modern economic methods might alleviate this condition, but the problem would be aggravated, as well, by numbers further multiplied by a decreasing death rate. "The Chinese revolution has grown out of the accidental success of an insignificant local rebellion. Destitute of constructive genius, without authoritative leaders or permanent elements of cohesion, the Republic has been suddenly conferred upon a people that neither want nor understands representative government." Not progress, but disorganization and disruption, seems to be the immediate future of China, in the author's opinion. Index.

Novel based on the question of whether marriage is or should be an absolutely irrevocable step. Two diametrically opposing temperaments, constantly in conflict, form the chief interest, the man brilliant, the woman Puritanical, growing farther apart each year. The man meets his Héloïse, thinks she is all that is beautiful and fine, but is sadly disillusioned, and is saved from despair by the love of a sweet girl.

Nam family is descended from a roving Dutchman who in 1760 wandered to the mountains of western Massachusetts from the Hudson Valley, and married an Indian princess. In old histories they are spoken of as "vagabonds, half farmers, half fishermen and hunters, and who, on their occasional visit to the settlements, were apt to fall into temptation and rum." The study here presented shows how these characteristics, alcoholism and lack of ambition may be traced through the descendants right down to the present.

Geerligs, H. C. Prinsen. The world's cane sugar industry, past and present. N. Y., Van Nostrand, '12. 16+399 p. tabs., fold. maps, Q. $5 n.

New epoch for the sugar cane industry has begun. For a while it seemed probable that it was dying out, but many causes have united to revivify it, the most conspicuous being the Brussels convention, the conquest of Formosa by the Japanese, tariff privileges granted by United States to the former Spanish colonies, and the great advance in the science of sugar cane growing and cane sugar manufacture—all occurrences of the past twenty years. Author, who was formerly director of the Sugar Experiment Station, Pekalongan, Java, gives a survey of the past, present, and probable future of the industry all over the world. Index.

Author considers the result of the Anglo-Japanese Alliance from the standpoint of America, Canada and Australia, and also the possibilities of China. In preface he says that it must not be imagined that the political situation in the Far East is made up, as has been the case in the past, solely of developments on the continent of Asia. "Japan's attainment to naval supremacy in the Pacific," he says, "has been watched with deep anxiety not only in America but also in Canada and Australasia. The aspirations of the Anglo-Saxon race in this region are opposed to the foreign policy of Great Britain as directed from Downing Street. Because of mutual interests the sympathy of our Colonies frankly leans towards America. Bearing these facts in mind it should be taken into account that the completion of the Panama Canal will enable America to rival Japan's sea-power in eastern waters, and will bring European navies appreciably nearer to the Pacific. By English journalist and publicist. Index.

Parker, S: Chester. A textbook in the history of modern elementary education; with emphasis on school practice in relation to social conditions. Bost., Ginn. c. '12. 24+505 p. D. $1.50.

Continuous, connected narrative of institutional development. Designed to give the educational student an insight, based upon historical understanding, into the problems of the elementary school. Period covered extends from the first city elementary vernacular schools of the Middle Ages down to the present time. Emphasis is laid on a relatively few movements, institutions and individuals, selected as typical, and these are given such concrete treatment as to help the student to appreciate the reality of the historical development. Changes in educational theory are traced in connection with social changes, and developments in actual school practice are correlated with both. Index.

Second part of a work in two volumes covering European history from the earliest period. First volume (in preparation) will present the history of western Europe from the prehistoric age to the opening of the eighteenth century. English history will be proportionately treated. With these two volumes in hand the teacher can cover ancient, modern and English history reasonably well in two years, leaving the third year for American history. The two volumes of "Outlines of European history" are based on the principle that no general history is worth while which does not emerge into the living present. Based on the author's "Development of modern Europe."

Advertising copy should reach us Tuesday noon—earlier, if proof is desired out-of-town. Forms close Thursday noon.

Under the heading "BOOKS WANTED" booktrade subscribers, under their own names, are given five nonpareil lines (exclusive of address) free advertisement for specific books out of print in any issue except special numbers, but not exceeding 100 lines a year. If over five lines are sent the excess is at 10 cents a line. Books not out of print, unspecified wants, repeated matter, and all advertisements from nonsubscribers cost 10 cents a line. Objectionable books are excluded so far as they are noted.

In answering, please state edition, condition and price, including postage or express charges. Houses that will deal exclusively on a cash-on-delivery basis should put [Cash] after their firm name. The appearance of advertisements in this column, or elsewhere in the WEEKLY, does not furnish a guarantee of credit. While it endeavors to safeguard its columns by withholding the privilege of advertising should occasion arise, booksellers should take usual precautions in extending credit.

"Books Wanted" must be designated by actual title, not by "any."

Write your wants plainly, on one side of the sheet only. Illegible "wants" are ignored. The WEEKLY is not responsible for errors. Parties with whom there is no account must pay in advance.

Under "BOOKS FOR SALE" or for other small undisplayed advertisements, the charge is 10 cents a nonpareil line. No reduction for repeated matter. Count seven words to the line.

A REAL BOOK ON NEWSPAPERS.

We fail to recall so lively and entertaining a volume of newspaper reminiscences as "The Making of a Newspaper Man," by Samuel G. Blythe (The Henry Altemus Company, Philadelphia, 50 cents). Not every newspaper man has tramped through the snows of Canada and stolen apple pies from railroad stations to keep from starving until he could get back to home and a job—as Mr. Blythe recounts so graphically—but every newspaper man has had some of these experiences or those akin to them. The very smell of the ink rollers, the roar of the presses and the youthful dreams of fame—have been caught and preserved in these readable pages. If you have a boy who thinks he wants to be an editor, buy and give him this book. If it does not discourage him he has the right stuff in him, and if he persists in his ambition he will have learned a good many things worth his while to know.—The Brooklyn Eagle.

An Important New Novel

By

Maria Thompson Daviess

Author of

THE MELTING OF MOLLY

For Eight Months the Best-Selling Book in America

Andrew the Glad

An old Southern city, rising from its ruins, furnishes a distinctive setting. There is a double portion of romance with two heroines: Caroline, an heiress; Phoebe, society reporter, who insists that her dilettante lover shall do a real work in the world. Atmosphere, bright talk and charm of character mark the story.

HALLIE ERMINIE RIVES whose new book "The Valiants of Virginia" is warm from the presses, in private life is Mrs. Post Wheeler, wife of the diplomat, traveler and author of that name, to whom, after a romantic courtship, she six years ago was married in Tokyo, Japan. The work of Mrs. Wheeler, who is a cousin of Amélie Rives, is distinguished by fervid style and dramatic action. Among her previous books have been "The Kingdom of Slender Swords," "Satan Sanderson," "The Castaway," and "Smoking Flax." "Hearts Courageous" probably is her best known novel. "The Valiants of Virginia" is issued by The Bobbs-Merrill Company. Hallie Erminie Rives never wrote a better romance than "The Valiants of Virginia." The swinging story both stirs and pleases. It begins well and ends better, while between is no page or moment that drags or "lets down."—Chicago Record-Herald.

PUTNAM'S NEW NOVELS

PUBLISHED TODAY

By the Author of "The Great Prize Novel"

The Port of Dreams

By MERRIAM ALEXANDER

Author of "Beyond the Law"

12°. $1.35 net. By mail, $1.50

In this new story by the winner of the Great Prize Novel, awarded the prize of $1,250.00, Miss Alexander turns to a century with the history of which she is thoroughly imbued and the scenes of which are to her a familiar landscape. It is a tale of love and adventure laid in the stirring Jacobite days and confirms the opinions of the critics, who welcomed the author of "Beyond the Law" as a notable recruit to the small band of novelists that may be relied upon to produce something distinctive.

Who Laughs Last

By ASHTON HILLIERS

Author of "As It Happened," "The Master Girl," etc.

12°. $1.35 net. By mail, $1.50

A story rich in human content, abounding in telling contrasts of character and impressive portraiture and seasoned with incident and adventure. The hero, temperamentally unqualified for business and its exacting standards, blunders into a transaction which threatens to blight his career, but though punished for his ignorance of practical matters by his business-like relations, he wins friends among outsiders and finds plenty of astonishing adventure awaiting him in other lands.

There is romance a-plenty, even in these later days, which some people call prosaic, and the author of "As It Happened" has filled the page of his new novel with glowing incident and thrilling happenings.

E. P. DUTTON & COMPANY'S New Novels

A NEW NOVEL BY PIERRE DE COULEVAIN

American Nobility

Ready in February. $1.35 net; postpaid, $1.47

By PIERRE DE COULEVAIN, whose "On the Branch" is in its 13th American ed. Newly translated by ALYS HALLARD.

In this absorbing story of an international marriage, the delicate questions of widely diverging ideals of conduct are handled with wonderful insight, a perfect knowledge of the facts, and a charm of manner which is characteristic of this author. The book has a far more direct appeal to Americans than anything she has yet written.

A NEW NOVEL BY ROBERT HALIFAX

A Slice of Life

Now Ready. $1.35 net; postpaid, $1.45

By ROBERT HALIFAX. Author of "The Borderland," "Low Society," etc.

Matt Casewade's experiences after he decides to retire and live on the rents of Roper's Row (if he can collect them) are delightfully amusing. Roper's Row is out on that borderland of London where Mr. Halifax finds some of the most human people you have met for many a day.

Three singularly charming books by the MISSES FINDLATER, authors, with Kate Douglas Wiggin, of "The Affair at the Inn."

Crossriggs

Ready January 25. $1.35 net; postpaid, $1.45

By JANE H. and MARY FINDLATER.

The delicate shading of the social strata of a Scotch village is touched off inimitably in the course of a story which reveals the depth of tragic interest which may underlie lives apparently quiet and uneventful.

Penny Monypenny

Ready Jan. 25. $1.35 net; postpaid, $1.45

By JANE H. and MARY FINDLATER.

There is a deal of unobtrusive humor in this story of the efforts of two dour old Scots bachelors to decide upon a satisfactory heir. The character of Penelope's lovable, womanly mother, peacemaker and interpreter between two generations, is hard to match in modern fiction.

Seven Scots Stories

By JANE H. FINDLATER. Illustrated in colors by HENRY W. KERR.

These simple, unpretending poignant sketches of the life of the crofter and small farmer in the Lowlands are a genuine revelation of true Scots character, and are full of a singular charm of spirit.

A NEW NOVEL BY MARJORIE BOWEN

The Quest of Glory

Now Ready. $1.35 net; postpaid, $1.45

By MARJORIE BOWEN. Author of "I Will Maintain," etc.

A brilliant romance of the times of Louis XV., based upon the career of the glory-loving young Marquis de Vauvenargues. It is full of color and movement and leaves the reader feeling a great tenderness for those who upheld the traditions of the older France.

The Fear of Living

Ready Early in February. $1.35 net; postpaid, $1.47

By HENRY BORDEAUX. Translated by RUTH HELEN DAVIS.

"Crowned" by the French Academy, this novel, now in the 83rd edition in France has aroused deep feeling there for the daring with which it exposes the modern habit of shirking responsiblity, risk and the struggles which give color and value to life.

A NOVEL WHICH WILL LIVE

The Flaw in the Crystal

Cloth $1.20 net; postpaid, $1.30

By MISS MAY SINCLAIR. Author of "The Divine Fire," etc.

"With no hint from first to last that it is dealing with aught but the most ordinary material of our daily lives . . . this astounding story not only makes impalpable mediumistic matters concretely human to us, but leaves us shuddering at the reality of its horrors escaped and aglow with our contract with its healing mysteries."—"Life," New York.

The magnetism of the book is wonderful as is shown by the praise of it in papers so wide apart as "The Continent," "The Nation," "The Argonaut," and "Life."

In Re "Marriage" 3rd Edition

What one bookseller writes to Duffield & Co. about H. G. Wells:

CAMDEN, S. C., December 23, 1912.

"Sunday opened gray and chill, like a dreary day in New York. Well, if I couldn't get out I could at least stay in this delightful Inn, and so I did, with a copy of 'Marriage' for a companion. That is the why of this epistle, for I have been so charmed by Mr. Wells's most clever book that I can't resist telling you. This is my first acquaintance with this fascinating author, I regret to say, but it shall not end here. At first I was comparing him with Arnold Bennett, or rather feeling that they were much alike. But he is Arnold Bennett and much more. I cannot recall in all modern fiction a more delightful creation than Marjorie, with her many faults which make her so distinctly human. Marjorie is simply adorable, while Trafford is a character to make you think. That is the worst of modern life. A man has no time for serious thought. I read the book all the morning and forgot it rained outside, finishing it just as the luncheon bell rang. All the afternoon I have been in the atmosphere of 'Marriage,' again forgetting the rain and storm without.

"It is such books as this that are worth while—they entertain you while you read, and make you think and forget yourself when laid aside. I wish you would congratulate Mr. Wells for me—tell him there is at least one bookseller in America that has read his book, and that he pretty nearly puts it in a class by itself.

"We have done well with 'Marriage,' and now that I have read it, I assure you that the end is not yet."

NEW YORK, January 8, 1913.

"I had the enclosed printed up as an envelope enclosure. I don't get very much out of envelope enclosures, but I felt so much pleased with 'Marriage' that I decided to make an exception in favor of the book. My oldest daughter finished the volume the other evening and considers it about the best thing she has read during the past year, and she is supposed to be a good critic."

A PERSONAL NOTE

Here is a novel to interest the most jaded and weary of novel readers. It possesses all the qualities of the successful novel.

ORIGINALITY

Majorie is one of the most winsome and human creations in modern fiction, while Trafford, her husband, is the sort of man to set us all thinking. "Marriage" is one of the books that is worth while, and I put it very near the top of the fiction output for 1912.
Mr. Wells calls a spade a spade, and you must be prepared for some "jolts"—and yet his book is thoroughly clean, wholesome, moral and uplifting.—C. L. B.

The Author of—

has written a novel that is well described by the words—Startling, Unusual, Extraordinary—Powerful, and although Strongly Realistic, it is also a Big Human Romance.

SALLY CASTLETON SOUTHERNER

By CRITTENDEN MARRIOTT

Author of

"The Isle of Dead Ships," etc. Illustrated by N. C. Wyeth. $1.25 net.
Postpaid $1.37

"Sally Castleton, Southerner," is a love story brimming with action, a drama of human emotions too big and universal to be limited by a historical setting,—war being only a background for the plot. It is a romance of indescribable charm pictured in vivid contrast to the dark shadows of the Rebellion.

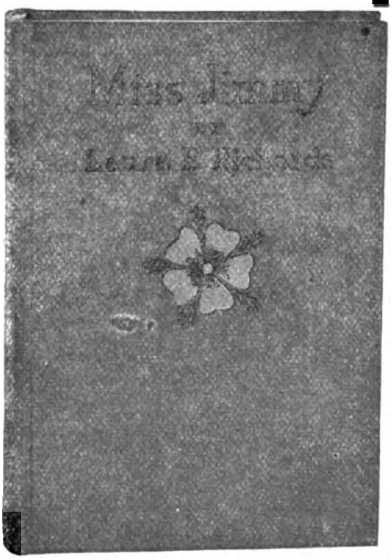
A NEW NOVEL BY

LAURA E. RICHARDS



THE AUTHOR OF

"Mrs. Tree," "Geoffrey Strong," "Captain January," etc.

MISS JIMMY

Mrs. Richards, whose ability to portray the shrewd and kindly intelligence, the homelike characteristics, and the quaint speech of the Down East Yankee and other fast vanishing New England types, is excelled by none, and equalled by very few, has given us a new character in Miss Jimmy, christened Jemima Dolly.

Miss Jimmy is a combination of Mrs. Tree, Mary Sands, Miss Phoebe, and others of Mrs. Richards' well-known characters, a combination well nigh irresistible.

January Novels

The FRONTIERS of the HEART

Jan. 17

By VICTOR MARGUERITTE

Translated from the French of this noted author

A masterly story based on the struggle between love and patriotism. It tells of a sensitive French girl in love with a German doctor before and during the Franco-Prussian War. The working-out of the story is sometimes in the slow, impalpable undercurrents of detail, sometimes in the swift, passionate excitement of war or love. It catches the reader in a vortex of emotions which sweep him on to the end.

Cloth, 12mo, $1.25 net; postpaid $1.37. Colored picture wrapper

THE DECLENSION of HENRY D'ALBIAC

Jan. 24

By V. GOLDIE

A novel of comedy and satire, based on the conversion to suffrage of a young French nobleman by a middle-class Scotch girl—vivacious and tingling with intellectual vitality. How she at once shocks and charms him is told with keen humor.

RANCHING FOR SYLVIA

Jan. 10

By HAROLD BINDLOSS

Author of "Winston of the Prairie," "The Long Portage," etc.

A Bindloss novel of the best type, combining love, work, and thrilling outdoor adventure. It includes a horse-stealing episode, a hold-up or two, the pursuit of whisky smugglers, a kidnapping, the steady work of farming, and the companionship of a splendid, true-hearted girl of the prairie. The end is at once surprising and satisfactory.

Cloth, 12mo, $1.30 net; postpaid $1.42. Colored picture wrapper

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help and an ornament thereunto."—BACON.

THE TREND OF LEGISLATION.

Two bills introduced at the last session of Congress, though only indirectly touching the book trade, are of interest as showing the present trend of legislative activity.

The first is the so-called Campbell bill, which would make it obligatory on all manufacturers to put their names on all their products. This is backed by the National League of Makers' Name of Chicago, of which Dr. Wiley is president, and is really a sort of offshoot of pure-food legislation. It is claimed that its provisions would tend to protect the public from shoddy articles, made perhaps under unsanitary sweatshop conditions, and would put a stop to the sale of good-looking but cheap stuff that is made up by unscrupulous manufacturers for "bankrupt," "closing-out" and "fire sales," and to all similar imitations of standard and well-advertised articles.

The second bill was an anti-trust measure, introduced by Senator Clapp last month, proposing to prohibit unfair discriminations between different sections and communities, and particularly discriminations in price. It provides that no firm or corporation shall, "for the purpose of destroying the business of a competitor or creating a monopoly in any locality, discriminate between sections, communities or localities by selling a commodity at a lower rate in one section, community or locality than is charged for such commodity by said party in any other section, community or locality, after making due allowance for the difference, if any, in the actual cost of the transportation from the point of production, if a raw product, or from the point of manufacture, if a manufactured product."

Neither of these measures came to a vote, or even came up for discussion; but, in more or less modified form, they are almost certain to be reintroduced in the next session of Congress. And if neither now seems of interest to the book trade—since books are sold almost uniformly the country over under an identical scale of prices and discounts, and almost invariably under the publishers' imprint—nevertheless the evidently increasing trend to regulate all terms of sale by legislative action is too significant to be overlooked.

ELSEWHERE in this issue we reprint the decision of the United States Circuit Court in the case of G. & C. Merriam Company vs. Cupples & Leon Company and Syndicate Publishing Company, beginning a new series—for we understand that the decision will be appealed from—of "Webster dictionary" litigation. It will be recalled that the courts have held that, while the G. & C. Merriam Company may not prevent other publishers from calling their works (based on the original Webster's) "Webster's" dictionaries, yet such publishers must clearly state on their title pages and advertising, in a form prescribed by the United States Circuit Court, a statement acknowledging that such "Webster's dictionaries" are not published by the authorized Webster publishers, viz., the G. & C. Merriam Company. It was not complained that the defendants in the present case failed to comply with the prescription above mentioned, but that their dictionary was not based on Webster at all. This contention, the court, after examination of voluminous historical and statistical evidence introduced, has denied.

ALTHOUGH obliged to deny the injunctive relief asked for by the G. & C. Merriam Company, the court in no sense endorsed the competing dictionaries. His attitude is sufficiently shown in the text of the decision. On the other hand, we are told that the G. & C. Merriam Company are pressing at the present time at least a half-dozen other suits for injunction, and that the would-be "Webster" competitors complain bitterly of a campaign of restrictive litigation, which the appellants really expect to lose, but which, in the meantime, tends to demoralize unjustly the competitors' legitimate trade. Two facts seem now to have been legally affirmed: (1) That the G. & C. Merriam Company have no legal monopoly to the title name "Webster"; (2) that competitors using that name must not, lest they work a fraud on the public, palm off unauthorized "Webster dictionaries" as those published by the original publishers of Webster or their successors. Having these two points clearly established, it would seem now to be possible to put an end to this interminable "Webster" litigation, which keeps the dictionary trade in a ferment and benefits no one but the lawyers concerned.

Now is the time for the bookseller to prepare for Valentine's Day business. Of course, your store offers postcards and the usual assortment of art valentines. But how about books? There is hardly a holiday gift book, except those specifically labeled "Christmas," that isn't equally suitable for Valentine's Day giving. Could any better way of working off surplus holiday stock possibly present itself? This doesn't mean, of course, limiting your valentine showing to left-overs. No gift remembrance for the day could be more suggestive and suitable than a daintily gotten-up love story. Are you doing your part to swing the public taste, at your profit, from the gaudy and ephemeral Valentine card to the beautiful book, costing more, to be sure, but giving permanent enjoyment? One publishing house has consistently played up "Books for Valentine's Day" for several seasons past; are you, as retail booksellers, co-operating with them and with other publishers who are similarly making suggestive campaigns in the booksellers' interest?

THE LEIPZIG BOOK EXPOSITION, 1914.

Complete Details of the Proposed Exposition, Now Available—Rules Prescribed—63 Classes of Exhibits.

I.—SCOPE AND EXTENT OF THE EXHIBITION.

The International Exhibition for the Book Industry and the Graphic Arts, to be held at Leipzig in 1914, is to embrace:

1. The entire book industry, inclusive of photography.
2. The graphic arts.
3. All allied industries and auxiliary branches.

The exhibition will be international, and all the civilized countries of the world will be permitted to participate.

The plot of ground placed at the disposal of the exhibition management by the Leipzig Municipal Council has an area of about 400,000 square meters. It is easily accessible from the town and Leipzig railway stations by means of excellent traffic services.

II.—DURATION OF THE EXHIBITION.

The International Exhibition for Book Industry and the Graphic Arts, Leipzig, 1914, is to be opened early in May, 1914, and closed at the end of October, 1914. The board of directors, however, reserves to itself the right of altering these dates.

IV.—NOTIFICATION.

The notification of exhibiting at the exhibition must be made out in duplicate on forms provided by the management, and must be returned, at the latest, by June 30, 1913.

Exhibitors are requested to answer the questions contained in the application form conscientiously and very fully; should steam, water, gas or electricity be required, the necessary details must be furnished. If necessary, sketches of the exhibits, with exact measurements, should accompany the application.

Preliminary applications, accompanied, if possible, by approximate particulars of space required are, up to December 31, 1912, to be addressed to the exhibition management. Notifications arriving after July 1, 1913, can be considered in so far as the remaining space permits.

V.—ADMISSION OF EXHIBITS.

The admission of exhibits is based, as a rule, on the assumption that the articles were manufactured by the exhibitor himself or at his works, either entirely, or in their essential parts, or to his order. In all exceptional cases, and on questions as to whether the conditions of admission have been fulfilled, and in every case of doubt, the exhibition management alone decides. The directors reserve their full right to decline any exhibit, without being compelled to state their reasons for doing so.

All articles are excluded from the exhibition which give offence from the point of view of technics or taste, unsavory smell, faultiness, inflammability, or are subversive of morality. In cases of contravention of the regulations the management will assume the right to remove any such exhibits, at the cost and risk of the exhibitor, and have them returned to him.

Every exhibitor will receive a notification of the acceptance of his exhibits, with a preliminary estimate of the charge for space.

After sending in the duly signed application form, and after receipt of a notification of acceptance, the exhibitor is bound in all cases to pay the full charge for the space allotted him, and to refund all expenses incurred by the management on his behalf.

VI.—CHARGES FOR SPACE, AND CONDITIONS OF ACCEPTANCE.

The charges for space will be as follows, provided the notification is forwarded in due time:

60 marks for every square meter floor space in closed buildings.

40 marks for every square meter floor space in roofed buildings, open on all sides.

40 marks for every square meter wall space in closed buildings.

40 marks for every square meter wall space in roofed buildings, open on all sides.

Digitized by Google

90 marks for every linear meter table space, including tables of 80 centimeters' depth

40 marks for every square meter wall space adjoining table space.

The charge is higher if the space required is to be approached on more than one side, viz:
by 30% if the space is to be open on two sides, by 60% if the space is to be open on three sides, by 100% if the space is to be open on all sides.

For spaces adjacent to the special broad main entrances of the halls, the above quoted rates are increased by 50% of the initial charge.

This addition is also to be made to the minimum charge to be paid. Every portion of a sq. metre encroached upon will be reckoned as a full sq. metre. The minimum charge for space amounts to 120 marks.

The charges for spaces in special buildings in the open air will be calculated at rates specially agreed upon.

If the application for larger spaces is made in good time, the exhibition management allows discounts when allotting the space:

for, at least,	21 up to 50 sq. metres	5%
for, at least,	51 up to 100 sq. metres	10%
for, at least,	101 up to 200 sq. metres	15%
for, at least,	201 up to 300 sq. metres	20%
for over	301 sq. metres	25%

on the total amount of the space charg'd incl. additional chg. if any

Immediately on receipt of the notification of acceptance from the management, the first half of the charge for space must be remitted to the "Allgemeine Deutsche Credit-Anstalt," Leipzig, post free, and an advice must at the same time be posted to the management.

Only after the amount has been paid has the exhibitor any rights over the space allotted to him. He will thereupon receive a letter of allotment, which will serve as a voucher for the admission of his exhibits. The exhibitor must pay any stamp fees which are required. The remaining half of the space charges must be paid on delivery of the exhibits at the exhibition grounds.

The exhibitor is not entitled to make over the space allotted to him, or any portion thereof, to any other party without the approval of the exhibition management.

The space occupied for closed group exhibitions, to be held in agreement with the management, will be charged for at its total area.

The group exhibitors must elect a common representative, who is deputed to fulfil the obligations of all the parties concerned towards the management, and who is accountable for the space rent. Yet each exhibitor of a group exhibit is individually responsible as general debtor to the management for all the obligations of the appointed representative, and for the fulfilment of the stipulations contained in the contracts, and the observance of the exhibition regulations. This joint responsibility of the associated exhibitors includes also obligations undertaken towards the management by only one, or several of them.

VII.—DISTRIBUTION OF SPACES.

The assignment of spaces at the exhibition is in the hands of the exhibition management exclusively. The latter is not bound to consult exhibitors when allotting spaces.

In case of any mistake in the allotment of space, the exhibition management is only liable for the return of the monies paid for the spaces in question. The exhibitor is not entitled to claim for damages.

VIII.—INSTALLATION OF EXHIBITS.

The Arrangement and Decoration of Stands.

The exhibitor must himself look after the installation of the exhibits and the fitting up of his stand, in accordance with the management's regulations. This must all be finished, at the latest, five days before the opening of the exhibition; otherwise the management is entitled to remove the objects already installed, or to undertake, or to hasten, the installation at the exhibitor's own cost and risk. In the first case, the exhibitor has no claim to repayment of the charges for spaces. The management may also, if it wishes, dispose of the space as it thinks fit.

With a view to securing as systematic and uniform a style of arrangement as possible, the exhibition cases, cabinets, stands and other equipment are to be designed and executed by artists appointed by the management. The designs must be submitted to the management for approval.

These regulations apply especially to all joint exhibits. The management reserves to itself the right of making further special regulations with regard to these exhibition arrangements.

Special authorization is necessary in cases of structural work, decoration of stands, the putting up of firms' signboards, advertising placards, etc.

With the exception of the broad main passages, the gangways, as a rule, will not be allowed more than 2 metres breadth.

If a partition is erected on an exhibit space with the approval of the management, the latter has the right of the other side of such wall for the benefit of the exhibition. Partitions of this sort must not, generally speaking, exceed 2 metres in height. The whole structure, as a rule, may not exceed 3 metres in height. Exceptions to this regulation must have the sanction of the management.

IX.—CONVEYANCE AND DELIVERY OF EXHIBITS.

In due time before the exhibits are to be despatched, every exhibitor will receive two delivery order forms, sent to him from the offices of the exhibition, which must be filled up and returned before the exhibits are despatched. The delivery of the exhibits must be effected in time enough for them to be properly installed five days before the opening day of the exhibition.

Exhibits requiring a considerable time for their erection, especially those which have to be conveyed through spaces occupied by other exhibitors, must be delivered at a correspondingly earlier date.

The transport of the exhibits from the railway station to the exhibitor's stand will be undertaken at the exhibitor's cost and risk by the exhibition's forwarding agent.

The storing of all the exhibits at the exhibition buildings will also be at the expense and risk of the exhibitor.

The exhibitors will duly receive from the management labels to be pasted on their parcels of exhibits, bearing the name of the sender, the class of exhibits, the admission number, and the address of the exhibition. These labels must be pasted on at least three sides of each package sent. The management reserves the right to draw up further special regulations affecting the transport of the exhibits.

X.—MACHINERY, APPARATUS, ETC., SHOWN IN OPERATION.

The exhibitors, whilst the exhibition is open to visitors, may have their machinery, apparatus, etc., explained by their own employees and at their own cost, and after obtaining permission from the management, they can let the machines be seen in working during the times fixed by the management.

Generally speaking, the working machines, and the larger kind of apparatus, must be installed in the machinery hall. The foundation, mounting and dismounting of the machines must be carried out by the exhibitors at their own cost. The foundation work, if desired, will be undertaken by the exhibition management on reimbursement of the cost. The management's permission must be obtained before the foundation work is commenced. As the exhibitor is responsible for the removal of the foundation later on, he must deposit a certain sum, which is fixed by the management. The building material used in the foundation work remains the property of the exhibitor. Foundations not removed in time will be taken away by the management at the cost of the exhibitor.

The main connections required for the transmission of power in the form of electricity, steam, gas and water, as well as the main drainage, will be laid by the exhibition management up to the junction-points decided upon. All branch connections joined on to the mains, and which are to lead to the individual exhibitor's stand will be laid down by the management, the expense being borne by the exhibitors.

All machines and apparatus to be shown working must be provided with the requisite protective devices.

The exhibition management will allow special privileges to those exhibitors whose machines and apparatus are utilized for the exhibition's purposes, such as, for instance, steam-boilers, steam-engines and dynamos, motors, etc.

The exhibitors must name to the management those persons who will be entrusted with the control of the machines.

XI.—INSURANCE, GUARDING, LIABILITY.

At the exhibitor's request, the management will have an exhibitor's goods insured against fire on his account, from the time of their arrival up to, at the latest, four weeks after the close of the exhibition.

The guarding of the exhibition halls and the exhibits is executed free of charge by the exhibition management's staff of custodians and attendants. The management, however, will take no responsibility for loss or damage which may be caused to exhibitors through theft, fire, lightning, water, explosion, exposure to rain, building defects or arising from any other cause.

XII.—THE CLEANING OF THE EXHIBITS.

All exhibits must be cleaned every morning before 9 o'clock. They must be on view and ready for inspection by visitors at this hour, and all coverings or protective wrappings must be removed. After 9 o'clock in the morning no more cleaning work may be done. If the cleaning is not properly carried out it will be executed by the exhibition's attendants at the exhibitor's expense.

XIII.—REPRESENTATION AND ADMISSION TO THE EXHIBITION.

The exhibitors must look after their representatives at the stands themselves. Application must be made at the management's offices with regard to their admission.

The exhibitor and his representatives, or employees needed for the exhibition, will have free admission to the exhibition grounds up to the opening day of the exhibition; after the official opening, a charge will be made for free passes, which must be furnished with a photograph, amounting to 3 marks for an exhibitor and 1 mark for an employee.

XIV.—ADVERTISING AND PHOTOGRAPHING THE EXHIBITS.

The distribution of price lists, or other means of advertising, requires the sanction of the management. Within the exhibition, such distribution must be strictly confined to the exhibitor's own stands. All clamorous advertising methods must be avoided. Exhibitors are not permitted to sell or distribute picture postcards.

Photographs, sketches, etc., can only be taken and made by permission of the management or to their order.

XV.—SALES.

An exhibitor, in his form of application, must state whether the exhibits are for sale, and, if so, at what price. A direct sale for cash is allowed only after the exhibitor has come to an agreement with the management respecting the commission on the sale. The management, however, reserves to itself the right of withdrawing the permission to sell. Any monopoly for the sale of certain articles will not be granted. The offering of articles for sale must not disturb the general order in the exhibition, nor become a source of annoyance to the customers. The articles may be marked "For sale; price....!"

Exhibits which have been sold may only be removed from the exhibition after paying the sales commission at the exhibition cashier's office. Another article must at once be substituted for any article removed from the stand.

XVI.—CATALOGUE.

The exhibition management will publish a detailed catalogue.

XVIII.—PRIZES AND AWARDS.

Awards will be given for special merit.

XIX.—REMOVAL AND REDELIVERY OF EXHIBITS.

No exhibitor may remove his exhibits from his stand before the close of the exhibition, except by special authority of the management. Within four weeks of the closing of the exhibition, the exhibitor must have all his articles packed and ready for removal, or remove them himself. Within the same term he must clear away all buildings, foundations, pipes, etc., and restore the ground to its original condition. The removal of exhibits belonging to foreign visitors from the exhibition to the railway station will be effected at the exhibitor's cost and risk by the exhibition management or its forwarding agent.

The exhibits will be handed over only on presentation of the delivery bill, or export permit, and after all obligations, charges and costs for which the exhibitor is liable have been paid to the exhibition management.

XXI.—LEGAL PROCEEDINGS.

In legal proceedings of any kind, the exhibitor, his employees or accredited representatives are bound to be guided by the decisions of the Leipzig courts of justice.

XXII.—CONCLUDING REGULATIONS.

The cost of all stamps affixed to agreements, contracts or other documents, and other fees, must be borne by the exhibitor.

The forwarding of the form of application by an intending exhibitor duly filled up and signed by him, is equivalent to his acceptance of all the foregoing conditions, and to a declaration that he will conform to them as well as to any further ones, which the exhibition may impose, in the interests of the exhibitors, respecting stands and traffic, supply of steam, electricity, gas and water, etc.

Supplementary agreements of any kind must be in writing, otherwise they will be invalid.

CLASSIFICATION OF EXHIBITS.

GROUP I.—GRAPHIC ART.

Historical Exhibit—Origin and development of written characters and the graphic arts.

Free-hand drawings.

Pure graphic art (original etchings, original lithographs, and other original graphic productions in one or more colors), the art of writing, original woodcuts, engraving.

Graphic art of reproduction.

GROUP II.—APPLIED GRAPHICS AND THE ART OF BOOKMAKING.

Hand-drawings for applied graphic art.

Photographic art (originals for the technique of photo-mechanical reproduction).

Applied graphic art (illustrations of books or journals), printed letters, book ornamentation, colored or marble papers, posters, packings and wrappers, etc.

Artistic bookbinding, end papers, gilt tooling and embossed binding.

GROUP III.—INSTRUCTION.

Establishment of educational institutes and schools for the book industry. Photography, and the graphic arts.

GROUP IV.—PAPER MANUFACTURE.

GROUP V.—STATIONERY AND WRITING MATERIALS.

GROUP VI.—MANUFACTURE OF COLORS.

GROUP VII.—PHOTOGRAPHY.

GROUP VIII.—TECHNIQUE OF REPRODUCTION.

GROUP IX.—LETTER-CUTTING AND LETTER-FOUNDING, AND ALLIED TRADES, STEREOTYPY, ELECTROTYPY.

GROUP X.—PRINTING PROCESSES.

Historical Exhibit—Development of raised, flat and intaglio printing.

Raised or relief printing: Printing in one or more colors, of newspapers, books, jobbing work, music, maps, posters, calendars. Printing on wood, celluloid, textile fabrics, leather and other materials. Wall-paper printing. Embossed printing for the blind. Embossed work, stamping contrivances and materials.

Flat printing: Lithographic and chromolithographic printing on paper, textile fabrics, leather, linoleum, metal, glass, porcelain and other materials. Work for business or mercantile purposes. Printing from zinc, aluminium, rubber, etc. Engraving and printing of music. Phototypy in one or more colors. Combination of various printing processes. Postcards, posters. Printing of drawings, plans, etc., by special processes. Raw materials, lithographic stones, tools.

Engraved plate printing: Steel and copperplate printing, hand and powerpress photogravure, rotary copperplate printing, monogram printing, etc.

GROUP XI.—BOOKBINDING.

Historical exhibition of the development of bookbinding.

Raw materials and tools for bookbinding. Bookbinding materials, leather, cloth, covering and end-papers, clasps, etc.

Bookbinding: Handwork, cloth bindings, leather work, account books, stationery and letterpress binding.

GROUP XII.—PUBLISHING. SALE OF BOOKS RETAIL AND ON COMMISSION.

Historical Exhibit—Development of publishing and trading methods. Special rights, protection of copyright, press censorship, etc.

Publishing: New books and new issues, magazines, compilations, etc.

Map publications: Geographical maps, marine charts, atlases, geological, astronomical and physical charts, globes, hemispheres and astronomical globes.

Retail and commission book trade, cash sales, school books, etc.

Art publications: Art journals of all kinds, portfolios and compilations.

Musical works: Development of the system of writing music. Pieces of music. Literature of music. Discs and cylinders for mechanical musical instruments.

GROUP XIII.—NEWSPAPERS. NEWS DEPARTMENT, METHODS OF ADVERTISING AND CANVASSING.

GROUP XIV.—LIBRARY, BIBLIOGRAPHY, BIBLIOPHILISM AND COLLECTIONS.

Fitting up of libraries, library plans, views, furniture, catalogues of libraries, etc.

Public libraries and reading rooms.

Bibliography organization of intellectual work.

GROUP XV.—MACHINERY, APPARATUS, MATERIALS AND IMPLEMENTS FOR THE PRINTING INDUSTRY.

GROUP XVI.—MEASURES FOR THE PROTECTION AND WELFARE OF THE WORKERS.

THE success of a window display should not be measured by the number of people who stop to look at it, but by the number of sales it develops.—Canadian Bookseller and Stationer.

MORE "WEBSTER DICTIONARY" LITIGATION.

Suits with Cupples & Leon and Syndicate Publishing Company just Decided in United States District Court.

Judge Hand, of the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York, handed down this week a decision in two suits in equity brought by the G. & C. Merriam Company against the Cupples & Leon Company and the Syndicate Publishing Company [not the Syndicate Trading Company], of New York City.

The decision was in favor of the defendants, and reads:

These are two suits in equity to secure an injunction and accounting against the defendants for the publication of two certain dictionaries, one under the title of "Webster's New Standard Dictionary," published by the Syndicate Company, and the other under the title of "Webster's New Century Dictionary," published by the Cupples & Leon Company. Each of these books is substantially taken from the same plates and the differences between them are few, though the "Century" has been less changed than the "Standard." They are each printed from a dictionary entitled "The Crown Dictionary," the origin of which is one of the points of dispute in the case.

The complainant has since 1847 continuously published dictionaries which were either themselves revisions, abridgments or reductions of the work of Noah Webster, the well-known lexicographer, or of previous revisions of that work. The chief editions were published in 1847, 1864, 1890 and 1909. The theory of the suits is, that the name "Webster," when applied to a dictionary at the present time, signifies to buyers throughout the country that the work is a compilation or abridgment published by the complainant company, which is either known by name, as the publisher, or whose identity is established in popular opinion as the publisher for many years singly responsible for all Webster's dictionaries. These suits were commenced in November, 1911. In October of that year the defendant, Syndicate Company, informed the complainant that there would be thereafter inserted in the title page the statement which had been required by the decree of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the First Circuit in a similar case against one Ogilvie, and that on the back of the dictionary would appear the name of the Syndicate Company. The defendant, Cupples & Leon Company, inserted the statement upon the title-page early in November, 1911, and so informed the complainant; it had always, with one exception, printed its name on the back. The complainant not being satisfied with these concessions, brought this suit.

Hugh A. Bayne, Harry D. Nims and Lauren Carroll, for the defendants.

Hand, D. J.: The complainant has never succeeded in getting from any court a decree which would forbid the publication of a "genuine" Webster dictionary in the form in which the defendants were selling theirs at the time these suits were started. The defendants had not only conformed in every way to the terms of the decree in the case of Merriam v. Ogilvie, as it was finally entered, but they had advised the complainant of their submission to the law as there laid down and of their purpose in future to adhere to it.

The complainant brings this suit upon the theory that the book published (for the two books are nearly identical in content), is in fact not based upon Webster's dictionary at all, that it has no right to be called Webster's Dictionary in any sense, and that it is a fraud to call it such. Indeed, they do not concede that any one has any right but themselves to use the word "Webster's" upon a dictionary, unless it be one of the original dictionaries published by Webster himself, and even in that case they insist that it must be distinguished by the statement that it is one of the original Webster's dictionaries, a fact which would probably destroy any possibility of its sale anyway. Their pretension extends even to the point of forbidding the sale of any dictionary honestly compiled upon Webster's original sources, since they assert that the name "Webster," when applied to any such compilation or abridgment, necessarily implies their own responsible supervision and authorship. I have not, however, the least doubt at the outset in overruling so extreme an assertion as this. It is quite clear that any honest compilation or abridgment at the present time of Webster's work is entitled to describe itself as such, and that the most which the complainant's supposed right could in any case do, would be adequately to indicate that a work so described was not a compilation or abridgment by the original publishers of Webster's Dictionary or their successors. Indeed, it is a preposterous assertion to say that the name "Webster's" as at present used by the complainants themselves does not indicate to the public mind that their work has some connection with Webster's original work other than that they choose to publish it, or that it need not be the result of a legitimate literary descent from his original.

In other words, even though the word indicates prima facie that the book is the complainant's compilation, it also indicates that it is a compilation with Webster as its original source, and it is in this sense that Judge Coxe spoke when he said that the word had two meanings, a proprietary and a descriptive. Nor is there any inconsistency in such a dual meaning; the word may mean "Merriam's compilation from Webster," quite as well as "Merriam's Compilation." If it does, it must as well answer to one part of its definition as to another, in short, it must be a compilation from Webster, or it is a fraud. I pay not the least attention to those witnesses who say that it means only "Merriam's Compilation." If the name "Webster" has this descriptive significance, it is quite clear that it will also honestly describe any actual compilation from any one of Webster's dictionaries, provided that some suffix be added to distinguish the compilation from Merriam's. The word need not by any means be confined to the original work of Webster himself. Indeed, the only authority which has ever independently given the complainant any trade rights in the name "Webster," itself refused absolutely to forbid the defendant from using the name upon what was in every sense a compilation. In Merriam v. Ogilvie, 149 Fed. R., 860, Judge Colt says that Ogilvie's work was an enlarged and revised edition of the Webster of 1847. Now the edition of 1847 was not by any means a Simon-pure Webster, for its title page asserts that, although it contained the whole vocabulary of the first edition in two volumes, the entire corrections and improvements of the second edition (both by Noah Webster), it had been revised and enlarged by Chauncey A. Goodrich. Just what the abridgment from two volumes to one involved and just what was the revision and enlargement of Goodrich which accompanied the abridgment added does not appear, but it does appear that the work which the Circuit Court of Appeals of the First Circuit permitted to bear the name "Webster" had passed through two revisions of one sort or another, and this is enough to dispose of the assertion that the only work which may be called "Webster" is some book just as it left the hands of Noah Webster.

The first question which arises is, whether the dictionary in question was based upon Webster's original work in such sense that it is entitled to be known by that name. In the solution of this question I am not disposed to enter into any nice considerations of a literary character, such, for example, as Professor Peck suggests, as to what creates a Webster's dictionary, for it is quite clear that whatever scholars may think, the public generally—and it is the public with whom we are now concerned—mean something else by the words in question. What is it that they do mean, either by a Webster's Dictionary or a dictionary based upon Webster's? It seems to me that they mean the way the book has been made up more than its present contents, its history rather than its present identity with its source. The word at least denotes what I should call literary descent from Webster's original books; that is, that each book in the series of which this is the last, was made up by its author with its predecessor before him, only changing the spelling, definition, vocabulary and the rest as his opinions, and learning, indicated to him that changes were required to adapt the book to the present; and that this succession goes back without break to some work by Webster himself. Nor is it indeed possible for the complainant to take any other position than this without putting themselves in the position of foisting upon the public a spurious work. Their own last edition, that of 1909, is a book of almost totally different literary contents from any book with which Noah Webster had anything to do. They have the alternative of accepting the definition of "Webster" as indicating this kind of descent, or of maintaining that "Webster" means any work of theirs, and has no descriptive significance whatever. Otherwise they are within the rule in the California Fig Syrup Case. Of course, a "Webster" dictionary must own Webster as its father originally; and in the case at bar, although the heredity of the complainants' 1909 Webster is all that gives it its character as a Webster, yet it still has that character, remote now as the content may be. The complainant is in no position to deny a purely descriptive use of the word to any other dictionary which is as legitimate as its own. The constant iteration that all such are "bogus" or not "genuine" is merely a childish extravagance.

Now, does the defendants' book answer this description as well as the complainants'? The complainant has established beyond any question, in my judgment, that the immediate basis of the Crown Dictionary was the British Empire Dictionary, which has been put in evidence in this case, and which was edited by the Rev. E. D. Price, F.G.S. The proof of this consists in the identity of the literary matter between the two, which is so great as to be substantially identical. The parties in taking testimony have proceeded upon the assumption that the kinship between dictionaries may be ascertained by examining the verbal identities in the contents. Thus, at what must have been an appalling labor, they have each prepared tables showing the identity of subject matter between the defendants' book and others. Considering the difference in time of their appearance this identity with the Imperial is adequate prima facie proof that the former is the literary descendant of the other, and in the absence of contradiction justifies me in so assuming, when compared with the extremely low percentages of the other more or less contemporaneous works. Certainly one who advertises that work as a Webster which has scarcely any of Webster's matter within its covers cannot afford to be too meticulous. It also happens that the first edition of the Imperial Dictionary published in 1850 is in evidence written by the well-known lexicographer, John Ogilvie.* The title page of this work says that it is "On The Basis Of Webster's English Dictionary," while the preface, dated December, 1849, more fully states the sources.

Now that is exactly what I think the public means by a "Webster" brought up to the time of its publication, and it is in exactly this sense, and only in this sense, that the complainant has any right to continue to call its present dictionaries "Webster's," whether or not it indicates the complainant's own compilations when not accompanied by any suffix. Certainly Ogilvie could have called the Imperial Dictionary either "Ogilvie's Webster" or the "Imperial Webster" or any other kind of "Webster" that he wished. The successive editions certainly were Webster dictionaries and so were any smaller works, derived from those editions, whether abridgments, condensations, or the like. Nor does it seem to me to matter that the intermediate sources did not go by the name Webster. Here, for example, is a work which comes down by precisely the same kind of line of descent from Webster that the complainant's present abridgments come, each individual in the line being formed from its predecessors by some accretion, some elimination, some amendment, till one reaches the work of Webster himself. When the public uses "Webster" does it understand that all the intermediate steps shall have been so named? I hardly think so. Rather, it seems to me, it is the fact of its unbroken descent that the word implies.

[The Court next discusses at some length the question as to whether the statements in Ogilvie's 1850 preface relative to the Websterian basis of his work are competent as evidence; and concludes that, as "there was no motive for fabrication" they are. He adds that, as dictionaries are themselves accepted as evidence in courts of law, "because the circumstances attending their preparation guarantee their reliability," so must one admit as evidence the "explanatory portions" of such dictionaries.]

Therefore the defendants had the qualified right to call their books "Webster's," provided they properly distinguished so as to cut out the secondary meaning, and the only question which can remain is, whether the statement upon the title page of the books is sufficient notice, since the books were properly marked upon the back. The form of the notice is that set forth in the final decree of the Circuit Court for the District of Massachusetts as contained in 190 Fed. R. at page 931. The only criticism which I can make upon the printing at the top of the page is that it is in rather small type. Had the attitude of the complainant been different when the defendants approached it with a view of adapting their make-up to the terms of the Massachusetts decree, I might now be willing to take up the question whether that notice ought not to be more conspicuous upon the page, but I am not disposed to indulge this complainant in such a way in the case at bar. When the defendants each approached its officers in a bona fide effort to accommodate themselves to the utmost rights which the complainant had up to that time enjoyed, they were met with a demand for absolute discontinuance of the name; they are met with it here. This was illegal and had been so adjudged against this complainant in the very decree which is the basis of any supposed right they may have in the name, "Webster." They certainly by such a claim absolved the defendants from any nice adaptation of their typography to the terms of that decree, and I shall not inquire whether it gives the fullest protection to which the complainant is entitled.

I have decided this case upon the assumption that the word "Webster," had acquired a secondary meaning indicating at once the derivation of the work and its responsible compiler. That assumption I make in deference to the decision in the First Circuit, though it is in no sense authoritatively binding upon me. There are several reasons why, if it were necessary, I should not hesitate to re-examine that question in fact. In particular the defendant in that case did not contest the question, at least, after the first decision, as his briefs show, nor did he contest it in the case in the Sixth Circuit. Moreover, the record must have been quite different in that case for Judge COLT to say that no one but the complainant published any Webster dictionaries between 1847 and 1889, a fact abundantly disproved in the case at bar. I need not here decide the question of secondary meaning, and I accept, since it has not been necessary to question it, the result of the decision in the First Circuit, which is the first success the complainant has ever had in its long and persistent efforts to establish a monopoly over the word "Webster." Nevertheless, this case can never be truthfully cited as in the slightest degree contributing to the establishment of that result, or indicating that I assent in any way to the claim of secondary meaning. That question I leave exactly as I find it, without deciding that the meaning exists, that it does not exist, that it has been proved, or that it has not been proved.

I have looked over all the advertisements of the Syndicate Publishing Company, which make a very shoddy kind of appeal, but after the date when the defendants attempted to come to terms with the complainant they appear usually to bear the addition which the complainant procured as the measure of its relief in the Ogilvie case. As to those which do not and which for the most part are in the form of news articles, I find no evidence to contradict the bona fides of the defendant's efforts to conform the advertisement with the decree and I am not disposed to charge them with such as continued to appear. The prominence and form of the suffix must be held satisfactory in view of the complainant's attitude towards the defendant when approached and its illegal claim of a monopoly in the name. If the defendant was content to yield to the terms of the Ogilvie decree, it might upon the complainant's demand have been subject to some modification of its advertisements as of its title-page. That right justified no such proceeding as this, designed to do just what the complainant was forbidden to do in the First Circuit.

As to the Cupples & Leon Company, I am in more doubt. The testimony of Leon is of very unsatisfactory character and his claims to a dictionary upon which the defendant had done any substantial work are not justified. The advertisements are not warranted by the facts, for it is in no sense the modern book it professes to be. I do not believe that the defendant knew or in the least cared what was its contents, if it would sell as an up-to-date book. However, that gives no rights to the complainant, so long as its own limited use of the name is not infringed. None of the advertisements attempt to pass off the books as the complainant's, and it cannot object that the public is buying as a modern Webster substantially the old Crown Dictionary. The law may some day protect one man who sells a sound quality of goods so described against another who sells an unsound quality, dishonestly described, but it has not done so yet. Now we trust to the public to find out that they have been hoodwinked and to distinguish. Moreover, it does not certainly appear that the defendant is responsible for its customers' advertisements.

Both bills will be dismissed with costs.

THE AUSTRALIAN COPYRIGHT LAW.

THE copyright act for Australia, which passed the Senate in 1912, but on which action by the House of Representatives has not yet been reported, repeals the Australian copyright act of 1905, but continues the administrative machinery of the Copyright Office therein provided for, as well as the administrative work transferred to it from the several States, and it specifically adopts into its terminology the definitions of the British copyright act of 1911. These provisions are covered in Part I., "Preliminary," the act being divided into five parts: Part II., "Copyright"; Part III., "Summary remedies"; Part IV., "Copyright Office"; Part V., "Miscellaneous."

In Part II., the British copyright act of

Digitized by Google

1911 is declared in force in Australia as from July 1, 1912, as modified by the provisions of the present act, and the necessary substitutions of commonwealth for imperial authorities and references are made, as the Governor-General for the board of trade, the Commonwealth Gazette and one newspaper in each of the States for the London Gazette and two other London newspapers, and the Australian patent acts and local courts and for those referred to in the British copyright act. "Copies made out of the commonwealth of any work in which copyright subsists, which, if made within the commonwealth, would infringe copyright," may be prohibited importation on notice by the copyright owner to the Comptroller-General, either directly or through the British Commissioners of Customs and Excise, under regulations as to information, detentions and forfeiture to be provided by the Governor-General. The Governor-General may, by order in council, direct that the British Copyright act and this act shall extend to literary, musical, dramatic and artistic works, first produced or published in any part of the king's dominions to which the British copyright act does not extend, in like manner as if the works had been first produced in the commonwealth (this referring evidently to Canada and other self-governing dominions), subject to limitations to the copyright term in such dominion, compliance with Australian formalities, and conditions of ownership in the dominion of origin, which protection may extend to existing works; and he may likewise provide for the revocation or modification of such order, but not to the prejudice of rights or interests then existent. Such orders must be published in the Gazette and laid before both Houses of Parliament. Dramatic, musical or artistic works, copyright in the United Kingdom at or after the commencement of the Australian copyright act of 1905, which dealt chiefly with literary work and left artistic property practically unprotected), and up to July, 1912, are given copyright as from the commencement of the act of 1905, subject to exception or compensation in the case of reproduction lawfully made within that period.

Part III. provides summary remedies, on lines similar to the British act, for violation of the act knowingly made, with fine limited to fifty pounds for each offence; and on a second offence, for imprisonment, with or without hard labor, for not exceeding two months, including provisions for liability of persons permitting the use of a theatre for infringing performance, prevention of hawking, right of search warrant and restraint by notice of forbiddance of infringing performance, under penalty of ten pounds, with a counter penalty of twenty pounds in case such notice is given without just cause. Complaints must be made within six months of the offence.

Part IV. provides for a Copyright Office in charge of a Registrar of Copyrights, and for optional registration of copyright works, with proviso that the summary remedies specified can be taken advantage of only by registered owners. The registrar is to keep registers of literary, including dramatic and musical copyrights, of fine arts copyrights and of international and State copyrights. Assignments, transmissions, licenses, etc., are subject to registration, but no notice of trusts may be so registered. One registration suffices for a periodical or serial work. Registration is made prima facie evidence of ownership. Certificates of registration, etc., may be had for a prescribed fee. One deposit copy of the best edition must be filed in the Copyright Office precedent to registration. Wilful misrepresentation under the act is punishable by three years' imprisonment.

Part V. ("Miscellaneous") provides for the compulsory deposit, on penalty of five pounds, but not involving forfeiture of copyright, of a copy of the best edition with the librarian of Parliament.

It is to be noted that no provision for manufacture within Australia is contained in this act, though this was directly provided for in the act of 1905, and unless the Australian customs acts referred to, but not cited in this act, contain such provision, manufacture in Australia will not be a condition of copyright, and Australian authors will be protected under the Bern-Berlin convention throughout the countries of the International Copyright Union, as well as under treaty relations of the British Empire. This is in direct contrast with present Canadian policy, which would confine Canadian copyright, following the precedent of the United States, to works manufactured within the Dominion and thus deprive Canadian authors of British and international copyright privileges except by specific arrangement.

MORE "RARE BOOK" ARRESTS.

SIX MORE INDICTED FOR SALE OF "JUNK" AS "RARE AMERICANA."

Six men were indicted by the Federal Grand jury in New York City last Friday, charged with having sold for $61,750 to Henry M. Levingston, a real estate dealer and capitalist, of Saratoga Springs, a "rare collection of Americana," which the indictment states they represented to be worth from $200,000 to $300,000.

The indictment adds that the collection of 4500 volumes was worth $5000. Assistant United States Attorneys Boyle and Roosa say a government expert has appraised the collection at $1000, and that it is largely composed of government reports and "junk." Most of it is stated by the expert to be worth only twenty-five cents per 100 pounds as old paper.

The charge is conspiracy to use the mails to defraud. Those indicted are: William Young Conn Humes, a Chicago book dealer; James Plunkett, of Chicago; Edward J. McArdle, a Chicago lawyer; William Beer, librarian of the Howard Memorial Library, in New Orleans; Glen F. Farmer, of New York, already under indictment in New York and Boston for alleged book frauds in relation to "astral editions"; William B. Sherwood, of Syracuse.

This now makes sixteen men under Federal indictment in New York for connection with alleged book frauds.

Mr. Levingston, who had other dealings with the "rare book" coterie, is estimated by Mr. Boyle and Mr. Roosa to have lost in all about $230,000. Boyle says that Levingston paid over $1000 for a catalogue of the "Americana" alone.

The indictment states that the defendants represented to Levingston that the collection was the most valuable in the United States, outside the Bancroft collection of Americana. It is charged that the defendants represented they would get a purchaser for the collection after Levingston should have bought it, but that they had no purchaser, and did not produce one.

The defendants are alleged to have told Levingston that the collection had been made by Beer, but that he was " a bookworm, and had no practical knowledge as to the market value of the collection he had made." Levingston was told, for this reason, says the indictment, that he could purchase the books for about $70,000, while they were worth from $200,000 to $300,000.

Dictagraph evidence figures largely in the government's case.

BRITISH PUBLISHING HOUSE OPENS CANADIAN BRANCH.

TORONTO, Jan. 11.

ARRANGEMENTS have just been completed by Mr. Hugh Dent, of the firm of J. M. Dent & Sons, London, for the opening of a branch office in Toronto. Premises have been secured at 27 Melinda Street, where the company will occupy the ground floor and basement. A full stock of the various Dent publications, including "Everyman's Library," will be carried. In addition the branch will represent several other British houses, notably Charles Griffin & Co., Burns & Oates, Sidgwick & Jackson, and the Sunday School Union. The office will be in charge of Henry Button, who was formerly manager of the Canadian branch of Cassell & Company, but who has been latterly connected with the London office of J. M. Dent & Sons. This move on the part of the English house is significant of the growing importance of the Canadian market.

FIFTY YEARS UPTOWN.

THE William R. Jenkins Co., of New York, is about to celebrate its golden jubilee, after fifty years of service as an uptown bookstore and publishing house. The founder of the house, realizing the trade opportunities to be gained by catering to the diverse and exacting trade of families who knew what they wanted and had the money to pay for it, in the early '60s. opened a shop near Sixth Avenue and 48th Street. How well he satisfied the demands of the neighborhood the present success of the firm testifies.

A well-developed outgrowth of the recent years is a customers' service department, which was organized to assure the same service to suburban customers as a personal call could afford. A research department is well-equipped to answer inquiries about the obscurest books. An interesting outcome of the customers' service department is the increase in the Jenkins publications. A guide-book to Europe, containing the facts an American wishes to know, and only those facts, is in its fourteenth edition. Similar authorities on first aid, gardening, and books on four distinct systems of language instruction, are among the Jenkins standard publications. Even a Chinese phrase book and a Japanese phrase book are on their lists.

The Jenkins store is now being remodeled, and when its new arrangement is complete there will be, in addition to the stationery department, sections for the sale of photographic goods, toys, etc. The present equipment is an interesting contrast to the simpler days of war times, fifty years ago, before the time of the telephone, the cash register, the typewriter or the electric light.

OBITUARY NOTES.

JAMES W. McINTYRE.

AN active factor in the book world passed away when James W. McIntyre, of the old-established Boston firm of Little, Brown & Company, died of pneumonia at his home in Newton, Mass., on January 9, at the age of 64. For nearly half a century he had been associated with book selling and book publication, and, with the exception of one year which he spent in the West, he was identified with Little, Brown & Company.

Born in Boston, November 1, 1848, the son of William Henry McIntyre, he inherited the best traits of his Scotch ancestors. Endowed with a rugged physique, an abundance of nervous energy and a great capacity for knowledge, but with only a common school education, he entered the employ at the age of 16 of the firm whose destinies later in life he was in part to direct, and by his industry, perseverance and ability progressed step by step until he had won the confidence of his employers and the warm friendship of the trade.

It was an excellent schooling that he received under Charles C. Little (who with James Brown purchased the business of Hilliard, Gray & Company in 1837 and changed the name to Little, Brown & Company) and subsequently under Augustus Flagg, John Bartlett, author of "Bartlett's Quotations," and John Murray Brown. This old Boston publishing house that traces its origin back to 1784, when Ebenezer Batelle kept a little bookstore on Marlborough Street, then a part of Washington Street, had high ideals, and these inevitably became the ideals of this young Boston boy.

As he became proficient he was promoted.

and hence he passed through one department after another until he acquired a thorough knowledge of every phase of publishing. When he was in charge of the old familiar retail bookstore of Little, Brown & Company, at 254 Washington Street, where famous authors and even more famous lawyers and jurists were wont to gather, he was the authority on the value of old and finely bound books. As traveling salesman for the house, he was one of the ablest and best beloved. By his square dealing and his good nature he made friends with a host of representative booksellers throughout the United States. As chief of the book publishing department, he was instrumental in arranging for the publication of Alexander Dumas' works in sixty volumes, which became the standard edition in the English language, and also the publication of Jeremiah Curtin's translations of the historical romances of Henryk Sienkiewicz. It was his faith in the ultimate recognition of the literary worth of the famous Polish novelist that led to the issuing of book after book, until finally the public awoke to Sienkiewicz' power in "Quo Vadis."

Admitted in 1897 to a partnership which at that time consisted of John Murray Brown and Charles W. Allen, he assiduously maintained the high traditions of the house and cooperated with them in widening and broadening its scope. The valuable publishing business of Roberts Brothers was acquired in 1898, and Little, Brown & Company thus came into possession of books of widely recognized literary worth, including the Louisa M. Alcott books, and became associated with many additional authors of established reputation. From that date Mr. McIntyre labored unceasingly to develop the publication of books in general literature, at the same time not neglecting the legal publications which for half a century had made the house famous. He had a great admiration for Daniel Webster and his zeal in searching out and editing the uncollected letters of the statesman for a new edition of "Webster's Works" was unbounded. A lover of the best literature himself it has been his endeavor to provide the public with acceptable editions of the standard authors, in addition to lighter forms of fiction. For a period covering ten of the later years of his life he exercised general editorial supervision of a new edition of the Richard Grant White Shakespeare and this work, happily completed some time before his death, stands as a monument to his memory.

As the publishing business increased, the necessity for larger quarters led, in 1909, to the removal of the firm from 254 Washington Street to 34 Beacon Street, overlooking historic Boston Common. Having few outside interests the details engrossed a large portion of his time outside of his office. Wholesouled and generous, he was beloved by his business friends and his employees. His relations with his partner, Charles W. Allen, covering a period of forty-four years, and with Hulings C. Brown, who was also admitted to the firm in 1897, were most intimate, and both feel keenly the loss not only of a business associate, but of a close personal friend. Mr. McIntyre's home life was most happy and he had the supreme satisfaction of watching his only surviving son, Alfred, pursue his course through Harvard College, enter the employment of the firm as a beginner and be admitted to partnership.

JAMES FRANCIS MACAULEY, aged 66 years, one of Detroit's oldest business men, died from apoplexy in San Diego, Cal., on Thursday, January 9th. Mr. Macauley was born in Rochester, N. Y., and came to Detroit in 1869, starting a newsstand with his brother, Richard Macauley, opposite the Grand Trunk passenger station at the foot of Brush Street.

They also opened a small book and stationery store on Jefferson Avenue, opposite the old Biddle house. W. T. Macauley, another brother, bought out Richard, and the firm continued as J. F. & W. T. Macauley.

From this location they moved to a two-story frame building on Woodward Avenue until J. F. bought out his brother and moved to 172 Woodward Avenue, where he remained nearly 24 years, his sons, Ray H. and Ward, joining him in the business. A year ago the store was moved to its present quarters, 78 Library Avenue. From the little newsstand the business grew until, after 43 years, it ranks as one of the two largest retail and wholesale book concerns in Detroit.

Mr. Macauley was of quiet disposition, patient, optimistic, a hard worker and a thorough book man.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Nellie Macauley, his two sons, and one daughter.

TRADE ASSOCIATIONS.

THE BOOKSELLERS' LEAGUE.

THE January dinner of the Booksellers' League was held last Wednesday evening at the Hotel Brevoort, New York City, and brought out an attendance, 160, which sets a new record. Something over a dozen new members received the league's informal initiation. The president announced that the next in the league's series of trade lectures in its school for salesmen would be given Tuesday, January 28, at one o'clock, at the Liberal Club as heretofore, speaker and subject to be announced later. He also called attention to Ladies' Night, February 19th; promised a most interesting list of speakers—details to be given later through the trade press.

The first speaker of the evening was John Bach McMaster, author of "A History of the People of the United States," who ran over in a cursory way the varying purposes and methods of historical writing from Herodotus and Thucydides to Gibbon, Parkman and Ferrero. Dr. E. P. Oberholtzer told of literary Philadelphia in its older days when it was the publishing center of the country; and Thomas A. Daly delighted the gathering with recitations of his well known Italian, Irish and Yiddish dialect character sketches in verse.

A large delegation from Philadelphia was on hand to make it emphatically a "Philadelphia Night."

COMMUNICATIONS.

LOST MAIL MATTER.

JANUARY 9, 1913.

To the Editor of The Publishers' Weekly.

WE are trespassing on you in order to ascertain whether our experience with the United States Post Office, in reference to missing packages, is the same as that of other dealers.

We mail books with our own label, the address being entered on our mailing book, and the return request to the postmaster printed on the address label. Beyond the case of an incorrect address on the part of the one giving us the order, we practically never have a book returned. We do have, however, numberless complaints of the non-receipts of packages, which have not been received by those to whom they are properly addressed. We had supposed that the Dead Letter Office might possibly have a department for just such cases. We are again curious to know who secures the articles. Are they stolen, or are they absorbed by various postmasters?

We shall be glad to hear from other dealers of their experiences in this direction.

W. B. CLARKE, President,
W. B. CLARKE CO.

POSTAL MATTERS.

PARCEL POST POPULAR.

NEARLY two million parcel-post packages were sent through the post offices of the fifty leading cities of the country during the first week of the operation of the new service, according to reports received by Postmaster-General Hitchcock. The exact number was 1,989,687, and as these cities handle about one-half of the postal business, officials estimate that between 3,000,000 and 4,000,000 parcel-post packages were mailed from January 1 to January 7.

New York City led, with a record of 448,000 packages; Chicago followed, with 438,000 packages; and Boston was third, with 174,000.

Representative Anderson, of Minnesota, introduced, January 10, a bill to amend the parcel-post act so that in no instance would rates on parcel-post matter be greater than the old rates on fourth-class matter. He says the rates on packages weighing from one ounce to thirty-two ounces are now too high.

SOME THIRD CLASS MATTER ADMITTED TO PARCEL POST.

A RULING of the Post Office Department, made public last week, enables senders of former straight third-class mail to send much of that matter under the fourth-class rates, or on the basis of parcel post rates. The new rating will benefit thousands of manufacturers, but not the book trade.

The order reads: "Printed matter relating to an article of merchandise which it accompanies is regarded as descriptive of the article within the meaning of Section 483, postal laws and regulations, and therefore is a permissible inclosure with such articles when mailed as fourth-class matter.

"Printing on an article of merchandise or on its wrapper, or on a label pasted to it in such a manner as to form an integral part of it, does not affect the classification of the article as mail matter of the fourth class.

"Catalogues in which two or more order forms are bound, as well as catalogues or other printed matter having samples of merchandise permanently attached to them, may be accepted for mailing at the fourth-class rates of postage.

"Order forms, address tags, report forms, letter and billheads, insurance and legal forms, cards and other similar supplies, regardless of the amount of printing on them, blank check books, receipt books and other book forms, partially in print, may be sent by parcel post.

"Directions for taking medicine, written on a label attached to a bottle or package containing the medicine, or inclosed with it, are permissible and do not affect the classification of the parcel."

PERIODICAL NOTES.

Brains, published at Scranton, Pa., has changed its name to Retail Equipment.

Engineering Review has merged, with Vol. 24, with the Metal Worker, Plumber and Steam-Fitter.

WITH new management, a new dress and what the editors call "a nice new set of good resolutions," the Independent begins its sixty-sixth year. Chief of the changes in the typographical make-up is a larger and clearer type than has been used heretofore. That has made necessary an increase in the size of the publication. The editors announce that from now on contributors are to have a large part in the making of the Independent, and to that end invite short articles on topics of present-day importance. "The Survey of the World," a department devoted principally to a discussion of political happenings, is also to be extended.

JUSTICE SEABURY, in the Supreme Court, held an examination before trial, on January 6, of the Horseless Age Company, Charles B. Ames, of 295 Riverside Drive, and Frederick J. Wagner, of New Rochelle, officers, against whom Samuel B. Stevens, of Rome, N. Y., a stockholder, has brought action, charging fraudulent payment of salaries. Mr. Stevens alleges that Mr. Wagner, who was president of the company, and Mr. Ames, who was vice-president and treasurer in that year, held a pretended meeting of the board of directors and voted to increase their salaries to $1000 a month. Mr. Stevens asks that $28,000, expended in salaries and other ways by the two defendants, be returned. The defense refers to a meeting on December 23, 1911, as the one at which stockholders approved of the increase.

ELBERT HUBBARD, of East Aurora, author and publisher, pleaded guilty last Saturday to an indictment containing six counts charging the sending of indecent matter through the mails, and was fined $100 by United States Judge Hazel in the district court on one of these counts. Sentence was suspended on the other five, Mr. Hubbard being warned that unless he avoided carefully any infractions of the law in the future he would be brought into court and punished on them. "Fra Elbertus" was indicted Friday by the Federal Grand Jury on a new provision of the penal code. When the revised statutes were abolished in 1910, the section in the new penal code was amended by the word "filthy," so matter that might not be either obscene, lewd or lascivious and yet might offend propriety, would be covered. Under the law Hubbard could have been fined $5,000 and imprisoned for five years.

THIRTY years ago, Theodore Presser, of Philadelphia, founded the Etude, a monthly magazine devoted to the interests of music teachers and students. Free from sensationalism or bias, teaching correct methods, telling how the world's greatest artists won success, and arousing enthusiasm for the best in the musical productions of all countries, it has since attained probably the largest circulation of any musical periodical in the world. The January issue of the Etude is a jubilee number. It contains, besides the usual number of useful articles and 25 pages of music, several pages of congratulations from most of the leading American and many European musicians and writers of note. George Henschel gives his personal recollections, Moszkowski tells how fine editions help, Godowski writes on the place of technique in piano playing, A. J. Silver discusses the brain-training value of music, and a group of prominent writers recount anecdotes from personal experience by way of illustrating the difference between our musical life now and thirty years ago.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

WILLIAM H. KLEINTEICH, formerly with Raphael Tuck & Sons Co., is now connected with McLoughlin Bros., and will travel in the Middle West.

JEAN WEBSTER'S "Daddy-Long-Legs," which the Century Company publishes, has been found of such appeal that it is to be put into type for the blind.

THREE printings of A. S. M. Hutchinson's new novel, "The Happy Warrior," Little, Brown & Company, were required to fill advance orders from the trade.

JOHN STUART THOMSON has almost completed his new book, "Revolutionized China," which will be issued in this country by Bobbs-Merrill, with many illustrations.

FOR the last thirteen months "The Harvester" has appeared on the Bookman's "best-selling lists," making the total number of points to its credit 2,319—a truly remarkable showing.

THE JOHN C. WINSTON CO. has just published two little books containing selections from Washington and Lincoln, ranging from single epigrams to complete texts of famous speeches.

A NEW edition of St. John de Crève-Cœur's "Letters from an American Farmer," with a complete biographical introduction, containing hitherto undiscovered material, by Miss Julia P. Mitchell ,of Barnard College, will be issued in the spring by Duffield & Co.

"BUNKER BEAN," by Harry Leon Wilson, is published by Doubleday, Page & Co. after its successful serial publication. Bunker's phrases, such as "fumed eggs, hundred p'cent. efficient," are enigmas—until you read them in the story.

MRS. LAURA E. RICHARDS has put Mrs. Tree into another book, with Mary Sands and the other Down East characters with whom her readers are familiar. "Miss Jimmy" (Estes) is said to be quite as good as any of Mrs. Richards' other New England tales.

DESMOND FITZGERALD, INC., are publishing "The Lady Who Smoked Cigars," which, no doubt, will sustain the reputation of its author, Rupert Hughes; "The Adventurer," by Rudolf Herzog, a popular German novelist; and "When Dreams Come True," a love story set in old Mexico, by Ritter Brown.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS publish, to-day, "The Port of Dreams," by Miriam Alexander, the author of a novel that won a prize of $1250. This new tale is devoted to love and Jacobite adventure. "Who Laughs Last," by Ashton Hilliers, joins the ranks of the novels of business and romance with an offer of unusual diversity of plot.

AMONG the new issues in the Practical Handbook Series published by the American School of Correspondence, are books on: "The Gasoline Automobile," "Care and Operation of Automobiles," "Wireless Telegraphy and Wireless Telephony," "Practical Aeronautics" and "Motion-Picture Work." This series now contains seventy titles.

"THE Book of Enoch" (Oxford University Press), a new edition of R. H. Charles' volume of 1893, is so rich in new discoveries that it may well be considered a new work. This Biblical manuscript, never accepted as canonical, throws light on Christ's self-designation, "Son of Man," and is one of most important and interesting of the pseudepigrapha.

EGYPT is the scene of a first novel by a new American author, George K. Stiles. All kinds of strange scenes and adventures make up "The Dragoman"—the inner workings of international diplomacy, the strange things in Mohammedanism, and the to-be-expected terrors of the hinterland of the upper Nile. The heroine is an American, and the hero a young Englishman.

"THE PARASITE," by Helen R. Martin, the author of "Tillie, the Mennonite Maid," has several strong illustrations by James Montgomery Flagg. J. B. Lippincott also announces the immediate publication of "Sally Castleton, Southerner," by Crittenden Marriott, a love story that moves quickly and holds the reader firmly. The war is only a background for the plot.

A TRANSLATION of "The Frontiers of the Heart," by Victor Margueritte, heads the list of Stokes novels for January. It is the story of the love of a French girl for a German doctor before and during the Franco-Prussian war. The same house is publishing a humorous tale of the conversion to suffrage of a young French nobleman by a Scotch girl, called "The Declension of Henry d'Albiac," by V. Goldie.

RECENT publications of the Association Press, New York, include a little volume by President-elect Wilson, entitled, "The Minister and the Community," a practical exposition of the minister's opportunities. There are several volumes in the Sex Education Series, and seven volumes of Messages of the Men and Religions Movement. Ward W. Adair, railroad secretary of the New York City Y. M. C. A., has written a collection of short stories on railroad life, called "The Lure of the Iron Trail."

BY the will of Lucy Wharton Drexel, of Philadelphia, who died January 25, 1912, leaving an estate appraised last week at $1,411,000, her first folio Shakespeare will be drawn for by her three daughters by lot. "The one drawing it," reads the will, "may sell it to one of her sisters, but I request that it shall not go out of our family."

DODD, MEAD & CO. publish, to-day, "My Little Sister," by Elizabeth Robbins, which, in its much shortened form, attracted so much attention during its publication in McClure's Magazine. "Until the Day Break," by W. L. George, is a forceful story from the point of view of a man who comes to America for liberty, fails to find it, becomes a member of the I. W. W. and sometimes an anarchist. "A Gentle Jehu in Japan," by Edith L. McLean, is a prettily bound account of travels in Japan.

LAST September the world was startled by the suicide of General Nogi, realizing once more that "East is East and West is West, and never the twain shall meet." We are to have shortly a book that should throw light on the great Japanese general, "Nogi; a Man Against the Background of a War," by Stanley Washburn, who, as newspaper correspondent with Nogi throughout the war, gained some insight into his character. The volume, to be published by Holt, will be illustrated by photographs taken during the war.

G. A. BIRMINGHAM'S novel, "The Red Hand of Ulster," is a late addition to the lists of the George H. Doran Company. They are bringing out, also, "The Browns," by J. E. Buckrose; a new novel, "'Twixt Land and Sea," by Joseph Conrad; and "Yonder," by E. H. Young. T. E. Patterson's "Story of Stephen Compton," a novel of modern life; "The Lee Shore," a story by Rose Macaulay, that won a first prize of $5000 in Hodder & Stoughton's prize novel competition; and "The Motto of Mrs. McLean," by Shirley Carson, are also among their new publications.

"WHO'S WHO" (Adam and Charles Black; Macmillans) appears promptly on time, with the beginning of the year, in the edition for 1913. The information contained in the biographical articles is brought up to September 1 last. The volume has changed somewhat in form and for the better, having added more than an inch to its height and decreased in thickness correspondingly. "Who's Who" has become indispensable in every library and newspaper office, with its compact information about all the known people and many of the little known. The 1913 edition is fully up to the standard of its predecessors.

E. P. DUTTON & Co. announce the publication, in February, of a new novel by Pierre de Coulevain, "American Nobility," the story of an international marriage. They are publishing also "A Slice of Life," by Robert Halifax, and three Scotch books by Jane and Mary Findlater, who collaborated with Kate Douglas Wiggin in "The Affair at the Inn." The titles are: "Crossriggs," "Penny Moneypenny," and "Seven Scots Stories." "The Fear of Living," a novel, by Henry Bordeaux, now translated by Ruth Helen Davis, is to be ready early in February. It is in its eighty-third edition in France, has been crowned by the Academy, and has caused much discussion by its daring analysis of the modern habit of shirking risk and responsibility.

THE Imperial Edition of Sir Gilbert Parker's books, now being issued by Charles Scribner's Sons, has a delightfully frank preface by the author himself. He tells how he took his first collection of stories to England in 1889, and how Archibald Forbes' comment was: "Those stories, Parker—you have the best collection of titles I have ever known." The young man understood. That night he put his manuscripts, which represented a good two-years' work, on the flames until every one of them had gone up the chimney in smoke. But it was not long to the time when Henley sent him a postcard that read, "Bravo, Balzac!" The type, paper, illustrations and binding, like those of the fine collected editions of Stevenson, Kipling and Barrie, are fine and distinguished. There are to be eighteen volumes.

THE HAMMING PUBLISHING COMPANY, 633 Plymouth Court, Chicago, announce the publication, within a few days, of an ingenious "Parcel Post Map and Guide" adapted to use in any town or city in the United States. It is not localized in any way and the arrangement is simple and comprehensive. The only thing necessary to the determination of rates is an ordinary desk rule, a piece of string, or any object that will span from one point to another, which can be compared with the scale which appears at the top of the map. In addition to the map, there is a complete guide giving all the information necessary to the intelligent handling of parcel post shipments. An important feature will be an index of all cities, towns, and villages in the United States, showing the number of the area units in which each is to be found. The "Guide" will be issued at a list price of 25c. net, subject to liberal trade discounts.

BUSINESS NOTES.

BURLINGTON, KAN.—W. J. Briggs has succeeded V. King, bookseller and stationer.

CHRISMAN, ILL.—The firm of Schnitker & Waldruff, druggists and booksellers, has dissolved by mutual consent. A. E. Schnitker & Son are successors.

MORRISTOWN, TENN.—The Globe Book Company is just opening a first-class book and stationery store here. The company, according to its letterhead, deals in books, stationery, periodicals, school and office supplies.

MUSKOGEE, OKLA.—Carl D. Jones has purchased the bankrupt stock of the R. M. Jones Co., booksellers and stationers, and will continue the business under his own name.

NEW YORK CITY.—The Sherwood Co. is now located at 19 John Street, having removed from 144 Fulton Street, and leased the store and basements at the former address.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—We regret a serious error in the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY of January 4. We reported "Brown Brothers, publishers," in bankruptcy. The notice should have read "Brone Brothers."

REYNOLDS, N.D.—Charles N. Faber has succeeded J. B. Kerfoot, druggist and bookseller.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Woodward & Lothrop have just begun the erection, at F Street, of an eight-story addition to their already large establishment. The book department, under the management of Fred E. Woodward, now occupying the Tenth Street side of the building, will not be affected by the change, although a new entrance will be opened through the bookstore into the new addition.

VISITING BUYERS—NEW YORK CITY.

George Lansing, becoming trustee of the property of a young English widow whom he loves, goes to Canada to put in good condition a farm, her principal possession. Giving up the comforts of civilization, he finds compensation in the free skies, adventure, and true comradeship of the Northwest. There are cattle-rustling, threatened destruction of stock through prairie-fire and flood, a horse-stealing episode, a hold-up or two, the pursuit of whisky smugglers, and a kidnapping, as well as the steady work of farming, and the companionship of a splendid, true-hearted girl of the prairie. The story turns out unexpectedly, but satisfactorily for all concerned. By author of "The long portage," "Vane of the Timberlands," etc.

Consists of twelve articles bearing upon the causes of success and failure in the teaching of the so-called essential branches in the elementary schools. Essays are based on tests extended to a large number of schools in various parts of the country. Author, who is editor of The Forum, desired to learn whether it was possible to extend the curriculum as to include the subjects demanded by the new school of education without detriment to the three R's. He draws interesting conclusions and makes practical suggestions.

Wilson, Harry Leon. Bunker Bean; il. by F. R. Gruger. Garden City, N. Y., Doubleday, Page. c. '12. 307 p. D. $1.25 n.
Bunker Bean wore the best $18 suit in America and silently despised the detachable cuffs of his millionaire employer as he took his dictation. He cultivated the air of a wealthy amateur with a passion for typewriting. Altogether, Bunker was as timid a male in maturity as could be found—that is, he was until he found out through a clairvoyant that he had been Napoleon in a previous incarnation. From that moment his life changed; the spirit of the Corsican descended upon him from the bloody past, and the youth who formerly shrank under the gaze of a friendly policeman walked with the memories of Moscow and Austerlitz forever in mind. By the author of "The spenders," "The lions of the Lord," etc.

READY NEXT WEEK

Ready in Book Form.

The Wonderful Story that was recently published serially in a shortened version in McClure's Magazine.

My Little Sister

By ELIZABETH ROBINS

No recent magazine serial has attracted as much attention as "MY LITTLE SISTER." After the first instalment appeared the editorial offices of McClure's were besieged with inquiries as to the date of the next instalment. These inquiries came in hundreds by mail, by telegraph, and it was said that for awhile the telephones repeated the question about once in five minutes. Thousands of people have read and discussed a version of this story, which contains less than one-third of the whole, as it is published in book form. Will they want the book?——. "MY LITTLE SISTER" should be prominent among the new novels of 1913 that you offer to your best customers.

UNTIL THE DAY BREAK

By W. L. GEORGE

Author of "A Bed of Roses," etc.

A story that is as up-to-date as the year 1913. Thoughtful, discriminating buyers of the best fiction, and there are plenty of them, will be glad to know about this story of modern social unrest. The hero is the sort of man who comes to this country for freedom, and because he can't find it, becomes a Socialist, or a member of the I. W. W.; or sometimes an Anarchist. We Americans ought to get such a man's point of view. "UNTIL THE DAY BREAK" gives it, in a story of remarkable force, pungency and power.

MESSRS. HARPER & BROTHERS take pleasure in announcing the publication of a notable new novel,

THE DRAGOMAN

The author of this book is an American
His name is

GEORGE K. STILES

This is his first novel

Predictions are always hazardous, but the publishers of "The Dragoman" believe that this book has in it qualities which will make it one of the most talked of and successful novels of the new year.

It is a love story. The heroine is an American girl. The hero is a young Englishman. The scene is Egypt—not the Egypt of hotels and tourists, but the grim hinterland of the upper Nile, where strange things happen and few white men ever venture. The East and its mystery, the inner workings of international diplomacy, the mighty power of Mohammedanism, are all elements which make the story one of extraordinary and fascinating interest.

Frontispiece. Post octavo. Cloth, $1.30 net

WOODROW WILSON'S

Life of George Washington

A new illustrated edition at a popular price of this biography of our first president. In the perspective of American history—a perspective clearer, perhaps, to this writer than to any other—the period treated is especially significant, being the culmination of the Colonial era and the establishment of the Republic on the firm basis of Constitutional law.

Profusely illustrated by Howard Pyle, Harry Fenn and others.

The House of Good Fiction

ANNOUNCES

The Lady Who Smoked Cigars

By RUPERT HUGHES

16mo. 50 cents net

Do not the title and author of this little book warrant your anticipating a half hour of delightful reading?

We assure you that this story has withstood the severe test of many perusals without diminishing our enthusiasm.

To tell the story would spoil your pleasure.

Cleverly illustrated by J. C. Chase

The Adventurer

By RUDOLF HERZOG

12mo. Illustrated. $1.25 net

You should know that Herzog is the most popular novelist in Germany today. We can sincerely assure you that this first English translation will be followed by other stories from his pen. "The Adventurer" is a great singer, a genius, so this may be described as in part a musical novel. But it is very much more than that.

While you are put in possession of many interesting historical, geographical and artistic facts, you become acquainted with characters of various types who are very naturally and skillfully portrayed by this master of fiction whose appeal is catholic, universal.

When Dreams Come True

By RITTER BROWN

12mo. Illustrated. $1.25 net

A love story of Old Mexico is an accurate description of this thrilling, dramatic novel. Much has been made of the picturesque setting the author has chosen.

We feel very sure that you will find the book worth possessing. The illustrations are done in Berger's best manner.

WE wish to direct your attention to Amanda Mathews' "THE HEART OF AN ORPHAN," very recently published at $1.00 net. Let us send you a copy for inspection. We also wish to advise you that we purpose publishing in the very near future Ellis Meredith's "HEART OF MY HEART," which has been out of print three or four years.

A great story and one which will surely win for its author a high place among the novelists whose work endures.—From the Boston Transcript's London Literary Correspondent.

THE HAPPY WARRIOR

By A. S. M. HUTCHINSON

Those who have read this new novel by the author of "Once Aboard the Lugger ——" predict that it will be as great a success in this country as it is in England where the critics are pronouncing it "the outstanding novel of the season."

The plot of "The Happy Warrior" is unusual, its love interest sweet and pure, and there is a fight of which it may truthfully be said that there is nothing more virile and tense in literature.

With frontispiece. 447 pages. $1.35 net; by mail $1.47.

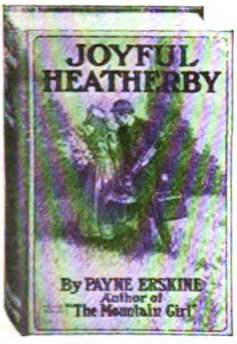
The Little Gray Shoe



By PERCY BREBNER

A dashing tale of a daring trooper's pursuit of a charming but elusive maiden, by the author of "The Princess Maritza," etc.

Illustrated by F. Vaux Wilson. Cloth, $1.25 net; by mail $1.46.

JOYFUL HEATHERBY

By PAYNE ERSKINE

An appealing present-day New England romance of a winsome country girl and a young artist with some unusual scenes.

"Joyful Heatherby" promises to be as great a favorite as "The Mountain Girl," now in its 15th printing.

Illustrated by M. Leone Bracker. 450 pages. Cloth, $1.35 net; by mail $1.46.

The Maiden Manifest

By DELLA CAMPBELL MACLEOD

A piquant story of an impressionable young man's quest for an ideal girl.

Illustrated by Harriet Roosevelt Richards. $1.30 net; by mail $1.42. (Feb. 15).

The DAY of DAYS

By LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE

(Ready Feb. 15)

A rapid fire story by the author of "The Bandbox," full of startling adventure and irrepressible humor.

Illustrated by Arthur W. Brown. $1.25 net; by mail $1.36.

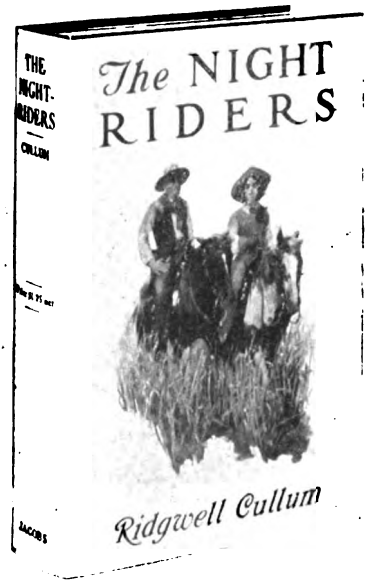
On Board the Beatic



By ANNA CHAPIN RAY

A skilfully written romance with its principal scenes on an ocean liner. Frontispiece. $1.30 net; by mail $1.42. (Feb. 15).

Book Chat of the Month

Signs point to 1913 being a "fiction year," as 1911 was, and as 1910 and 1912 were not. Just why one year should blossom out with a number of novels, widely read and of unusual merit, and another year have only the "average run," it is hard to say. Of course, "one swallow maketh not summer," but A. S. M. Hutchinson's "Happy Warrior," which Little, Brown & Company have just published, would go far to make any year a "fiction year." We were privileged to read it some weeks before publication, and ventured then to predict for it, considering it is English in theme and from an author comparatively unknown, an enthusiastic reception. Perhaps "unknown" isn't a good word to use, for, if Mr. Hutchinson's name is unfamiliar, his delightful "Once Aboard the Lugger," of a few years back, is known to a considerable circle of discriminating readers. But the "Happy Warrior" isn't the only thing promised us even this early in the year. Henry Sydnor Harrison, the author of "Queed," offers a new novel; so does Sir Gilbert Parker.

Just when we receive from Longmans a charming book, with plenty of quiet humor, by Andrew Lang, on "Shakespeare, Bacon, and the Great Unknown," out of Paris comes a thick volume of nearly 600 pages to prove that the "Great Unknown," who wrote "Hamlet," "Macbeth," and the Sonnets, was "Lord Rutland." It is an amplification of the work by M. Célestin Demblon, which appeared in a French periodical some year or two ago. The French publisher of "L'Auteur Véritable des Œuvres dites de Shakespeare enfin dévoilé" is M. Paul Fernando, who, in referring to M. Demblon, says: "He has demonstrated in an irrefutable manner, victoriously and without leaving us the slightest doubt, that Roger Manners, the fifth Duke of Rutland, born in 1576, died in 1612, was the true author of the splendid works falsely known up to now throughout the entire universe (l'univers entier) under the name of William Shakespeare." M. Demblon has evidently devoted an immense amount of study, and produced a most interesting work, but we fear it is another case of "Love's labor lost."

In "Retrospection," a volume of essays, recollections and personal memoirs, Hubert Howe Bancroft, the historian of the Great West, tells how, from mere bookselling, his ambitions turned to the composition of history. Mr. Bancroft's book business in San Francisco was a lucrative one. It enabled him to make extended journeys in search of material, once the idea of a collection dealing with the history of the Pacific coast came to him. He began with California, but widened his field until he had covered the western half of North America from Alaska to Panama:

I searched both continents several times over for historic material. I purchased every book, map, and manuscript written or printed within my chosen territory or elsewhere relating to it. I made many visits to Southern California and Spanish America, keeping employed there a score of copyists for a number of years in the California and Mexican missions and national archives. I sent copyists to Alaska and St. Petersburg for the same purpose. I studied the Mormons at Salt Lake City, the Mexicans at the lakes of Tenochtitlan, the Hudson Bay people in British Columbia, and the early Oregon pioneers by their jubilee campfires. Crossing the Atlantic, I visited many times the capitals and universities of Europe, my agents attending the public and private sales. All this intermingled with business and writing history for a period of fifty years, and—that is all.

One example of how Mr. Bancroft went about the business of collecting sources, says the New York Evening Post, in an excellent summary of his work, will suffice. After the conquest of California by the United States, three hundred volumes of documents, drawn from the archives of the missions and pueblos, were brought together, for certain governmental purposes, in the office of the United States Surveyor-General at San Francisco. Mr. Bancroft could not borrow these books, as it would be irregular for them to be out of the Surveyor-General's office. So he rented a room adjoining those of the Surveyor-General, who consented to regard the volumes while there and under his control as still in his office. A dozen Mexican copyists and "epitomists" were set to work. Mr. Savage, "my most valued expert in Mexican mustiness," went carefully through the mass of documents, marking what was to be copied entire, copied in part, or summarized. These copies alone, when bound, made a collection of seventy volumes.

Mr. Bancroft enters into an elaborate defence of the co-operative methods he has employed in his historical writing. Having gathered an enormous mass of material, the problem that confronted him was how best to render this treasure accessible to the general reading public. He was guided by no desire for scholarly distinction. He merely wished to pave a road through a "trackless field," but the task involved work enough for twenty men for twenty years. So he decided to employ assistants. Why should the author insist on doing everything h i m s e l f ?—a procedure which would compel the shipmaster to say, "How shall I know this vessel to be safe unless I lay every plank?" or the railroad builder, "Unless I drive every spike, how shall I vouch for it?" Mr. Bancroft began by preparing an index for his entire collection—some 60,000 volumes—as if it were one book. Thirty men were employed at the work. The men were of "all ages and degrees and of all nationalities." The index included some forty general headings, with geographical and chronological subdivisions. Following the compilation of the index, came the work of collecting all extant information upon the localities brought together in the index. This was difficult work, and comparatively few of Mr. Bancroft's assistants were able to meet the test. Finally, says Mr. Bancroft, "with my subject well in hand, the treatment mapped out in my mind, statements reconciled, and knotty questions settled, I composed rapidly, whether writing out my narrative or dictating to a stenographer." In this way, Mr. Bancroft produced his "Native Races of the Pacific States," in five volumes; "Central America," in three volumes; "Mexico," in six volumes; "North Mexico and Texas," in two volumes; "California," in seven volumes; the other Pacific States and the mountain States in ten volumes, besides six volumes of miscellany.

The fact that David Graham Phillips left six finished stories, of more or less length, was not a surprise to those near him who knew of his fixed habits of work and of his amazing ability for concentration. It was an iron-clad rule with Phillips never to leave an incompleted manuscript. He worked Sundays and holidays, on trains and steamers. His trips abroad were for the sole purpose of working out, undisturbed, some story he had in mind. There seems to have been inside of him a something even stronger than himself, which goaded him on. To a friend who had reproached him, only a few days before the end, for giving so much time to work, Phillips replied: "But you don't really know how hard I do work. Why, if I were to die to-morrow I should still be six years ahead of the game." It is almost as if Mr. Phillips had a premonition of his untimely end, so complete was his life, in every detail, brought up to the hour. On the very day he met his death he was carrying in his pocket the final version of the three-part story, "Enid," which has already been brought out in magazine form. "The Grain of Dust" had not only been finished, but was then printed and trembling on the verge of serial publication. In his desk were the finished manuscripts of "The Conflict," "The Price She Paid," "George Helm," and the forthcoming "De Garmo's Wife."

Abbé Ernest Dimnet has a very candid criticism of Maeterlinck in the Nineteenth Century. "In my opinion," he says, "Maeterlinck is enormously over-rated. . . . The success of his philosophical books is of exactly the same order as the success of any second-rate novel or drama, and can be accounted for by very similar causes. . . . The chief cause of M. Maeterlinck's influence lies in the snobbishness of the crowd, and in its susceptibility to the cheap advantages which make so many commonplace though apparently distinguished preachers successful." . . . If his doctrines were clearly instead of vaguely put, this critic thinks that they would not be agreeable to three in ten of his devoted readers.

One of the most lamented of recent deaths in the literary world was that of Harry Peyton Steger, of the editorial staff of Doubleday, Page & Company. He is best known as the literary executor of O. Henry; but, a young man, was undoubtedly but on the threshold of his real lifework.

The Social Conscience, and Some Recent Books.*

Reviewed for the Book Review by Grace Isabel Colbron.

In spite of all mechanical invention, in spite of discoveries in the realm of science or the material world, the one trait which differentiates the last quarter century from its predecessors is undoubtedly the awakening social conscience. In no other respect has civilization made such enormous strides onward, in no other respect does each succeeding year so outstrip those that have gone before. And in no other way does this awakening social conscience show itself more clearly than in the care of the little child.

Throughout the centuries of earth's history, the little child, the helpless young, has received the loving care of those on whom it was dependent. Throughout the animal kingdom, down to the lower forms, the young of the species have always been the object of solicitude and watchful care. And yet it has remained for the closing years of the nineteenth century, and the opening twentieth century, to care for the child as a social unit, not merely as the helpless young of the species. This rescue work is no longer being done, as before, from sentimental motives of pure philanthropy. It is being discussed, studied and carried out with the avowed intention of preparing for the future, with the intention of saving the race by saving the child on whom the future of the race rests.

In any group of recent economic works one might select at random, the child welfare problem is predominant. Treated in as many different ways as there are authors presenting it, the ground idea remains the same. We must save the child would we preserve society intact and lead the race to higher standards of thought and living.

The Child Welfare Exhibition, held last year in Chicago and New York, crystallized into one big object lesson all the various lines of endeavor. And it is wise and fitting that a number of addresses made on that occasion by men and women who have had years of experience in child welfare work should have been preserved in a volume for future reference. Much of what was said was too valuable to lose when memory faded, and the handsome book, entitled "The Child in the City," will come as a welcome addition to many a library. Well grouped and classified so as to give a comprehensive view of the subject, the chief addresses of the exhibition conferences are collected here. Among the speakers represented are Jane Addams, Dr. Richard C. Cabot, Florence Kelley, Julia C. Lathrop, Booker T. Washington, Lillian D. Wald, Henry Moskowitz, Judge Merritt W. Pinckney, Charles Zueblin, and many others of local reputation in the work. A mine of useful information is given here, and notable thoughts that show the new trend in education and in the treatment of municipal housekeeping problems. Among so many good things it is hard to make a selection for especial mention. If it must be done, then Mr. Charles Zueblin's inspiring article, "The City Child at Play," with its large and hopeful outlook; Miss Mary S. Snow's thoughtful words on "Essentials in Education"; Mr. Henry Moskowitz's article on "The Place of the Immigrant Child in the Social Program"; and Miss Jane Addams' interesting story of "The Hull-House Labor Mission" would perhaps carry off the palm. But in the other selections, as well, there is food for thought and a hopeful outlook on work already done and work still to be undertaken. Similar to the foregoing in content is an earnest little volume by Edward N. Clopper, "Child Labor in City Streets." The child workers of the city streets, Dr. Clopper tells us, have been neglected amid all this flood of child welfare legislation, a condition for which he rightly blames the "uneducated state of public opinion." With burning words he paints conditions among the newsboys, those "little merchants and future presidents," as the careless-minded love to term them; among the messenger boys and other under-age workers of our city streets, with their unnumbered dangers to mind, body and soul. Interesting statistics of remedial and preventive legislation from other countries and from various American cities are given. The spirit in which the little book is written is so serious and devoted that it offers a valuable contribution to the child welfare literature of the day.

No matter how much we may be interested in the more serious problems of the day, it is seldom that a book on such subjects comes with so insidious a charm for the reader as does the volume entitled "Youth and the Race," by Edgar James Swift. Professor Swift, who holds the chair of psychology and education in Washington University, St. Louis, gives his book the sub-title, "A Study in the Psychology of Adolescence." It is difficult to interpret in terms of measured criticism the effect this wonderful book has on the reader. It treats an important subject, the understanding of the growing boy and girl, and the best methods for molding them into useful citizens, into happy, healthy human beings, with a deep and sincere sympathy, with a virile directness that is telling in its results. Based on a sure and solid foundation of biological knowledge, and what is still rarer, on an understanding of true democracy, the author's conclusions cannot fail to be immensely valuable. He is outspoken in this arraignment of much that is wrong in our present system of education, but equally outspoken in praise of individual effort towards right education wherever he has found it. It is a most unusual book, which should make its mark wherever readers desire honest speech and unfettered thought.

From the childhood of the individual to the childhood of the mind unawakened or held down by economic pressure is but a single step. The problem presented by each is much alike. So that Mr. Booker Washington's story of his recent investigation trip to Europe, which he sums up under the title, "The Man Farthest Down," seems to belong naturally with the group of books just considered. Mr. Washington frankly acknowledges that the conclusions drawn from his observations may be somewhat weakened by the fact that he had one thought in mind throughout his trip—namely, to find out what relation conditions among his own race in America bore to conditions among the oppressed of European nations. With this thought in mind, his book ends with the most hopeful outlook for his own people, and he believes that, had they the choice, the American negroes, even in the South, would not be willing to exchange their own troubles and burdens for those of any other nation or group of people in Europe or elsewhere. Interesting is Dr. Washington's reiteration of the fact that the "Man Farthest Down" in Europe is the woman. For the man of even the most oppressed class of the most backward nation, there seems to be some hope, compared to the lot of their womenkind. Education must solve the problem for all the suffering peoples, Dr. Washington believes. We can forgive him his one-sided convictions on this subject, knowing what wonderful things the education he has obtained for them has done for his own race in our own country here.

Two volumes that may be treated as one, so well do they offset each other in subject, come from the press of the Macmillan Company. "Social Progress in Contemporary Europe," by Frederick A. Ogg, is a careful, painstaking and extremely useful gathering of facts and figures, showing the social developments of the past century in the chief European countries. The author has grouped and classified his comprehensive subject in such a way as to leave a clear, complete picture in the reader's mind, making his book one of great value as a work of reference. One little lack surprises the reader, however. So well, and so exhaustively has the writer treated his subject, that one wonders why, in his chapter on "The Growth of English Democracy," he has omitted all mention of the great budget fight of 1910, one of the most important political events of more than a century in England. More recent developments, such as Chancellor Lloyd George's insurance acts, are mentioned, but not that same chancellor's memorable land value budget clauses.

Offsetting and completing this volume comes "The New Immigration," by Dr. Peter Roberts. Here we see the men of southeastern Europe escaping from conditions portrayed in Prof. Ogg's book, coming in by hundreds to this land of freedom. We see the reception they meet here, the way in which their unexpressed but cherished hopes are fulfilled, or more often not fulfilled, and how American understanding and sympathy, or the lack of it, makes or mars these expectant citizens. There is much in this book that could be quoted did space permit. It is to be strongly recommended to all who are struggling with social problems of to-day.

"Changing America," by Edward A. Ross, will be eagerly read by all who enjoyed the author's brilliant volume on "The Changing Chinese." This present work is a series of articles culled from various magazines, and as such lacks the coherence of the other book. But it treats of subjects nearer home, and it treats of them with the same outspoken honesty and the same directness that characterizes all Prof. Ross' work. Many of the problems of to-day are touched upon here, brilliantly, with virility and a delightful directness of style. It is hard to say which of the articles is most interesting, as each subject will come with a different appeal to each different reader. But it is safe to say that some of the most daring writing in the book can be found in the chapters on "Increasing Divorce," "Women in Industry," "Commercialism Rampant!" and "The Suppression of Important News."

The First Spring Novels

And Some Late Fall Ones

Reviewed for the Book Review by F. M. Holly, Fremont Rider, Doris Webb, Edna Kenton and others

THE HAPPY WARRIOR.*

It begins back a quarter century ago, does the first book of the "Happy Warrior," "Illustrating the Elements of Chance," when gallant young Lord Burdon runs athwart a Multan Khan bullet down on the Indian frontier, and leaves sweet, ill-starred little Audrey and an unborn son back up in London.

Back, so, too, is the second book, "Illustrating the Elements of Folly," of the details of that unfortunate marriage, of the coming into the world of the "Happy Warrior," of the accession to title and estates of easy-going Mr. Letham and his pretty, whip-handed wife. So far, rapid narrative and vivid characterization, with a tolerant detachment on the part of the author more than occasionally reminiscent of Thackeray.

But with the third book, the "Book of the Happy, Happy Time, the Element of Youth," begins sheer delight, in which laughter and tears—the hardly repressed chuckle and the sudden catch in the throat—succeed each other on almost every page. We see little Percival, led into the heritage, his, but not his, getting his first peep of the "Normous"; old, loyal, Mr. Amber, seeing his dear dead young master in the little lad perched on the high ladder in the cloistered library; the loyalest of loyal friendships springing up between the little Warrior and Lady Burdon's Rollo; bluff Mr. Hannaford, with his "eighteen-stun proper," and his "gentlefolk's little carts' little horses"; dear, patient, bitter Aunt Maggie, biding for twenty years her time of revenge; quiet, broad-poised Japhra, with his van and devoted little Ima. How valiantly they all love the sturdy lad whom we follow up into manhood: how, too, we love him!

Enters with the fourth book, as is proper with the "Book of Storms and of Threatening Storm," "the Element of Love." Snow-white-and-rose-red is Percival's name for Her—"frozen white and frozen red," as we come to know. That night, with Dora in the drive at Abbey Royal—go back to "Richard Feverel" for its like.

But swiftly, swiftly to all but Percival himself, comes his majority, when, in the "Book of Fights and of the Big Fight," enters the "Element of Courage." In three fast-moving chapters, "Boss Maddox Shows His Hand," "Ima Shows Her Heart," and "Percival Shows His Fists"—no common skill, by the way, went into the making of this book's chapter headings. Then comes Percival's fight with Foxy Pinsent, a ring battle which seeks its equal in all English literature—and maybe finds it, maybe not, in "Rodney Stone." So fast hurries Fate on to the Big Fight, the test of the Warrior's manhood, a test which only a man could meet. "What matters death," as Japhra says at the pitiful, splendid close, "'tis always victory." And even poor, little Ima, "her body shielding him from the immense rain," as he lay there on the Downs, her mouth to his—"so she lay, scarcely breathing; so she held him—hers, her own"—even she comes to agree.

A wonderful novel, of which it is only difficult to speak with moderation—so fresh in phrase and style, so searching in analysis, so fine in spirit, all the more unexpected because it comes from an author comparatively unknown.

THE NET.*

Everybody who reads best-sellers knows that a story bearing the name of Rex Beach on the title page is sure to prove full of interest. "The Net" has an absorbing plot, but I would not recommend it to a person suffering from insomnia. The heroine is a Sicilian countess, a veritable golden girl, with hair, eyes and cheeks aflame with health; even her voice held this glowing, golden quality. Norvin Blake, a rich New Orleans cotton broker, has gone to Sicily to visit his friend, Martel Savigno, Count of Martinello. The Count is on the eve of marriage with the Golden Girl, and great preparations are being made for the feast. In the midst of these festivities he is foully murdered by the Mafia, the leader having been feared by everyone throughout the countryside for a very long time. Blake is with the Count when he is fatally attacked, but escapes with a slight wound and with the haunting thought that he has acted the coward in not trying to defend his friend. This thought is ever present, and he goes so fas as to seek danger whenever possible in order that he may discipline his nature and control his fear.

The Countess, with a peasant girl as companion, whose father has also been murdered by the Mafia, gives up her life to revenge the death of her fiancé. Five years elapse, and Blake has taken up his old life in New Orleans, having lost track of the Countess. We now find him making light love to Myra Nell Warren, typical Southern belle, with a train of admirers, spending her days eating chocolates and her evenings in harmless flirtations. Blake becomes involved in a semi-engagement with her just at the time he discovers the Countess is masquerading as a trained nurse, for she and her peasant companion have discovered that the man they seek is in New Orleans. One horror follows another until the enemy is captured, only to escape when he nearly puts an end to Blake in a thrilling encounter. The court pronounces this man guiltless; so the people take up the cause of miscarried justice, and a lynching follows. This episode is based upon the famous New Orleans Mafia trial of twenty years ago.

Mr. Beach says that "in some quarters the farcical outcome of the trial was blamed upon Louisiana's peculiar legal code. But the truth is, our Northern cities had not at that time felt the power of organized crime."

Mr. Beach does not dwell altogether on the dark side of life, however, and at the last the horrors are forgotten in contemplating the happiness of Blake and his Golden Girl, while Myra Nell disposes of herself by slyly annexing a husband.

leads off. Following come the adventures of the Arlésienne, of the kind Mr. Smith, of the Foundling, of the Pig's head, of Fleurette, of the Miracle, of the Fickle Goddess, and finally the chronicle of a St. Martin's summer.

Pujol started his professional career as a poor little "buttons" in a continental café. There he learned the English language. Later on he went to England and for a short time was professor of French in a young ladies' academy. Never before nor since have young ladies in an academy learned such French. Aristide taught with joy and abandon. He stood on the platform and told artless, delightful stories which made the correct young ladies bubble and gurgle and shriek with laughter. The young ladies lapped up idiomatic French like kittens at the cream jug. But when the vicar set the midterm examination, it was found that not one could give the list of words in al which take s in the plural! The outraged headmistress dismissed Aristide, because "pupils have to be taught, not interested." Aristide leaving the seminary tumbled straight into the home of the "kind" Mr. Smith. Aristide could always be trusted to tumble into a new complication upon the termination of an old one.

The adventure of Fleurette shows the most winning side of Aristide's personality. Her true name was Marie-Joséphine, but people called her Fleurette because she looked like a flower. "She was a slender lily—so white, and her hair had the flash of gold on it. . . She was diaphane, diaphanous . . . impalpable as cigarette-smoke . . . a little nose like nothing at all, with nostrils like infinitesimal seashells." And this exquisite bit of humanity was married to a burly Englishman, who wanted to call her Flossie because Fleurette was a "fool name," but compromised on "old girl." When the burly Englishman deserted her, Aristide assumed the responsibility, cared for her tenderly and lied gloriously to ease her broken heart. When she had left the little room over the cabbage shop for the shadowy palaces of the world unknown, it came out that she had died not for love of the treacherous Englishman, but for love of the loyal, adoring Aristide.

BUNKER BEAN.*

"As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he"—and it didn't matter whether the thought, as in Bunker Bean's case, was of Napoleon Bonaparte and old King Ram Tah. Of course, you wouldn't have connected old man Breede's shrinking little stenographer with Napoleon; it took the "psychic" Countess Casanova—and a dollar—to do that. But once having started this reincarnation business, the rest was easy; and, thanks to a fortunate windfall from his aunt, Bean soon had the mummy of his ancient Ram Tah acting as furniture for his Morningside apartment and inspiration in his worldly rise. For, meanwhile, Bean, emerging from his chrysalis of shyness, had attracted the attention of the flapper daughter of his multi-millionaire employer. Abetted by her suffragette, cigarette-smoking grandmother, her courtship—it wasn't his at all—proceeded faster than the "little old last year's car" she forced upon him. It interrupted Bean's communion with Ram Tah and Breede's explosive dictation of such interminabilities as: "Where maint'nance f'r both roadway an' 'quipment is clearly surcharged, extent of excess of maint'nance over normal 'quirements cannot be taken at present earning power, an' this 'll haf t' be understood before nex' meetin' d'r'ectors"—

Supposing Bunker did worry some about the cost of his dearest Chubbie's "little ol' rags"; supposing Breede did bemoan the loss of the only stenographer able to take his dictation sensibly; suppose the said Chubbie's mother, on receipt of the news, did have to send to White Plains for "more of it"; and Napoleon chewed the stuffing out of Ram Tah—beside the contentment of Bunker and his little old flippant flapper, "I can conceive of nothing of less consequence."

THE REEF.*

In "The Reef," Edith Wharton leaves behind her the elemental atmosphere into which she walked so amazingly when she wrote "Ethan Frome," and returns to the rarified world with which she is more often identified, with its certainties of conventions and its appalling uncertainties of transgression. It will be called a daring novel by some minds, who demand that a woman who adventures in the first chapter shall commit hari-kari, go—logical outcome—onto the street, or into a nunnery when "finis" is written. For Sophie Viner does no one of these things. She merely gives up marrying a young man whom she does not love, that she may keep unsullied that which she has had—her weeks with Darrow, and goes to India for the good of her pocketbook, with an unpleasant old woman whom she has secretaried before. But, essentially, it is not a daring novel.

For the subtleties of silences are too foggy. Anna, betrothed to Darrow, with whom Sophie adventured a few weeks in Paris, later chooses Sophie as her little daughter's governess, and with Sophie, Anna's young step-son Owen falls promptly in love. Darrow comes onto the stage set thus, and complications dangerously suggestive of Greek tragedy situations ensue. Darrow and Sophie meet and are silent. Owen and Sophie help to keep the silence intact. Anna is puzzled—and silent. When, in the climax chapters, the principals talk, it is from a conventional standpoint that is almost not to be understood in this age of "facing things." One feels this, too, as one struggles with these strugglers, that their uncertainties, if not put upon them by Mrs. Wharton, are at least coincident with her own attitude toward their problems. If this were not so, it would be almost impossible, with such a bright breeze as Sophie might have been, not to have set all the doors wide open and let the wind blow through the house.

In the same silence and uncertainty, Anna takes with Darrow her own secret hour.

The social problem of "The Reef" is too thready, handled so, for this period. Given the same situations, and the modern spirit of inquiry into them instead of the appalled hush before them, a remarkable novel might have been written. As it stands, however, "The Reef" takes its place with "problem novels" of a past quarter century, not of the present or the future.

THE WHITE SHIELD.*

Perhaps the most interesting feature about this book of short stories by the late Myrtle Reed is a memorial brochure from the publishers quoting two articles from The Book News Monthly—one on this much-loved writer as her friends knew her, and the other telling why her books are popular. Everyone who purchases the book should see that this brochure is included.

"The White Shield" contains twenty-one very short stories, many of them in the author's sentimental vein. The story which gives the title to the book tells of the love of an artist for a woman who teaches him her creed, that a man's art is neither more nor less than the expression of himself, and in order to obtain an exalted expression, his first business is with himself. "When a man's art is true it is because he himself is true."

"A Laggard in Love" tells the old, old story of how a girl regains the love of her fickle fiancé by a carefuly planned campaign of indifference, interspersed with a flirtation or two calculuated to arouse the jealousy of even an apathetic lover.

"A Child of Silence" portrays the touching reunion of a husband and wife after the death of their child.

In "The Dweller in Bohemia," the girl is rescued from an artificial career by the man to whom she makes the great surrender. And so on through the book the reader will find characteristic stories of their favorite author, whose tragic death continues to be mourned by a wide circle of readers throughout the country.

THE LADY AND SADA SAN.*

Although the Lady of the Decoration is married and lives in America with "Jack," her scientific husband, she has to go back to Japan for her second appearance in book form. In accordance with this necessity, Jack, as the story opens, has sternly made up his mind that he is going to Manchuria to investigate a peculiarly alluring germ, and the Lady of the Decoration, after a few days alone, finds that she simply cannot stand it without him. So, on the same steamer that carries her decision to Jack, she sails for Japan. Forbidden Manchuria, she will nevertheless be as near him as possible. Such is her plan. On the way out, she has Sada San for a roommate—black-haired, blue-eyed and charming, with the training of an American girl and the fascination of a Japanese woman. She is the child of an American derelict and a Japanese mother, and she has been brought up in America by the kindly missionary who found her after her parents died. Full of enthusiasm for her mother's country, she now goes back to her mother's brother, quite ignorant of the manner of man he is and of the fate of ostracism inevitably dealt out to Eurasians like herself. The Lady of the Decoration knows, understands and shudders. Fortunately, however, Sada mentions Billy. Thereafter a rescuer looms.

The story is told by letters to a friend, a difficult method where there is much plot, but amply suited in this case to the story and to Frances Little's style, which is distinctly epistolary. It is a curious manner. One minute it seems merely the superficial chatter with which any clever woman fills her letters, and the next minute it whips out an unforgettable simile or brings you up with a round turn face to face with some burning, human fact.

If one were not so anxious to know what becomes of Sada, the descriptions in the intervals of the story would get more consideration. As it is, the reader is conscious of some delightful humorous moments and some of deep feeling. But it is all quite incidental to Sada San herself. And Billy provides the happy ending.

THE RED HAND OF ULSTER.*

Given an American millionaire of Irish ancestry, London fêted, yet no lover of Britain; given a Home Rule bill, just enacted; given any number of proud Ulstermen who will not be dictated to, and you have the scene all ready for a mighty revolution. Here, indeed, is provocation for a faithful Orangeman! When England says, "Go free—govern yourself!" what can a self-respecting man of Ulster do but firmly refuse to obey such tryannous orders?

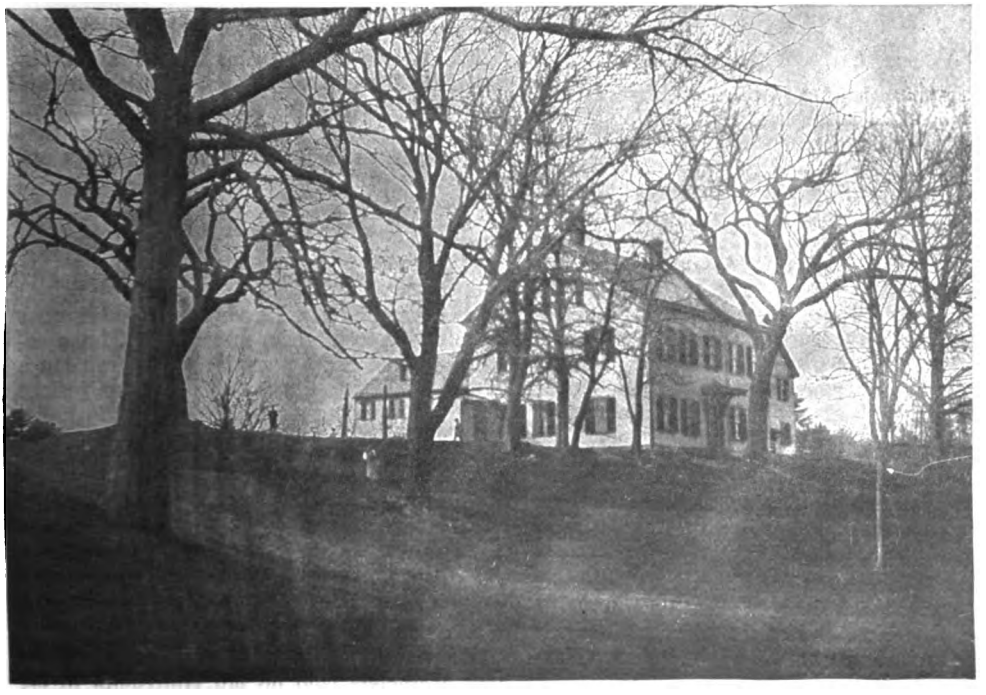
financing the rebellion, sets sail on his palatial yacht for Ireland's shore, there to set down ammunition and stir up strife, with the help of his delightful Irish secretary, Bob Power, a man of such strenuousness and versatility that he carries on a successful love affair at the same time. The father of the lady of his choice, Lord Kilmore, of Errigal, in whose words the story is told, is an Irish peer, with a taste for literature and a distaste for his nephew. This nephew, Godfrey, who once inspired his uncle with a never-fulfilled desire to write the story of a highly respectable, God-fearing man, a useful citizen, a good father, generous, high-principled, beloved, who, seized with a sudden murderous impulse, killed a man who had been boring him for hours—this nephew, by giving entirely incorrect secret information to the British government, puts certain astute officials on the right track and precipitates the rebellion. And before that rebellion is over a shell from a British warship has completely destroyed — a statue of Queen Victoria, just outside the Belfast City Hall. More insulting, however, is the attitude of the British troops, who fire in the air and refrain from shooting down their enemies.

No wonder that, when the warfare is over, Lord Kilmore, officially delegated as ambassador, is instructed not to demand Mr. Redmond's head on a charger, but to insist that all the English clear out of the country, bag and baggage—and no more talk about Home Rule!

"And leave us to manage Ireland ourselves," adds the ambassador, when he talks with the intermediary, Sir Samuel Clithering.



"'But,' said Clithering; 'but—I thought you didn't want Home Rule.'
'We don't. We won't have it at any price.'
'But that is Home Rule of the most extreme kind.'
'There's no use splitting hairs,' I said, 'or discussing finicking points of political nomenclature. The point for you to grasp is that those are our terms.'"

Thus did the Ulstermen triumph over their oppressors!

As usual, Mr. Birmingham (James Hannay Owen, to be accurate) has twisted all sorts of delightful humorous turns through his story.

In a prefatory note, we are told that no character is in any way copied from life. This is obviously true, as far as the American is concerned. His habit of beginning most remarks with "I reckon" makes him seem more of a stage or novel type than a creature founded on fact. Otherwise, these story people — Godfrey, prying, nagging, foppish, a worshipper of the socially prominent; McNiece, who delivers a harangue on the seventeen different theories regarding the birthplace of St. Patrick, while dinner waits; Lady Moyne, whose smile makes one lose track of the conversation; and whimsical Lord Kilmore himself—are most convincingly human.

THE WOMEN OF SHAKESPEARE.*

It is a fascinating game that Frank Harris has invented, that of tracking down his quarry —Shakespeare—through the intricate mazes of his printed words. He played at it once in a book he called "The Man Shakespeare." He draws yet nearer to the object of his chase in the present book. I happened, just the other day, to be reading Chesterton's cheerfully sane theory that great genius is simple. Critics and literary historians worry themselves unnecessarily, he says, about the man Shakespeare. The reason there is such a paucity of biographical material about him is that he was so normally like other men that there was nothing to record of him. He wrote his plays as lesser men do lesser tasks —as the work of the day. But such a simple solution would not satisfy Frank Harris. His Shakespeare is a subtle being; in his nature are deeps within deeps. Mr. Harris has made it his mission to explore them. And whether one agrees with him or not, one must be grateful to him for his labors, for, as I say, it is a fascinating game, and it makes a fascinating book.

Mr. Harris brings to his book, first of all, a genius for choosing the apt quotation—the one that proves his point. They stand out from his pages with a startling vividness that strikes you suddenly when you are quite unaware.

> "Marriage is a matter of more worth
> Than to be dealt in by attorneyship."

> "And what is wedlock forced but hell,
> An age of discord and continual strife."

Of course, as Mr. Harris says, Shakespeare is referring to his own marriage! The characters of the early plays, he says, were but a crowd of lifeless marionettes till the jealous wife, Adriana, appears in "Comedy of Errors." She is Ann Hathaway. And we believe him. Yet his points are sometimes forced. He makes much of Adriana's revealing of her age (Ann Hathaway was eight years older than Shakespeare). In the play, Adriana asks merely, "Hath homely age the alluring beauty took from my poor cheeks?" Any woman asking such a question would expect in emphatic denial "It hath not." And Mr. Harris has a way, too, of passing over as unimportant characters who do not contribute to his thesis. The women characters in "The Taming of the Shrew" hardly deserve consideration. "Neither Katharina nor Bianca is worthy to be called a woman's portrait." This of the full-lived, high-hearted Katharine! And that highly humorous dissertation to wives, Mr. Harris pronounces "an appallingly foolish lecture." Mr. Harris, don't take your Shakespeare so seriously.

But all this is prelude; with "Romeo and Juliet" enters the dark lady of the sonnets. And thereafter, Mary Fitton appears as Juliet, Rosalind, Portia, Viola, Beatrice, Helena, Cleopatra. Personally, I grow weary of this ever-recurring Mary Fitton. In "Romeo and Juliet" she appears in two characters—in Juliet herself, and in Romeo's first-loved lady. Benvolio says, "And I will make thee think thy swan a crow." "In this crow we have the first allusion to Mary Fitton's black eyes," says Mr. Harris. And again the reference to "Romeo stabbed with a wench's black eye" is pronounced astounding! But, really, range in eye color is not wide.

It is in "Antony and Cleopatra" that one is most nearly convinced. It is in the intermediate stages of his argument that Mr. Harris weakens. Rosalind, Beatrice, Portia and the rest are such charmingly nice girls all, that one rather resents their attribution to the "gypsy wanton." But Cleopatra, we admit, may have been, no, must have been, a portrait of Mary Fitton. The latter argument is again weak. Judith Shakespeare may have been her father's model for Marina, Perdita and Miranda, but it is hard to escape the feeling that the Judith phase is brought in to round out a theory.

Just one other point cannot be passed over. One wishes that the author's answers to his critics had not been interpolated into the text. "I say it was his wife, and the critics laugh!" It lacks dignity, and is a little childish withal.

Yet to reiterate, it is a fascinating tale, and to relish it to the full one must enter the game in its own spirit.

Courts, Criminals and the Camorra.*

It is quite conceivable that Mr. Arthur Train has taken a wicked pleasure in shocking the susceptibilities of the literal minded. To that great majority who take many of the so-called facts in life for granted, never questioning them because they have always been told that they were so, his book, "Courts, Criminals and the Camorra," will come in the nature of a cold douche, beneficial, no doubt, but somewhat of a shock.

Mr. Train loses no time but gets down to business in his first essay, The Pleasant Fiction of the Presumption of Innocence. Mr. Train is always sprightly and nearly always logical. By the time he has finished with the above-mentioned "Pleasant Fiction" there is hardly enough left of it for decent interment. The essays on "Detectives and Others" and "Detectives Who Detect" are interesting and instructive. In "Sensationalism and Jury Trials," Mr. Train strikes out from the shoulder at the yellow journals in a way that is refreshing to behold.

But it is the latter half of the book that will probably interest the average reader the most. The history of the Society of the Camorra, from its inception in 1820, its original political significance and its enormous influence and power and final degeneration to a merely criminal organization makes absorbing reading. "An American at Viterbo" is a vivid account of the celebrated trial of the Camorrists, still fresh in the memory of most of us, together with a graphic description of the principal figures in that sordid drama. The last essay, "The Mala Vita in America" is of interest to every citizen of this country, particularly since six hundred thousand Italians out of the million and a half in the United States remain in our principal seaport, to the citizens of New York.

Recent Events and Present Policies in China.*

Few people are better equipped to give an intelligent and expert opinion on Chinese affairs than Mr. J. O. P. Bland. Furthermore, Mr. Bland, during his long residence in China, was known as "no man's man"; and his opinion, whether you agree with it or not, is worth an eager reception and most careful consideration as emanating from a man whose wide and lengthy observation has dictated his conclusions without conscious bias. If they are colored by his temperament, so is all testimony of value, excepting testimony as to mathematical fact. This thoughtful and substantial book, from a man of unsurpassed opportunities to know Chinese people and institutions from both racial and international points of view, demands and will receive serious treatment. In addition to his reflections on the drift of recent events and policies in China, he presents to you the facts of those events and policies. The large and attractive volume is profusely illustrated with interesting, though not particularly relevant, photographs.

His ideas concerning the permanence of the Republic form, naturally, at the moment, the most interesting as well as the main part of the book. The Chinese, like the Hindoos, he says, have always lacked historic consciousness, and the past of the nation presents but myths and ghostly whisperings. Thus, our historic estimate of them is largely conjectural and much disturbed by the effect of their literature. But having at last come to recognize, in spite of Kipling, that nothing essential divides human nature in the East from the West, we cannot delude ourselves into thinking that all the immemorial instincts and habits of the oldest civilization on earth are to change by magic at the word "Republic." Though many of them are ardent and unselfish, the speculative theorists and ignorant agitators of Young China forget that they are merely the product of an economic unrest historically chronic in China. The procreative restlessness of the race, born of ancestor worship and Confucianism, has been the persisting cause of these periodic disorganizations, and this cause is to be removed only by slow educative process. It has resulted in the problem of how to make one rice bowl fill three stomachs. The persisting absence of purposeful will power—which is born, historically, at least, of religious inspiration—is another source of this periodic unrest. Never possessing an energizing belief, China is further devitalized just now by the fact that her undisciplined boy politicians have discarded the ethical ideas and traditional culture of the race, and have offered no new moral ideas as substitutes for the canons of the sages which they no longer respect. The third source of unrest is the lack of an authoritative aristocracy. If she possessed a ruling class of priests or warriors to guide the people in the wilderness of new ideas, she might not be confronted with long years of disorder.

Mr. Bland thinks that salvation at the hands of Young China is impossible. The present paroxysm which established the Republic is no different from the others, and, through them all, the social structure of the country has remained permanent. The Republic is merely an accidental result of the last revolution. The ultimate cohesion of the race has survived many such periods of revolution; and except that it will plunge China into a longer term of disorganization and disruption, the Republic is politically unimportant. It will leave no marks upon the social and political fabric. The army, uncontrolled and uncontrollable, has already repudiated it; the horde of hungry politicians remains absorbed in futile arguments and sordid intrigues; the government is distracted by amateur politicians and without power or policy. The very condition which recent writers have hailed as hopeful for the maintenance of a democratic government—the existence of local autonomy—is the greatest of the obstacles in the way of representative government. For the system of ancient local independence, though always popularly impassive and inarticulate, has been so perfected that no central government can exist—the Throne only ruled; it never sought to govern. China is at present a nation of eighteen Irelands minus the police.

The master passion for loot—so significant in China because it is quite independent of the political opinions of the looters or the looted—is only an acute central symptom of chronic economic distress. This distress must continue as long as the country is so appallingly overpopulated. The well-wishers of China might better suspend the futile task of seeking to relieve inevitable famine and attack at its source the fundamental cause of famine — strive to educate public opinion against marriages of minors and polygamy.

It requires no intimate knowledge of Chinese people or history to realize that the Manchus lost their throne not through their tyranny, as Young China claims — for the Chinese are immemorially used to tyranny—but through inefficiency. Dr. Sun Yat-Sen is a semi-Oriental, who has learned nothing from the European attitude of scientific inquiry, and who displays the almost inhuman lack of humor which characterizes many of the world's political crusaders. When he attempts to set up a new House Celestial in which the masses of the people must find themselves utter strangers, he presents a peril greater than the decadence of the Manchus—the peril of abrupt and cataclysmic change. Young China, which was born in '95, after the Japanese victory, is but a manifestation of the returned student. The pouring of new wine into old bottles always runs the risk of ominous results. The moral disease resulting from higher education in China was the same as it was in India, and was greatly increased by the lack of centralized authority. In both countries there are turned out each year swarms of needy clerks, for whom no employment can possibly be found, and unfitted by their education for any useful occupation. The queueless, frock-coated students of China already demonstrate that they have no higher ideas of honor than the rest; and in no sense has Young China departed from the historic lack of common honesty in Chinese officialdom. This evil can be lessened—in China as elsewhere—only by steady pressure of public condemnation. The Republic cannot be the harbinger of a miracle, and since it is based on an alien civilization and not on native social, economic and political limitations and power of growth, it is a costly and wasteful experiment, foredoomed to failure. But the splendid qualities and instinctive common sense of the masses will assert themselves in time to avert the worst consequences of Young China's headlong iconoclasts.

A River of Romance.*

There are three kinds of bores, someone says—the man who tells the plot of a play, the man who tells the plot of a novel, and the one who tells his dreams. At various times I have been tempted to add a fourth—the man who describes his travels, either in books or out. But once in a while, praise be, comes a man who can make a book of travel interesting, wittily entertaining—who can make one long to follow in his footsteps. Such a one is Paul Gwynne, who writes of Spain's romantic river, the Guadalquivir.

The charm of his book, like all charm, is hard to define. He does not write history, yet he instills into his book the atmosphere of a picturesque historic past. He writes attractive narrative that is not filled with boresome anecdote. He does not "describe," although he flashes a series of vivid pictures onto the mind's screen. He writes of the art of Murillo, the bull fight, the bolero, Moorish architecture, of the scenery along the way, of the events of the day's travels. He writes with a style that has distinction. And, above all, he has wit, appreciation, and a sense of humor—and the greatest of these is, as always, the last.

The best that can be said of the book is that it fulfills the purpose of a book of travels—not to impart information about a certain part of the world's surface, but to create in the minds of those who have not seen it, and to recall to the minds of those who have, its particular charm—whatever it may be.

My Friends at Brook Farm.†

A lot of people have heard of the "Brook Farm experiment"; few know very much definitely about it. It would probably be imagined that no survivors of the Brook Farm community were alive to-day; but Mr. Sears, despite his age, is very much alive, and, although only a lad in the community, he proves that a boy at the impressionable age of nine to thirteen can apprehend and retain a good deal.

He tells mainly of his own humble connection with that quaint, courageous little New England socialistic "phalanx," but in the telling contrives to give more than a little of their ideas and ideals and a vivid picture of their intimate life and daily routine. Incidentally, he demolishes several well-established illusions, chief of them one that Brook Farm was a failure. In one sense it was—it stopped; but it was through accident, or, rather, outside hostility, not lack of inward harmony or financial prosperity. Singularly of one mind, the Brook Farmers were as contented and truly happy a community, according to Mr. Sears, as one could hope to find. Though disdaining financial prosperity for its own sake, they yet, by their patience and industry, made a bleak, sandy, worn-out farm a model market and flower garden, and raised and packed produce bringing the highest prices in the Boston market. In fact, it was their prosperity that roused the hatred of their Puritan neighbors, and it was the incendiary destruction of their three main buildings, one after another, that broke up the colony.

That was a wonderful coterie, the Brook Farmers and their friends. Of most of them, Mr. Sears is able to give vivid reminiscence: Emerson, who often smiled, but seldom laughed; Margaret Fuller, whose English was harder to read, and understand, than Dante's Italian; Charles A. Dana, there "Chief of the Orchard Group"; Horace Greeley, through whom the Albany family of Sears came in touch with Brook Farm, and many others. At that time, 1840, Philadelphia was the country's literary center; the brilliant "Boston school" was just beginning its work. But of all that the little Sears lad knew nothing. He did know that, to his Dutch taste, the brown bread and brewis of the Yankees at Brook Farm were unbearable, and that the Farm boasted a wonderful cave, just right for robber brigands. These are the sort of bits he lingers longest over; they are what make his little book so vivid and real.

Fremont Rider

Auguste Rodin, the famous French sculptor, never poses his models in the conventional manner, but keeps them in motion constantly, in order that he may catch those spontaneous and characteristic attitudes which are the life of good sculpture, but which cannot be assumed by models at will. According to Muriel Ciolkowska, whose short study of "Rodin" has just been published by McClurg's, a recent subject for a portrait to whom Rodin's methods were new, remarked, after her first "sitting," "It didn't seem to me that I was posing for a sculptor, but for a cinematograph." The same author caps the above story by one in which a model asked Rodin what pose she should assume, and received the reply, "Stay in the studio."

CATCH-MY-PAL; a story of good Samaritanship. By Rev. R. J. Patterson. 192p. 12mo. Doran. $1n.

Story of the Catch-my-pal Temperance Movement, which had its inception in Armagh, one of the most drunken districts of Ireland, swept that district free of drink in an incredibly small time and is now spreading through Europe. Author, who started the propaganda, took his idea from Christ's calling of the disciples, Christ called Peter, Peter called Andrew, etc.—each convert becomes responsible for the conversion of some one else. By appeal to the social conscience of the drunkard and to his play-instinct, Mr. Patterson achieved instant success.

THE MEDIAEVAL CHURCH ARCHITECTURE OF ENGLAND. By Chas. Herb. Moore. 23 pls. in half-tone & 149 illus. in the text. 260p.8vo. Macm. $3.50n.

Purpose is to set forth the character of mediæval architecture in England in the light of a structural analysis and comparison with the French Gothic art and of the conditions under which it was produced. Author has been impelled to the present work because he believes that the mediæval architecture of England ought to be more adequately set forth than in the past, both to demonstrate its essential differences from the French Gothic and to do justice to its finer qualities. RELIGIOUS LIBERTY. By Francesco Ruffini. Trans. by J. Parker Heyes. Preface by J. B. Bury 560p.8vo. Put. $3.50n.

Professor of ecclesiastical law at the University of Turin shows how the theory of religious liberty originated and developed, and how it was realized by legislation, whether fully or in the various defective forms of toleration. The painful story of persecution is omitted, the advance of liberty being what is here recorded. Index. (Theological Translation Lib.)

PHARISAISM, ITS AIM AND ITS METHOD. By Rob. Travers Herford. 349p.12mo. Put. $1.50n.

Aim of the author has been to present and make clear the Pharisaic conception of religion, the point of view from which they regarded it, and the methods by which they dealt with it. He has not sought to write a panegyric on the Pharisees, but, so far as it may be possible for one who is not a Jew, to present their case from their own standpoint, and not, as is so often done, as a mere foil to the Christian religion. Index. (Crown Theological Lib.)

THE EARLY ENGLISH DISSENTERS IN THE LIGHT OF RECENT RESEARCH (1550-1641). By Champlin Burrage. 2v.8vo. Put. $6.50n.

Author's purpose is to give adequate information relating to this subject, material for which has been noticeably lacking in even the best histories of the Church of England. Material is important especially to the student of English church history. References to and corrections of many previous publications are made. Texts of a number of papers procured in Holland, now for the first time reproduced in England, are included. Index.

DEMOCRACY AND THE CHURCH. By S. G. Smith. 371p.12mo. Apltn. $1.50n.

Author believes "Christianity has fulfilled a unique social function of the utmost value as a by-product of its religious life." Chapters include: Jesus and democracy; Papacy and liberty; Social influence of the Reformation; Democracy and education; Social spirit of modern Christianity; The democracy of tomorrow. Index. ARMAMENTS AND ARBITRATION; OR, THE PLACE OF FORCE IN THE INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS OF STATES. By Rear-Adm. A. T. Mahan. 259p.8vo. Harp. $1.40n.

As a recognized authority on naval subjects, Admiral Mahan stands among the few who are absolutely frank and outspoken in their opinions regarding the naval policy of the United States. He discusses exhaustively the several factors involved in the contrasted methods of armament and arbitration, with all that the two words imply—force on the one hand, law on the other. By the author of "From sail to steam," "The influence of sea power upon history," etc.

THE GERMAN EMPEROR AND THE PEACE OF THE WORLD. By A. H. Fried. Pref. by Norman Angell. 234p.12mo. Doran. $2n.

Purpose of this book by the leader of the German Pacifist movement is: first, to prove by comparing his deeds with his words, that the Kaiser is heartily in favor of a European rapprochement; second, to define the means by which a universal peace alliance might be brought about; third, to demonstrate how the spirit of the age has affected the Kaiser so that he stands forth to-day not as War Lord, but as Peace Lord of the world. Author was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize.

THE NEW INDUSTRIAL DAY; a book for men who employ men. By Wm. C. Redfield. 222p.12mo. Cent. $1.25n.

Author, a member of Congress from Brooklyn, N. Y., is himself a manufacturer and widely known as an expert on the scientific development of our industries, and his book is intended for the men who employ other men.

A NEW GOVERNMENT FOR THE BRITISH EMPIRE. By F. W. Bussell. 120p.8vo. Longm. $1.25n.

Author thinks "popular government" of present time is no more democratic than former "class government"; urges dissolution of Commons, local powers going to provincial assemblies; remodelling of Lords with delegates from the whole empire, to control imperial affairs; more direct personal influence of king on people and employer on employed; and abolition of corporations. Gives history and theory of state formation.

RAILROADS, RATES AND REGULATIONS. By W. Z. Ripley. 677p.maps.8vo. Longm. $3n.

Author, who is Nathaniel Ropes professor of economics in Harvard University, has given much time to the study of railroads, and here gives the results. Contents: History of transportation in the United States; Theory of railroad rates; Rate making in practice; Personal discrimination; Local discrimination; Problems in routing; Freight classification; Trunk line rate system: a distance tariff; Special rate problems; Movement of rates since 1870: rate wars; Act to regulate commerce of 1887: 1887-1905, emasculation of the law; Elkins amendments Hepburn act of 1906; Effects of law of 1906; Mann-Elkins act of 1910; Commercial court, freight rate advances of 1910; Long and short haul clause; Conflict of federal and state authority. Index.

ENGLISH FARMING, PAST AND PRESENT. By R. E. Prothero. 517p.8vo. Longm. $4n.

History of English farming, tracing the influence of its progress on the social conditions of those engaged in it, from the manorial system before 1300 to 1912, and appendixes contain chronological list of agricultural writers down to 1700, with their works, statistical tables, poor laws and corn laws. Index.

ORGANIZED LABOR; its problems and how to meet them. By A. J. Portenar. 140p. 12mo. Macm. $1n.

That trades unions are necessary to secure mutual protection and advantage by united action is the writer's firm belief, but that this protection is to be secured by violence and revolution he does not believe. Arbitration which will mean justice to both sides, and intelligent co-operation which cannot succeed without mutual helpfulness and consideration, is his prophecy for organized labor. Index.

MAN OR MACHINE—WHICH?; or, an interpretation of ideals at work in industry. By "Al Priddy." 120p.12mo. Pilg. 75c.n.

Author has himself been a workingman, and knows the life of the laborer from actual experience. He believes that the time is coming, in fact, has already begun, when "idealism is to pay dividends. There is to be a reversal of the present fact, which reads, a thing economically may be right and yet humanely wrong." The success of the employer means success of the employe. The efficiency of the machine will bring higher efficiency from the operator, who will receive every conceivable precautionary safe-guard.

THE ALDRICH PLAN IN THE LIGHT OF MODERN BANKING. By Ludwig Bendix. 227p.8vo. R. R. Johnston. $2.

Aldrich plan endeavors to maintain the characteristic development of the American system, namely, decentralized banks, while at the same time it seeks to give the United States the benefits which European countries derive from central banking, achieving this through the co-operative activity of existing institutions, and by means of an agency organized by them and largely under their control. Book discusses this plan and considers in detail to what extent the plan meets the country's needs. Appendixes give the bill, a suggested plan, etc. Index.

All who attended Father Vaughan's conferences on Socialism delivered during Lent, 1912, in St. Patrick's Cathedral, New York, will be interested in this further discussion of the subject. Are Socialism and Christianity opposed to each other?; Would Socialism redress industrial wrongs?; What attitude should those who wish to uphold the Christian faith assume toward the movement?, are the questions whose various phases as exhibited in this country are presented. AMERICAN CITY GOVERNMENT; a survey of newer tendencies. By Chas. Austin Beard. 429p.pls.8vo. Cen. $2n.

Associate professor of politics, Columbia University, here lays stress on the social and economic functions of city government. Special emphasis is laid on budget-making, public utilities, street cleaning and waste disposal, industrial and vocational training, the social-center movement, playgrounds and city-planning. Index.

THE EVOLUTION OF THE COUNTRY COMMUNITY; a study in religious sociology. By Warren Hugh Wilson. 238p.12mo. Pilg. $1.25n.

Opening chapters concern social rural development, The pioneer, The land farmer, The exploiter, The husbandman, and describe the religious life peculiar to each. Considerable space is given to the value of the centralized and graded public school system as a unifying influence, and author urges that the Sunday school follow the public grading system, that it may even be a federated school before the churches are ready to federate. There is a chapter on rural morality, and another on the importance of recreation. Professor Franklin H. Giddings, of Columbia University, contributes the introduction. Index.

PENAL PHILOSOPHY; trans. by Rapelje Howell. By Gabriel Tarde. 615p.8vo. Little, B. $5n.

"With an editorial preface by E. Lindsey, and an introd. by Rob. H. Gault." Reviews recent theories of criminals' responsibility and of punishment, declaring that responsibility depends on " a certain degree of social similarity between the persons" and on the criminal's being and remaining "identical with himself." Author was French magistrate and noted criminologist. (Modern Criminal Science Ser.)

CHRISTIANIZING THE SOCIAL ORDER. By Walter Rauschenbusch. 502p.12mo. Macm. $1.50n.

Author's former book, "Christianity and the social crisis," calls for a social awakening of the moral and religious forces. This one shows that this awakening is now taking place. The present social order is examined to determine what portions have already been Christianized and what portions have not yet submitted to the revolutionizing influences of the Christian law and spirit. The processes by which these unredeemed sections of modern life can be Christianized are discussed and a Christian social order in the process of making is exhibited. Index.

THE GOVERNMENT OF AMERICAN CITIES. By Wm. Bennett Munro. 410p.8vo. Macm. $2.25n.

By professor of municipal government in Harvard University. Presents fairly and impartially all aspects of such subjects as commission government, the initiative, referendum and recall. Contains a comprehensive treatment of all phases of municipal government in this country, although a discussion of administration has been partially omitted. Index.

THE HOME RULE BILL. By John Edw. Redmond. 188p.tabs.8vo. Cass. 50c.n.

Contains the bill in full, with explanations of its provisions, the speeches delivered by Mr. Redmond on its first and second readings in the House of Commons, also his addresses at the National Convention in Dublin last April and at the Eighty Club dinner in March. In the appendix the Home Rule bills of 1886 and 1893 are compared and explained.

THE PEACE MOVEMENT IN AMERICA. By Julius Moritzen. Introd. by Jas. L. Tryon. 438p. 64illus.8vo. Put. $3n.

Picturesque presentation of later-day incidents—the signing of the treaties with Great Britain and France, the visits to this country of leading internationalists, the great awakening that has found expression in the organization of new peace societies and the linking of the existing societies into a more concrete whole. Page after page unfolds the growing American sentiment for peace instead of war. Commerce, agriculture, education, the home, cry out in unison that international contentment rests almost wholly upon national and international good-will. Index.

SWORDS AND PLOUGHSHARES; or, the supplanting of the system of war by the system of law. By Mrs. Lucia True Ames Mead. Foreword by Baroness von Suttner. 261p. 12mo. Put. $1.50n.

Author, who from the lecture platform has spoken eloquently in favor of peaceful settlement as against armed protest or aggression, has written this book in the interest of international peace. Her argument against the spread of militarism is prompted not only by a high ethical conception of the relation of man to man and of nation to nation, but by economic expediency and a common-sense view of the possibilities of development for a nation if emancipated from the debasing fear of its neighbor and the drain on its resources for the maintenance of armies and navies in competition with the growth of the military equipment of its rivals. Index.

Women

WHY WOMEN ARE SO. By Mrs. M. E. Coolidge. 379p.12mo. Holt. $1.50n.

Explains and traces the development of the woman of 1800 into the woman of to-day. It interprets and justifies to women their struggle for better things. "As a working hypothesis it is assumed that the women of the nineteenth century in America were for the most part what men expected them to be."

WOMAN IN THE UNITED STATES; trans. fr. the French by Estelle C. Porter. By Baron Paul d'Estournelles de Constant. Foreword by David Starr Jordan. 64p.port. 12mo. A. M. Robertson. 80c.n.

Author was in California during the campaign for woman's suffrage. Unexpectedly to himself he was pressed into the service of the women, and here gives his view of the American woman, who, he says, is not superior to other women, "but she has more freedom; she is courageous like others, but courageous publicly, in order to serve her cause, while the European woman, more resigned, is brave only to endure."

THE WOMAN MOVEMENT. By Ellen Karolina Sofia Key. Trans. by Mamah Bouton Borthwick. Introd. by Havelock Ellis. 239p.12mo. Put. $1.50n.

This is not a history of the woman's movement, but a statement of what Ellen Key considers to be the new phase it is now entering on, a phase in which the claim to exert the rights and functions of men is less important than the claims of woman's rights as the mother and educator of the coming generation.

WOMAN ADRIFT; THE MENACE OF SUFFRAGISM. By Harold Owen. 318p.12mo. Dut. $1.50n.

THE BUSINESS OF BEING A WOMAN. By Ida M. Tarbell. 251p.12mo. Macm. $1.25n.

"What is the business of being a woman? Is it something incompatible with full and joyous development of one's talents? Is there no place in it for economic independence? Has it no essential relation to the world's movements? Is it an episode which drains the forces and leaves a dreary wreck behind? Is it something that cannot be organized into a profession of dignity and opportunity for service and for happiness?" These are the questions which Miss Tarbell takes up in her present book.

Education

THAT BOY OF YOURS; sympathetic studies of boyhood. By Rev. Jas. Sam'l Kirtley. 250p.12mo. Doran. $1n.

Written by a man who has not forgotten that he was once a boy himself. Book is a sympathetic study of boyhood, taking the ground that there are no bad boys, that such are manufactured by misunderstanding. Treats of the normal, healthy, rough-and-tumble boy, and tells grown-ups what the world seen through a boy's eyes is like. Power of religion in a young life is emphasized, and advice given as to its best employment in shaping growing manhood.

FROEBEL'S CHIEF WRITINGS ON EDUCATION; rendered into English by S. S. F. Fletcher & J. Wilton. 266p. Longm. $1.25n.

Presents Froebel's chief works on education, not in his own phraseology, which is often confused and prolix, but in as intelligible and idiomatic a form as possible. Part 1 takes up "Education of human nature"; part 2, the writings on the kindergarten, so chosen as to show their spirit and general method. (Education Classics.)

THE PEOPLE'S SCHOOL; a study in vocational training. By Ruth Mary Weeks. 215p. 12mo. H. Miff. 60c.

Concise statement regarding vocational training movements here and abroad. Urges the necessity of vocational training for the masses because so small a percentage of the children of the country go through the high schools and so many enter industrial life at an early age. Author says "Vocational training is to educate the public mind, to embody a working ideal that will gradually transform industrial practice, until labor, no longer cramping and brutalizing, is a beautiful realization of the noblest human possibilities." (Riverside Educational Monographs.)

STUTTERING AND LISPING. By Edw. Wheeler Scripture. 265p.12mo. Macm. $1.50n.

Author has spent a number of years in studying methods of treatment for stuttering and lisping, and gives the result of his experience in this practical book. Defective speech is often the cause of a child's apparent stupidity, its becoming supersensitive and subnormal in various ways, and careful treatment should be given it to overcome the defect.

LIP-READING PRINCIPLES AND PRACTICE; a handbook for teachers and for self-instruction. By Edw. Bartlett Nitchie. 338p. 12mo. Stokes. $1.50n.

No sound can be emitted without defined contortions of the mouth, nearly the same in all individuals. The phoneticians have established the principles that put these motions in operation, teachers of the deaf and dumb have systematized the observation of them so that the sign language can be dispensed with, and even the blind, with their sensitive fingers, can be taught to read speech from touching the lips of the speaker. Mr. Nitchie gives concise and clear directions for acquiring the art; he provides many exercises and interesting lists of words that look alike when pronounced, so that persons who study his book and practice what he preaches, should be able to read the lips without hearing the sounds readily.

SHAKESPEARE, BACON AND THE GREAT UNKNOWN. By Andrew Lang. 342p.8illus. 8vo. Longm. $3n.

This book was in type when Mr. Lang died, but he had read none of the proof. He is on the side of Will Shakspere, as against Bacon and Bungay—the Great Unknown. The author, having observed, with pain, that the controversy has hitherto been passionate and acrimonious, endeavors to treat the problem with sweet reasonableness, and, if possible, with persuasive urbanity. He has endeavored to avoid violence, and he lucidly demonstrates that William Shakspere of Stratford-on-Avon, was the immortal author of the plays ascribed to him. Index.

First there is a paper, "The selection of stories for little children," by Eliz. McCracken, and another, "How to get the most good from The children's hour," by Eva March Tappan. Then the volumes are taken up separately, the material listed, classified and suggestion given for further reading. There is a list of books for parents, a list of noteworthy characters and events, and brief biographies of authors. Index.

OUTLINES OF THE HISTORY OF GERMAN LITERATURE. By John Geo. Robertson. 328p. 12mo. Put. $1.35n.

By professor of German, University of London, gives an abridgment of his "History of German literature." In this smaller volume his main effort is to indicate the general lines along which the literature of Germany has been developed. As a part of this scheme he has provided extensive chronological tables running from the fourth century to the end of the Old High German Period. He thinks parallel tabulation of events in English and other literatures will help his readers "place the phenomena and movements in German literature." Index.

THE MASTERS OF MODERN FRENCH CRITICISM. By Irving Babbitt. 438p.8vo. H. Miff. $2.50n.

Purpose, author says in his preface, is not to criticise criticism, but to study the main problems of the past century as reflected in the minds of some of its most vital and significant personalities. Sainte-Beuve especially is studied from this point of view—the most representative, though not the greatest figure of the nineteenth century. Other writers treated in detail are Madame de Staël, Joubert, Chateaubriand, Taine, Renan, Scherer and Brunetière.

THE CHILDREN'S READING. By Frances Jenkins Olcott. 354p.12mo. H. Miff. $1.25n.

Author was for many years head of the Children's Department, Carnegie Library, Pittsburgh. In this book she reviews the entire field of juvenile literature. She tells what elements are necessary to make up children's books—the value of history and biography, the effect of modern fiction, the importance of legends and fairy-lore, and so on. She points out not only what books are helpful but also what books are harmful. Among the interesting points which she brings to the front is a list of the books which great men of all ages have read during their early days and how these books helped them in their careers. Appendix contains a purchase list of children's books. Index.

THE PROBLEM OF EDWIN DROOD; a study in the methods of Dickens. By Sir Wm. Robertson Nicoll. 230p.8vo. Doran. $1.25n.

The ever fascinating problem of how Dickens meant "The mystery of Edwin Drood" to end is the subject of this book. Dickens guarded the secret so carefully that not even members of his family knew the solution. Author has gathered new materials, and endeavors to solve the mystery by means of constructive criticism combined with some hazard. He asks and answers the questions: Was Edwin Drood murdered?; Who was Datchery?; How was Edwin Drood to end? Index.

OLD CHINATOWN; a book of pictures by Arnold Genthe. By Wm. Henry Irwin. 217p. 8vo. Kenn. $2.50n.

Chinatown of San Francisco before the fire is the subject. The text by Mr. Irwin makes a frame for the remarkable pictures from photographs by Mr. Genthe. While much of what is described has survived, still some of it has passed forever, and this record of a picturesque phase of San Francisco is interesting.

CHARCOALS OF NEW AND OLD NEW YORK. Pictures and text by Francis Hopkinson Smith. 137p.4to. Dou., P. $5n.

Bound in heavy gray boards with white trimmings and a miniature illustration inset on the cover. Well printed text explains the charcoals which are the essence of the book. They show Washington arch, the harbor, Wall street, skyscrapers, Brooklyn Bridge, the City Hall, Castle Garden, Elizabeth street and Clinton Court, the Little Church Around the Corner, the Grand Cañon of the Yellow, the Stock Exchange, the subway, Madison Square, Gansevoort Market, Edgar Allan Poe's house at Fordham, and the Jumel mansion. Selected bits of The Bronx are other themes with which the artist-author has occupied his crayon.

"The natural resources, commercial industries, fish and game, sports and pastimes of the great Dominion." Chronicle of adventure, experience and research. ANNALS OF THE STRAND, TOPOGRAPHICAL AND HISTORICAL. By Edwin Beresford Chancellor. 367p.pls.8vo. Stokes. $2.40n.

Two of the most famous streets in the world, at the heart of London, are described in these books. One cannot read a page in either without stumbling over the name of some man or woman noted in history, or the designation of some coffee house, building, theatre or inn known wherever English literature has penetrated. Follows the story of these streets down the course of their centuries of existence, and recounts anecdotes of those who once trod their pavements.

EDINBURGH AND THE LOTHIANS. By Francis Watt. 12 illus. in col. by Walter Dexter. 348p.8vo. Stokes. $3.50n.

Edinburgh has a human charm—the result of her long, strange, exciting and pathetic history. In addition to this, it has been said to have every interest that a city can possess. The site is picturesque, the scenery about is captivating, and the city is crowded with historic and beautiful buildings. The mountains nearby—the Lothians—are steeped in interest, with their towers, castles and shrines, and their associations with Mary Stuart and Prince Charlie. Author has a knowledge of and love for city he describes. Index.

(Oxford County Histories.)

THE OLD ENGLISH COUNTRY SQUIRE. By Rev. Philip Hampson Ditchfield. 24 illus., of which 8 are in col. 358p.8vo. Doran. $3.50n.

Depicts the lives, ideals and viewpoint of the class most typically English—the country squire. From this class for many decades have come the hero of romantic fiction and the real strength of England in times of trouble. But the fox-hunting, jovial, kindly and hot-tempered landed overlord of the English countryside has had his day. Modern improvements and the modern customs of life in town have rung his knell. The book portrays vividly the metamorphosis of the squire from the earliest times to the present and his effect on the thought and life of England. Index.

THE CITIES OF LOMBARDY. By Edw. Hutton. 12 illus. in col. by Maxwell Armfield & 12 other illus. 401p.12mo. Macm. $2n.

Describes the architectural beauties, art treasures and lovely scenery of Lombardy, which includes such wonders of nature as Lakes Maggiore, Lugano and Como, and the towns of Milan, Pavia, Brescia, Mantua, Parma, etc.

THE ROMANCE OF NICE. By John Douglas Errington Loveland. 359p.8vo. Stokes. $2n.

From the old Roman domain, through the ascendancy of the Popes and the house of Savoy, to Napoleon, Garibaldi and Dumas, Nice has been associated with well-known figures and picturesque occasions. After telling the story of the city, author goes on to describe the legends, old customs, vegetation, industries and topography of the surrounding country.

MONACO AND MONTE CARLO. By Adolphe Smith. 8 col. illus. by Chas. M. Pearce and 48 black-and-white illus. 478p.8vo. Lipp. $4.50n.

MOTOR RAMBLES IN ITALY. By Credo Harris. Illus. fr. photos. 268p.8vo. Moff. Y. $2.50n.

Account of a motor trip taken by three friends through Italy. There is hardly a place of interest in that country which has not been covered in this tour. The narrative is delightfully told, and the book is illustrated with over 120 full-page half-tones taken from original photographs.

PROVENCE AND LANGUEDOC. By Cecil Headlam. 324p.16illus.map.8vo. Doran. $3.50n.

Book is concerned with the romance and history, the architecture and topography of that part of Provence and Languedoc which lies about the valley of the Rhone and the mouths of the Rhone. This is the land of the troubadours and many a knight errant, which for five hundred years has altered little outwardly, and its legends and scenery well repay the traveler. Index.

SOUTH AMERICA; painted by A. S. Forrest. By W. H. Koebel. 238p.fold.map.8vo. Macm. $5n.

Treats the various countries of South America not as merely huge tracts of more or less picturesque scenery, but as growing nations of world-wide importance. There are many illustrations in color. Index.

VENEZUELA. By Leonard V. Dalton. 320p. 34illus.map.8vo. Scrib. $3n.

Historical portion is abridged to what properly relates to Venezuela; the commercial and industrial information is also kept within bounds. Main portion of the volume is given up to a description of the country as it is, with proper consideration of the scientific aspects, such as the geology, physical conditions and ethnography, but with an ample account of what is to be found in Venezuela to-day. Index. (South American Ser.)

Record of the adventures and impressions of two women who got together a caravan and camping outfit and under the guidance of a dragoman and his attendants ventured into the Libyan Desert—one of the most awe-inspiring regions of northern Africa.

PAPUA; OR, BRITISH NEW GUINEA. By J. H. P. Murray. Introd. by Sir Wm. MacGregor. 388p.map.8vo. Scrib. $3.75n.

Papua is a dependency of Australia. The progress of the territory must be of interest to the student of history, while the ethnologist will be attracted by the curious customs of the different races making up its native population and the explorer by the fact that Papua contains some of the few unexplored spaces still left on the globe. All these phases of the country are treated of in this book by the lieutenant-governor and chief judicial officer of Papua. Index.

SIBERIA. By M. P. Price. 316p.28illus.4maps. 8vo. Doran. $2.50n

Clears up many points of conjecture and argument on this little known country. It is perhaps most usually thought of as a land of exiles peopled by the offscourings and political refugees of Russia. Mr. Price, however, has found it a land of promise, the granary of Europe, and in much the same relative position to Russia as that of Canada to the United States some fifteen years ago. It is becoming a nation. Index.

INDIAN PAGES AND PICTURES; Rajputana, Sikkim, the Punjab and Kashmir. By M. M. Shoemaker. 497p.63illus.8vo. Put. $2.50n.

Author with his wife spent a year in travel in India, but instead of following the regular tourist route they journeyed through the native states and went into the northwest farther than Delhi, a region full of historical interest, as this is the route of the old conquerors. What they saw and heard, with something of history and legend, are here recounted. Index.

REMINISCENCES OF THE SOUTH SEAS. By John La Farge. 48 illus. fr. paintings and drawings made by the author in 1890-91. 480p. 8vo. Dou., P. $7.50n.

The material for this volume, consisting of a journal and a series of letters covering his stay in Samoa and Fiji, was left practically ready for publication at the artist's death. It gives in word and picture the impressions of these unique peoples which were gathered during a year among them.

Biography

THE LIFE OF MICHAEL ANGELO; trans. fr. the French by Fred'k Lees. By Romain Rolland. 222p.illus.pls.4to. Dut. $2n.

GEORGE PALMER PUTNAM. By Geo. Haven Putnam. 482p.port.8vo. Put. $2.50n.

"A memoir; together with a record of the earlier years of the publishing house founded by him." Besides being a biography, book is a contribution to the history of publishing in America. Particularly interesting is that part of the memoir which tells of the very real services rendered by George Palmer Putnam toward the establishment of international copyright between the United States and Europe, a consummation for which Mr. Putnam began to labor as early as 1837. The Civil War experiences given—especially the account of the first battle of Bull Run and that of the Draft Riots—add not a little to the interest of this biography. Index.

THE CORRESPONDENCE OF PHILIP SIDNEY AND HUBERT LANGUET. Ed. by Wm. Aspenwall Bradley. 260p.8vo. Merrymount Pr. $3.

Sir Philip Sidney first met Hubert Languet in the house of Andreas Wechel, the Protestant printer, at Frankfort, in the autumn of 1572. Both had just witnessed the massacre of St. Bartholomew in Paris, Sidney safely hidden by Walsingham, but Languet, a Huguenot, was in great danger. Though Sidney was only eighteen and the Frenchman fifty-four, they became close friends and kept up a correspondence in which they discussed the great questions of the times. These are the letters presented here, and will be found full of affection and humor, as well as historical interest. (Humanists' Lib.)

JOURNALS OF RALPH WALDO EMERSON; with annotations. Ed. by Edw. Waldo Emerson & Waldo Emerson Forbes. 588p. ports.12mo. H. Miff. ca., $1.75n.

"V. 7, 1845-1848; v. 8, 1849-1855." Volumes comprise the period from 1844 to the early fifties. The annexation of Texas as a slave state was imminent, and Mr. Emerson spoke at indignation meetings. In 1846 the new lectures on Representative men were in great demand. In September Mr. Emerson sailed for England and had an opportunity of meeting a great many of the most prominent men and women of the time. The next May he attended lectures at the Sorbonne, Paris, during the exciting time of the counter-revolution, returning home to Concord in September. Here he resumed his studies and woodwalks—very interesting ones with Ellery Channing are recorded.

GEORGE FREDERIC WATTS. By Mrs. Mary S. Tytler Watts. In 3 v. pls.8vo. Doran. $10n.

Contents: v. 1-2, The annals of an artist's life; v. 3, His writings. This, the first authoritative and complete account of the famous English painter, is written by his wife, who makes a running commentary on her husband's work on both its technical and inspirational side. As Watts was intimate with many of the leading men of his day, the book is well supplied with anecdotes and reminiscences of his contemporaries. In the third volume are collected some of his writings on art, among them three hitherto unpublished papers, comprising notes to students and "Thoughts on life." Profusely illustrated, with reproductions from Watts's paintings, pictures of his various homes, etc.

THE GIRLHOOD OF QUEEN VICTORIA; a selection from Her Majesty's diaries between 1832 and 1840. In 2 v. ports.tabs.8vo. Longm. $9n.

"Published by authority of His Majesty the King; ed. by Viscount Esher." These journals, begun by the Princess Victoria in a volume given to her by her mother when she was thirteen, have their first entry August 1, 1832, and their last on the day of her marriage, February 10, 1840, eight years without missing a day. It is an intimate revelation of her interests, activities and various accomplishments, and the growth of her mind and character. She records the conversations with Lord Melbourne with care and accuracy, and we see how the Prime Minister, of whom she was very fond, was training her day by day in the art of statesmanship. Illustrations include reproductions of the queen's own drawings, others are portraits never before reproduced. Index.

THE AUTHORITATIVE LIFE OF GENERAL WILLIAM BOOTH, FOUNDER OF THE SALVATION ARMY. By G. S. Railton. Preface by General Bramwell Booth. 331p.12mo. Doran. $1n.

Presents General Booth not as the defender of any code of theology, but in his character of social reformer—as adjuster of the intolerable destinies of the poor and as the most revered figure in Europe, which he became in later years. Bound up with his life is the story of that marvelous body, the Salvation Army, and its almost incredible attainments. W. Bramwell Booth, son of the founder and the new General of the Salvation Army, has written a preface for the volume. Written by first commissioner to General Booth.

By daughter of the second Earl Spencer, who in 1842 was appointed governess to Queen Victoria's children, and remained with them until 1850. She had unique opportunities of observing distinguished society, and as she possessed much humor and the power of describing people she met and events she witnessed, her correspondence is unusually interesting. The letters begin in 1804, when Lady Lyttleton was seventeen, and extend over a period of nearly seventy years. Index.

JEAN JACQUES ROUSSEAU. By Gerhard Gran. Auth. trans. by Marcia Hargis Janson. 393p.8vo. Scrib. $3.50n.

Study of Rousseau's life and times, forming a combination of narrative and criticism by professor of literature in the University of Kristiania.

WHEN I WAS A CHILD. By Yoshio Markino. 293p.illus.12mo. H. Miff. $1.50n.

In his "A Japanese artist in London" author tells his experiences after going to England, and also some of the very hard times he had in America. In this book he recounts his life in Japan, the school days in a native school and later in a missionary institution, the affection and consideration which were such marked features of his parents' home, and his struggle to accept Christianity. The quaint Japanese-English adds much to the book's appeal, as do the sketches by the author which illustrate it.

THE LAST LEAF; observations, during seventy-five years, of men and events in America and Europe. By J. K. Hosmer. 349p. port.8vo. Put. $2n.

THE WATERFALL OF YORO
EPOCHS OF CHINESE AND JAPANESE ART
Stokes

In his preface the author, now on the threshold of his eightieth year, says: "It is high time that there should be for me a last leaf, and as it falls on the pile it should convey to any kindly attentive bystander the memories of seventy-five years. But then what ground it is the last seventy-five years of the world's history! And it belonged to us old fellows. We alone have seen and known the personalities that have made it noteworthy and have mingled from first to last in the events whose results have been a reshaping of the world." How true this is the reader will find as he reads of "Tippecanoe and Tyler too," Filmore, Lincoln, Douglas, Webster, Grant, Sheridan, Horace Mann, Gladstone, Lord Randolph Churchill, Bunsen, Helmholtz, Asa Gray, Agassiz, and the others of world-wide fame and achievement who appear in the pages. Index.

THE DIARIES OF WILLIAM CHARLES MACREADY, 1833-1851. Ed. by Wm. Toynbee. 2 v. 527; 548p.illus.8vo. Put. $7.50n.

In 1875, two years after Macready's death, his "Reminiscences and selections from his diaries and letters," edited by Sir W. F. Pollock, appeared. At the time it was thought desirable to omit a considerable portion of the diaries, but the lapse of forty years has made this suppression no longer necessary, and in these volumes the most important of the passages are included. Dickens, Thackeray, Browning, Bulwer, Forster, Talfourd and many of the famous actors of the Victorian period appear in intimate glimpses in the book, which is a complete history of the London and provincial stage between the years 1833-51, as well as a manual of dramatic criticism. American readers will be particularly interested in the account of the Macready riot in 1849, at the Astor Place Theater. Index.

THE MAN WHO BUCKED UP; a fact story. By Arth. Howard. 279p.12mo. Dou., P. $1n.

The man who bucked up at the age of thirty-eight and in eighteen months owned a newspaper and was mayor of a town of forty thousand people tells his own true, frank story. Used to wealth and luxury, spending thousands of dollars a year in fashionable New York restaurants, a waster, disowned by his father, he pulled himself up by the boot-straps. In his story he gives real names and real places and real facts. This prodigal who went out and got his own fatted calf is Arthur Howard, and he is mayor of Salem, Mass.

TRADITIONS OF EDINBURGH. By Rob. Chambers. Illus. by Jas. Riddel. 378p.8vo. Lipp. $6n.

THE FIRST TWELVE CENTURIES OF BRITISH STORY. By J. W. Jeudwine. 21 sketch maps and 3 photographic reproductions of mediæval maps. 495p.8vo. Longm. $4.50n.

"A slight sketch and criticism of the social and political conditions in the British Islands (herein called Britain), from the year 56 B.C. to the accession of Henry II. to the throne of England in 1154 A.D." The history is, as the title states, one relating events pertaining to Britain's story, not just to England. Wales, Ireland and Scotland all have their bearing on English history, just as events in England have on the history of the other three countries, even before the conquest and unification. Special stress is laid upon the tribe as the basis of all early society. Index.

CRACOW, THE ROYAL CAPITAL OF ANCIENT POLAND. By Leonard Lepszy. Trans. by R. Dyboski. 225p.99illus.8vo. Stokes. $3.50n.

Founded in 1257, Cracow maintained, through the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries, close relations with Breslau and Nuremberg. In the fifteenth century German influence gave way to Italian, and the Renaissance was introduced to Poland. After Italy, France came to exercise her influence in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries; in the nineteenth, Polish art of an independent and distinctly national character reached its zenith in the works of the great historical painter, John Matejho.

SYMBOL AND SATIRE IN THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. By Ernest Flagg Henderson. 488p. 171illus.8vo. Put. $4n.

Gives a practically complete series of the extant broadsides, allegories, caricatures, cartoons and satirical sketches that appeared during the Reign of Terror. This pictorial record of the progress of the Revolution is supplemented by an explanatory text giving so much of an account of the events of the time as is necessary to an understanding of the illustrations. Index.

THE FRANCO-PRUSSIAN WAR AND ITS HIDDEN CAUSES; trans. fr. the French. By Olivier Emile Ollivier. Introd. and notes by Geo.

Digitized by Google

'Burnham Ives. 557p.ports.8vo. Little, B. $2.50n.

Deals with the real causes of the Franco-Prussian War of 1870. M. Ollivier was at the head of Louis Napoleon's so-called Liberal ministry, during whose administration of the French government the war occurred. The intense bitterness of political feeling, accentuated by the disastrous results of the war, led to a fierce outbreak of wrath against the Ollivier government, and the head of that government was selected as a convenient scapegoat, to be charged with the responsibility, not only for bringing on the war, but for the alleged lack of proper preparation for the conflict. Book is, in substance, a refutation of these charges. That Bismarck was absolutely bent upon provoking France into the war, as a necessary part of the success of his plans for German unification, is argued with vigor and earnestness; while the methods which the great statesman pursued, and the efforts of the Ollivier administration for the maintenance of peace, are set forth clearly and convincingly. Index.

NAPOLEON'S LAST CAMPAIGN IN GERMANY, 1813. By Francis Loraine Petre. 414p.17maps. 8vo. Lane. $3.50n.

In the author's first two histories of Napoleon's campaigns, "Napoleon's campaign in Poland, 1806-1807," and "Napoleon's conquest of Prussia, 1806," the Emperor is at his greatest as a soldier. The third, "Napoleon and the Archduke Charles, 1809," showed the commencement of the decay of his genius. Now, in 1813, he has seriously declined. The military judgment of Napoleon, the general, is constantly fettered by the pride and obstinacy of Napoleon, the Emperor. Index.

ITALY IN THE THIRTEENTH CENTURY. By Henry Dwight Sedgwick. In 2 v. map. fronts.8vo. H. Miff. $5n.

"History of politics, religion, literature and art in the times of Innocent III., St. Francis, Niccola Pisano, Giotto and Dante." Intended partly as introduction to Dante. Chronology. Index.

THE STORY OF LUCCA. By Mrs. Janet Ann Duff-Gordon Ross & Nelly Erichsen. 364p. illus. pls. maps. 12mo. Dut. $1.75n.; leath., $2.25n.

(Mediaeval Towns Ser.)

UNITED ITALY. By F. M. Underwood. 374p.21 illus.8vo. Doran. $3.50n.

United Italy has, during the past thirty years, undergone a social and industrial renaissance which has changed her character among nations. Author has lived and associated with Italians of all classes, and gives a history of the events, the struggles, the difficulties of church and state, and more particularly of the men who have contributed to the making of the Italy of to-day. Little known movements full of significance are chronicled, movements which show that a great new nation is emerging. Index.

CHINA AND THE MANCHUS. By Herb. Allen Giles. 156p.illus.maps.16mo. Put. 40c.n.

Outlines of history, tenth century to 1912, by Cambridge professor of Chinese, once consul at Ningpo. (Cambridge Manuals of Science and Literature.)

Two children meet Nat Evans, a young graduate of the Yale Forestry School, who has had adventures in many parts of the world, and is in charge of the forest near their home. He teaches Frank and Bessie much about forests, and excitement is furnished by a flood and by a forest fire.

PEGGY OWEN AND LIBERTY. By Mrs. Lucy Foster Madison. Illus. by H. J. Peck. 456p.12mo. Penn. $1.25.

Story of a Quaker girl who lived opposite the State House in Philadelphia. Peggy gets into trouble for hiding her cousin, a British officer, who is in danger, and sees exciting adventures in the fighting between Tories and Patriots in New Jersey.

TWO GIRLS OF OLD NEW JERSEY, A SCHOOLGIRL STORY OF '76. By Agnes Carolyn Sage. 16 illus. in black-and-white by Douglas John Connah. 8vo. Stokes. $1.35n.

Story of a patriotic New Jersey girl and her friends during the Revolutionary war. Washington, Light Horse Harry Lee, Moll Pitcher and other historical characters appear. Besides the excitement of war, tale recounts life on an old Dutch bouewerie, with its gardens and the frolics of an old-fashioned boarding school.

JACK LORIMER, FRESHMAN; OR, FROM MILLVALE HIGH TO EXMOUTH. By Winn Standish. Illus. by Harold J. Cue. 310p.8vo. Page. $1.50.

Tells of a crowded and exciting freshman year at a leading eastern college. Football, hockey, basketball and other sports play an important part in the story. (Jack Lorimer Ser.)

BEE, THE PRINCESS OF THE DWARFS; retold in English by P. Wright. By Anatole France. 140p.illus.pls.8vo. Dut. $2.50n.

SISTER-IN-CHIEF. By Dorothy à Becket Terrell. 4 illus. in col. by E. S. Hodgson. 313p.8vo. Cass. $1.25n. (The £250 prize story for girls.)

Story for girls of sixteen to eighteen. The sister-in-chief is Sonsy Fenwick, who, when her mother dies, leaving her at fifteen in charge of six younger brothers and sisters and her father, a clergyman with small means, comes bravely forward and shoulders the burden. In spite of poverty they are as jolly, wholesome a set of young folks as possible. Before the end of the book one of the girls is married, and Sonsy, relieved of her responsibilities, is free to follow her heart's pointing. Scene is an English country vicarage.

Books for Boys and Girls—Non-Fiction

BOYS' MAKE-AT-HOME THINGS. By Carolyn Sherwin & Marian Eliz. Bailey. 199p. 12mo. Stokes. $1.25n.

GIRLS' MAKE-AT-HOME THINGS. By Carolyn Sherwin Bailey. Numerous illus. fr. photos. 222p.12mo. Stokes. $1.25n.

Both above books are the outcome of long, practical work with children, and furnish useful occupations at small cost. Girls are told how to make dolls and dolls' houses, matchbox furniture, peas craft, necklaces, etc., while the boys can learn how to make a workbench, turning-lathe, toy train, boats, toys, etc.

THE BEARD BIRDS, LIFE-SIZE, STANDING ALONE, WITH ADJUSTABLE WINGS; inverted and drawn by Adelia Belle Beard with descriptions by the inventor. 16p.pls.obl. Stokes. $1n.

Life-size cut-outs, made to stand up, and with adjustable wings. Each bird is printed on a card, the prevailing color of the bird. The other colors are to be filled in with crayon, according to directions.

Survey of the most striking mechanical triumphs—the applications of electricity; automatic machinery; newspaper printing; great bridges and dams; concrete skyscrapers; conquest of the sea with lighthouses, buoys, breakwaters, docks, etc.; gasolene engines used in automobiles and aeroplanes; the fire, water, police, hospital and sanitary system of London; and the wonders of advanced architecture.

TALES FROM THE WOODS AND FIELDS; a nature story book. By Gladys Davidson. Illus. by Harry Rountree. 144p.16mo. Stokes. 50c.

Animal stories for little children. (Churchill's Lib.)

THE SEASHORE; a book for young people. By F. Martin Duncan. 112 illus. fr. photos. by the author. 270p.8vo. Stokes. $1.75n.

Describes, in simple language, some of the many treasures and marvels of the seashore. Instructions are also given in regard to the necessary equipment for collecting. Reader is taken along the shore in search of seaweeds, and discovers many unsuspected points of interest about them. Then follows the life history of the jellyfish, an account of the habits of the shell-dwellers and of the starfish. He is taken to the deep rock-pools and introduced to another world, tenanted by wonderful forms of animal life, and makes the acquaintance of the flower-like anemones. Index.

THE MAGIC BOOK; adventures of Jack and Betty. By Clara Andrews Williams. Drawings by Geo. Alfr. Williams. 64p. 4to. Stokes. $1.25.

Story, running on left-hand pages, tells how Jack and Betty got into strange new places by going through doors and apertures of various kinds. Right-hand pages consist of colored pictures, each including the door or aperture in question, which is to be cut out, thus revealing the first glimpse of what is to happen next.

THE BOOK OF WOODCRAFT AND INDIAN LORE. By Ernest Seton Thompson. Over 500 illus. by the author. 588p.8vo. Dou., P. $1.75n.

Mr. Seton has here developed the woodcraft principles set forth in his earlier manual, "The birch-bark roll." By woodcraft he means nature study, certain kinds of hunting, the art of camping and all good outdoor athletics. Photography is recognized as a branch of nature work, and camper-craft is made to include the simplest methods of triangulation, star-craft, finding one's way, sign language, as well as many branches of Indian-craft. Andrew was a politician, sportsman through and through;

In the big, red game of love, he cut a figure, too.

Andrew had a way of doing anything he chose to do,

And when it came to wooing, Andrew was some wooer, too.

Andrew's rib was broken, his arm was in a sling;

But as soon as he saw Mary, his heart began to sing.

This is a story of romance and fun,

How Andrew the love of sweet Caroline won.

TO THE TRADE.

We regret our inability, owing to a deluge of late orders, to provide the trade, on Saturday last, with a sufficient supply of A. S. M. Hutchinson's novel, THE HAPPY WARRIOR. The fourth edition is now on the press, and we shall be able to fill all reorders next week.

It may interest you to know that the advance demand for THE HAPPY WARRIOR was in excess of "The Broad Highway" two years ago.

Our other January novels are also best sellers in many cities, for we have just sent both Payne Erskine's JOYFUL HEATHERBY and Percy Brebner's so-called Zenda story, THE LITTLE GRAY SHOE, to press for the third time.

The regular edition of Jeffery Farnol's THE BROAD HIGHWAY, which has been selling steadily, has reached a 15th printing--140th thousand. We now hope to be able to issue Mr. Farnol's new novel, THE AMATEUR GENTLEMAN, on March 15. It will be a 625 page book, with some double page illustrations, and the price will be $1.40 net.

Some Books of Note Published During 1912

The Works of Thomas Deloney. Edited from the earliest extant editions and broadsides, with introduction and notes, by F. O. MANN. 8vo, cloth, $5.75.

One of the Library Editions of the Oxford English Texts. The contents include Iacke of Newberie, The Gentle Craft, Thomas of Reading, Ballads, &c.

The Poems of John Donne. Edited from the old editions and numerous manuscripts with introductions and commentary by H. J. C. GRIERSON. 2 vols. 8vo, cloth, $5.75.

In the first volume is the text of Donne's poems and of those attributed to him; in the second, an introduction consisting of 153 pages, and commentary. (Oxford English Texts.)

The Complete Poetical Works of Samuel Taylor Coleridge. Including material never before printed in any edition of the Poems. With textual and bibliographical notes, edited by ERNEST HARTLEY COLERIDGE. 2 vols. 8vo, cloth, $5.25.

This complete edition, based on the 1834 edition, contains poems and versions of poems not hitherto published. The editor's textual and bibliographical notes are very full.

The Complete Works of George Savile, First Marquess of Halifax. Edited, with an introduction by SIR WALTER RALEIGH. 8vo, cloth, $2.50.

The works of the statesman, critic, 'the practical genius of the English Revolution', and strangely modern writer. (Oxford English Texts.)

Keble's Lectures on Poetry, 1832-1841. Translated by E. K. FRANCIS. 2 vols. Crown 8vo, cloth, $4.00.

The lectures were originally delivered and published in Latin, and though highly admired by Newman, Church, Moberly, Lock, Saintsbury, and the present Professor of Poetry at Oxford, &c., have not hitherto been translated.

Aurelian Townshend's Poems and Masks. Edited by E. K. CHAMBERS. $1.75.

With the exception of the two masks no play or volume of poems came from Townshend's pen, and his verses are comparatively few in anthologies. (Tudor and Stuart Library.)

English Literature and the Classics. Collected by G. S. GORDON. 8vo, cloth, $2.00.

Contents:—Tragedy, by Gilbert Murray. Platonism, by J. A. Stewart. Theophrastus, by G. S. Gordon. Greek Romances, by J. S. Phillimore. Ciceronianism, by A. C. Clarke. Vergil, by H. W. Garrod. Ovid, by S. G. Owen. Saturn, by R. J. E. Tiddy. Senecan Tragedy, by A. D. Godley.

Early English Classical Tragedies. Edited, with introduction and notes, by J. W. CUNLIFFE. $2.50.

The text of Gorboduc, Jocasta, Gismond of Salerne, and the Misfortunes of Arthur, with notes and glossary.

Philostratus: In Honour of Apollonius of Tyana. Translated by J. S. PHILLIMORE. In 2 volumes. $2.00.

The translator's introductory matter fills over 100 pages. 'The rapid modern revival of the credulous,' he says, 'and decline of the rational, habit of mind brings in a renewal of interest in Apollonius,' (Oxford Translations.)

The Public Orations of Demosthenes. Translated by A. W. PICKARD-CAMBRIDGE. 2 vols. $1.00 per volume.

The Speeches, arranged in chronological order, are rendered in such English as a politician of the present day might use. An outline of the history of the period introduces each oration. (Oxford Library of Translations.)

Tacitus: The Histories. Translated by W. HAMILTON FYFE. In 2 volumes. $1.00 per volume.

Mr. Fyfe has already translated Tacitus' Minor Works for this series. (Oxford Translations.)

A History of American Literature. By WILLIAM B. CAIRNS. 8vo, cloth, $1.75.

Literary development in America is traced and the most significant facts are given about American authors and their works.

A History of French Literature. By C. H. CONRAD WRIGHT. 8vo, cloth, $3.00.

"It yields to none of its American or English predecessors in soundness of scholarship or in range of information."—The Dial.

The Science of Etymology. By W. W. SKEAT. 8vo, cloth, $1.50.

The principles that should guide the student of etymology are set forth 'in order that anyone who employs the Etymological Dictionary may be able to do so with some degree of intelligence and to some profit.'

The Poets of Ireland: a biographical and bibliographical dictionary of Irish writers of English Verse. By D. J. O'DONOGHUE. 8vo, cloth, $8.40.

A practically new book with the same title as that of a 'very imperfect work' issued 20 years ago by the compiler, who is librarian of University College, Dublin.

The Oxford Book of Victorian Verse. Chosen and edited by SIR ARTHUR QUILLER-COUCH. Crown 8vo, cloth, gilt top, $1.90. Oxford India Paper Edition: Cloth extra, gilt edges, $2.60; Persian morocco, round corners, red under gold edges, $3.50.

The Oxford Book of Latin Verse. Chosen and edited by H. W. GARROD. Fcap. 8vo, gilt edges, $2.00. Oxford India Paper Edition: Cloth, extra, gilt edges, $2.50; Persian morocco, round corners, red under gold edges, $3.50.

The Ability to Converse. By S. M. BLIGH. 6x4; 70 c.; Venetian morocco, $1.00.

An attempt to improve the general tone and standard of conversation and private discussion.

Companion to Roman History. By H. STUART JONES. 8vo, cloth, with 80 full page and 65 other illustrations and 7 maps, $5.00.

Planned as a companion volume to the Companion to English History (Middle Ages) edited by F. P. Barnard, dealing with such aspects of Roman life as could be illustrated from material remains.

The Greek Genius and Its Meaning to Us. By R. W. LIVINGSTONE. 8vo, cloth, $2.00.

A popular work designed to translate the spirit of Greece into modern language and to trace its relationship to our own ways of thinking and feeling.

Concordance to the Latin Works of Dante. Edited by E. K. RAND and E. H. WILKINS; with the assistance of A. C. WHITE. $10.00.

Prepared under the auspices of the Dante Society of Cambridge, Mass., and is uniform with Professor Fay's Concordance to the Divina Commedia and Professor Sheldon's Concordance to Dante's Minor Italian Works.

A History of Fine Arts in India and Ceylon from the Earliest Times to the Present Day. By VINCENT A. SMITH. 11½x9; pp. 536, with 5 colored plates, 128 full page illustrations and 253 other illustrations, $19.25.

The purpose of this book is to give for the first time a chronological, descriptive history of fine art in India and Ceylon from the third century B. C. to the present day, with criticism of the aesthetic merits of the works described.

A Study of the Bronze Age Pottery of Great Britain and Ireland. By the HON. JOHN ABERCROMBY. In 2 vols. 13¼x10½; pp. 163 + 128. With 1611 illustrations of Pottery, 155 examples of Grave Goods, and 10 plates showing ornamentation, $19.25.

An exhaustive study of the chief types of British and Hibernian pottery, with associated grave goods.

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help and an ornanent thereunto."—BACON.

THE BOOKS OF 1912.

THE book production of the United States has for the past two years remained practically stationary, at a point marking a recession from the high figures of 1910. The slight further decrease this year is too small to be significant, but it should be noted that in 1912, for the first time in several years, the American book production fell below the British. This is almost certainly a temporary relationship, and it is not unlikely that 1913 will show a considerable increase of production over the year past.

Complementary to the decrease in number of titles issued in 1912, there has been—if we mean by "quality" the number of single significant volumes of enduring merit—a noticeable falling off in quality, as compared with 1911. In FICTION, particularly, the year compared unfavorably with 1911, though it should be remembered that the latter year was noteworthy for its fiction.

There has been, on the other hand, a notable recent increase in the production of excellent and vital books at cheaper prices, an admittedly commendable tendency. Well-printed, well-bound classics at "poor man's prices" we have had for some years; now we are beginning to get similarly reasonable new books in various departments of knowledge. Of course, this is not a movement original with us, but a direct sequence of the cheap book movement in Great Britain; but, although we cannot claim originality in the movement, we can no less endorse it. Such series as the Holt Home University Library, the Dodge People's Books, the Everyman's Cyclopedia, which the Duttons announce, the 50-cent reprint non-fiction series of Macmillan, are but types and forerunners of what promises to be a very considerable growth.

For the first time in many years we may venture to point out signs of a literary renascence. Both in POETRY and ESSAYS, 1912 had more and better offerings than in any year of the past decade. HISTORICAL writing apparently presents a falling off, for, with a few important exceptions, all our history seems now to be given us in the form of BIOGRAPHY—an interesting reflection, of course, of the popular demand. Again, as last year, SCIENCE seems almost an ignored field for popular exploitation, and SOCIOLOGY and ECONOMICS loom larger than ever in importance.

Mention should be made of a comparatively new science—EUGENICS—which, during 1912, sprang into public prominence, probably from the publicity given the first international conference on the subject. This prominence was reflected in a large crop of serious and generally excellent books. Mention should also be made of many particularly good offerings in AGRICULTURE, COUNTRY LIVING and HOUSE BUILDING AND FURNISHING. AVIATION, however, fell behind 1910-1911.

FICTION.

Most of the novels of 1912, it must be admitted, were merely average novels, the sort that may be loaned to careless friends without a pang. But to begin with the exceptions: one novel of the year which made a strong impression on those who feel the clutch of the "Minotaur" of modern life was "The Squirrel Cage," by Dorothy Canfield (Mrs. Fisher), new as a novelist, but well known for her magazine stories. The "problems" of "The Squirrel Cage" are those that face almost all every-day people in every-day surroundings.

Basil King's "The Street Called Straight" made its way at once to the top. That, too, is a story of Americans, perhaps of more recognized social prominence and the problems that come to them through financial wreck. Mary Johnston's "Cease Firing," sequel to "The Long Roll"; Gertrude Atherton's "Julia France and Her Times," the story of a woman who makes a worldly marriage and later becomes a suffrage leader in London; Mary E. Waller's "Cry in the Wilderness," with its scene in Canada, were other worthwhile books which show once more the tendency noted a year ago—that in the fiction field it is getting to be a case of places aux dames!

It must be admitted that a number of the best novels of the year were by British authors, for the most part authors from whom we expect fiction of the first order as a matter of course. H. G. Wells wrote an extraordinary novel in "Marriage"; Locke, in "The Adventures of Aristide Pujol," created an effervescent hero of no little charm; and the names of Arnold Bennett and Leonard Merrick were both in the year's list. G. A. Birmingham, discovered by the American people in 1911, was represented in 1912 by three more delightful, whimsical tales—"Priscilla's Spies," "The Major's Niece," and "The Seething Pot." Among other English novels well received here were "Between Two Thieves," by Richard Dehan, author of "One Braver Thing"; "The Lost World," a tale of fantastic adventure, by Conan Doyle; "Marie," by H. Rider Haggard; "Through the Postern Gate," by Florence L. Barclay; "The Life Everlasting," by Marie Corelli; "Christopher," by Richard Pryce; "Out of the Wreck I Rise," by Beatrice Harraden; and "Carnival," the story of a ballet girl, by Compton Mackenzie.

One of the first novels of the year, and also one of the best, was "Tante," by Anne Douglas Sedgick, whom the United States can at least partially claim, the story of a beautiful and alluring woman, so skilfully hypocritical that she deceives even the reader.

To go back to the American novelists. Perhaps the most significant works of the year were "Stover at Yale," by Owen M. Johnson, an indictment of the social snobbery of the college society systems; "The Lady and Sada San," by Frances Little, a sequel to "The Lady of the Decoration"; "A Woman of Genius," by Mary H. Austin—the problem of a woman of temperament bound by the restrictions of humdrum life; "Fate Knocks at the Door," by Will Levington Comfort, author of "Routledge Rides Alone"; "Their Yesterdays," by Harold Bell Wright, with a popular appeal; "Riders of the Purple Sage," a Utah story, by Zane Grey; "Corporal Cameron of the Northwest Mounted Police," a tale of the Macleod Trail, by Ralph Connor; "A Romance of Billy-Goat Hill," by Mrs. Alice C. Hegan Rice; "The Wind Before the Dawn," in which Dell H. Munger pictures the life of the Kansas pioneers, especially the problems of the women; "Polly of the Hospital Staff," a bright little story by Emma C. Dowd; "A Hoosier Chronicle," by Meredith Nicholson, a story of Indiana life during the last fifteen years; "The Man in Lonely Land," by Kate L. Bosher, author of "Mary Cary"; "To M. L. G.; or, He Who Passed," an anonymous work, said to be the true story of a well-known actress; "The Net," an adventure story in Sicily and New Orleans, by Rex Beach; "The Hollow of Her Hand," the story of a widow who shields the woman who murders her own dissolute husband; "The Lady Doc," Caroline Lockhart's story of a Western woman doctor, thoroughly bad; and "The Melting of Molly," the humorous romance of a young, charming, but too plump, widow.

A feature of the year was the unusual number of excellent volumes of short stories; for instance, F. Hopkinson Smith's "The Armchair at the Inn"; Jack London's "Smoke Bellew"; "The Unknown Quantity," by Henry Van Dyke; "The White Shield," by Myrtle Reed; "Chronicles of Avonlea," by L. M. Montgomery; "It, and Other Stories," by Gouverneur Morris; "Buttered Side Down," by Edna Ferber, author of "Dawn O'Hara"; Zona Gale's "Mothers to Men"; and "The Amazing Adventures of Letitia Carberry," by Mary Roberts Rinehart. Three notable volumes of short stories by English authors also appeared. Arnold Bennett, whose fiction output has slackened (or, rather, the importation of his works has caught up with his pen), kept up to his standard in "The Matador of the Five Towns," a collection of diverse stories. "Whispers About Women" is probably the best work of Leonard Merrick, who is at last getting the appreciation he deserves. Gilbert K. Chesterton is the author of "The Innocence of Father Brown," detective stories, in which the mysteries are unsnarled by a little Catholic priest. From France came "Valserine, and Other Stories," delicately sketched by Marguerite Audoux, author of "Marie Claire."

Besides the last-mentioned volume, other prominent works by foreign authors were "Atlantis," by Gerhart Hauptmann; "Eve; An Incident of Paradise Regained," by Maarten Maartens; "The Blood of the Arena," a story of bull fights, by V. Blasco Ibanez; "The Keynote," winner of the Goncourt prize, by Alphonse de Chateaubriand; and "Through Desert and Wilderness," also called "Through the Desert," an original story of the adventures of two children in African wilds, by Sienkiewicz.

BIOGRAPHY, MEMOIRS, CORRESPONDENCE.

While the list of biographical works was short, it contained, last year, several titles of importance. "Mark Twain—A Biography," by Albert B. Paine, long a personal friend of Clemens, took first place as an authorized and carefully complete work. Mary Antin's "The Promised Land," a remarkable presentation of what America means to the immigrant, by one of them, proved one of the most popular books of non-fiction of the year. General Jubal A. Early's autobiographical sketch and narrative of the war between the States, Gamaliel Bradford's "Lee, the American," and "Serving the Republic; Memoirs of the Civil and Military Life of Lieut-Gen. Nelson A. Miles," threw interesting light on the war-time period of the country.

Among the biographies of men of letters were "James Fenimore Cooper," the first adequate work of its kind, by Mary E. Phillips; "Robert Louis Stevenson in California." by Katharine D. Osbourne; volumes 5 and 6 of the annotated "Journals of Ralph Waldo Emerson"; "Letters of Sarah Orne Jewett," edited by Annie Fields; and "Lafcadio Hearn," by Mrs. Nina H. Kennard.

Among other noteworthy publications in biography were Helen Nicolay's "Personal Traits of Abraham Lincoln"; "A Memoir of George Haven Putnam"; "Memories of James McNeil Whistler," by Thomas R. Way; "The Man Who Bucked Up," by Arthur Howard—how a debt-engulfed spendthrift made himself a newspaper power and Mayor of Salem in eighteen months; "In the Courts of Memory," by Mme. L. de Hegermann-Lindencrone—reminiscences of the Court of Napoleon III.; "George Frederic Watts," a three-volume illustrated work, by Mrs. Mary S. Tytler Watts; "George Bernard Shaw; His Life and Works," an authorized biography, by Archibald Henderson; "The Letters of George Meredith," edited by his son; "J. M. Synge; a Critical Study," by P. P. Howe; "Reminiscences of a Diplomatist's Wife," by Mrs. Hugh Fraser, a continuation of "A Diplomatist's Wife in Many Lands"; "The Life of John Ruskin," by Edward Tyas Cook; "The Life of Tolstoi," by Nathan Haskell Dole, translator of Tolstoi's works; "The Life of John Henry, Cardinal Newman," by Wilfrid P. Ward; "Autobiographic Memoirs," by Frederic Harrison; and "Browning and His Century," by Helen A. Clarke.

HISTORY.

Professor Edward Channing's third volume of his "History of the United States," bringing the work down to 1789, may be given first place among the historical publications of the year. Also of importance were the third volume of W. R. Livermore's "Story of the Civil War," the eighth of J. B. McMaster's "History of the People of the United States, from the Revolution to the Civil War"; and E. W. Morris' "Causes and Effects in American History." Among the works dealing with some specific section and period were William S. McClellan's "Smuggling in the American Colonies," and "The Contest for California in 1861," by Elijah R. Kennedy. Other volumes of United States history in more popular style were "Romantic Days in the Early Republic," by Caroline Crawford; "The Hoosac Valley," by Grace G. Niles; "The Story of the Bronx," by Stephen Jenkins.

Chief among the books on European history were "Garibaldi and the Making of Italy," by George M. Trevelyan; "The Franco-Prussian War and its Hidden Causes," by Emile Ollivier; and "The Day of the Saxon,"—a prophecy—practically a call to arms, by Homer Lea.

Interesting histories concerned with other parts of the world include W. M. Shuster's "The Strangling of Persia," the story of the diplomacy and intrigue that denationalized 12,000,000 Mohammedans; "The Secret of the Pacific," by C. R. Enock, a discussion of the origin of early civilization of America, the Toltecs, Aztecs, Mayas, Incas, and possibilities of Asiatic influence; "In Northern Mists," a history of polar travel, from early times to 1500, by Fridtjof Nansen; "A History of the Modern World," in two volumes, by Oscar Browning; "Famous Sea Fights, from Salamis to Tsu-shima," by J. R. Hale; and Judge J. H. Blount's "The American Occupation of the Philippines."

TRAVEL AND DESCRIPTION.

Apparently we need not fear that the travelers will reach the point where no new worlds are left to conquer. However well known a land may be, each new writer sees it from a different viewpoint—even such familiar ground as the United States becomes a new place when we see it in Arnold Bennett's company. His volume, "Your United States," though a late fall publication, may be considered one of the most popular works of the past year, and it is not surprising. If the writer be kindly and discriminating, yet humorous withal, we will read about ourselves as long as he will write on that fascinating subject. Other volumes of travel and description here at home were F. Hopkinson Smith's charmingly illustrated "Charcoals of New and Old New York"; Winthrop Packard's "Literary Pilgrimages of a Naturalist"; John Matthews' "The Log of the 'Easy Way'" —the story of a honeymoon trip on the Mississippi; "The Yosemite," by John Muir; "Social Life in Old New Orleans," by Eliza Ripley; "Boston, New and Old," by T. R. Sullivan; "The Columbia River," by W. D. Lyman; and "The Indians of the Terraced Houses," by Charles F. Saunders.

Digitized by Google

More remote parts of our continent were reviewed in Hulbert Footner's "New Rivers of the North"; Ernest Thompson Seton's "The Arctic Prairies," the record of a 2000-mile canoe journey; and "The American Mediterranean," by S. A. Bonsal.

Especially interesting were the books dealing with South America—Caspar Whitney's "The Flowing Road"; Algot Lange's "In the Amazon Jungle"; "Through South America," by H. W. Van Dyke; "Chile," by Nevin O. Winter; "Uruguay," by W. H. Koebel; "The Argentine in the Twentieth Century," by A. B. Martinez and Maurice Lewandowski; and, most important of all, "South America," by James Bryce.

Europe, as usual, was the favorite ground for travelers off on a holiday, and, of course, it is the personality of the traveler, as much as the personality of the land, that gives each book its appeal. For instance, Edith Wharton's "In Chateau Land," of 1912, is quite a different story from what we shall soon receive from Richard Le Gallienne, at present on a walking tour through the same country. "Miss John Bull," by Yoshio Markino, gave a picture of the Englishwoman as the Japanese artist sees her. In "The Flower of Gloster," Ernest Temple Thurston chronicled a dreamy barge tour through English inland waterways. Octave Uzanne described "The Modern Parisienne" in chatty sketches; H. C. Shelley wrote of "Old Paris" and its associations. "Spain Revisited: a Summer Holiday in Galicia," by Catharine Hartley, describing a little-known province; "The Fortunate Isles," by Mary Stuart Boyd, an account of life and travel in the Balearic Islands; "An Artist in Corfu," by Sophie Atkinson; "Andorra, the Hidden Republic," sketches of the oldest, poorest and smallest republic in the world, by L. G. Leary; and "The Germans," by I. A. R. Wylie, a casual observer, are all interesting reading for travelers or stay-at-homes.

The happy places far from civilization were written of in "Trekking the Great Thirst," travel and sport in the Kalahari Desert in Bechuanaland, by Arnold W. Hodson; "Through the Heart of Africa," by F. H. Melland and E. Cholmeley; "The Great Plateau of Northern Rhodesia," by C. Goulds-bury and Hubert Sheane; "The Land of Footprints," travel in Equatorial Africa, by Stewart Edward White; "In Forbidden China," by Vicomte d'Ollone; and "Karakoram and Western Himalaya," an unusually beautifully illustrated account of the expedition by the Duke of the Abruzzi.

Of particular appeal were the books dealing with present social or political conditions; for instance, Maurice Baring's "The Russian People"; E. A. Ross' "The Changing Chinese" —a really remarkable work, widely read; "Across China on Foot," by E. J. Dingle; "The New China," by Henri Borel; "The Chinese Revolution," by A. Judson Brown; "Where Half the World is Waking Up," by C. H. Roe (all these, of course, especially interesting in the year of the revolution); "On Horseback Through Nigeria," in which J. D. Falconer emphasizes the benefits of British occupancy; "Life in the Moslem East," by Pierre Ponafidine, Russian consul at Constantinople; and "Pygmies and Papuans," by A. F. R. Wollaston, the account of a scientific expedition of 1911 to the unknown Snow Mountains of Dutch New Guinea.

The story of the greatest tragedy of many years was told in "The Loss of the S. S. 'Titanic,'" by Lawrence Beesley, a survivor.

POLITICS AND SOCIOLOGY.

Here, undoubtedly, we feel the pulse of the day. Next to fiction and religion—always the leaders—came sociology in the tables of book production. In 1912, the books in this class again reached a record number, scarce fifty behind religion. Only a few of the most important can be noted here: E. A. Ross' "Changing America"; Walter E. Weyl's "The New Democracy; "Old Age Dependency in the United States," by L. W. Squier; "The Man Farthest Down," by Booker T. Washington; "Armaments and Arbitration," by Rear-Admiral A. T. Mahan; "The New Competition," by A. J. Eddy; "Concentration and Control," by C. R. Van Hise; "Majority Rule and the Judiciary," by W. L. Ransom; "The Supreme Court and the Constitution," by C. A. Beard; "Our Judicial Oligarchy," by G. E. Roe; "Woman and Social Progress," by S. and N. Nearing; "Making a Business Woman," by Anne Shannon Monroe; Donald Lowrie's "My Life in Prison"; "The Republican Tradition in Europe," by H. A. L. Fisher; "Wisconsin an Experiment in Democracy," by F. C. Howe; and several timely volumes on commission government: "Commission Government in American Cities," by E. S. Bradford; and "City Government by Commission," edited by Clinton Rogers Woodruff. "The Great State; Essays in Construction," by H. G. Wells and others; and "Applied Socialism," by John Spargo, were added to the literature of socialism.

Other volumes that cannot be passed over are "Old Age Dependency in the United States," a complete survey of the pension movement, by L. W. Squier; "Waterways versus Railroads," by G. H. Moulton; "The Spirit of Social Work; Nine Addresses," by A. T. Devine; "Modern Philanthropy," by William H. Allen; "The Women of To-Morrow," by William Hard; and "The Woman Movement," by Ellen Key.

SCIENCE.

"The Sun," by C. G. Abbot; "Surgery and Society," by Dr. G. W. Saleeby; "Some Chemical Problems of To-Day," by Robert K. Duncan, showing the new alliance between chemistry and manufacturing; and "The Mechanistic Conception of Life," an attempt, by Jacques Loeb, to analyze life from a purely physico-chemical viewpoint, were among the most important of the year's contributions to science.

The prominent place taken by the comparatively new science of Eugenics is shown, as has been already noted by the long list of books on the subject, to mention a few: "Heredity and Eugenics," by W. E. Castle and others; "The Task of Social Hygiene," by H. Havelock Ellis; "Heredity in Relation to Eugenics," by Charles B. Davenport; and "Heredity in Relation to Evolution and Animal Breeding," by W. E. Castle.

MISCELLANEOUS.

An unusual number of practical and valuable books on building and housefurnishing were issued during the year, among them: "Successful Houses and How to Build Them," by Charles E. White, Jr.; "The Colonial Homes of Philadelphia and its Neighborhood," by H. D. Eberlein and H. M. Lippincott; "The Half-Timber House," by Allen W. Jackson, fully illustrated; "The Essentials of a Country House," by R. A. Briggs; "Furnishing the Home in Good Taste," by Lucy A. Throop; and "Colonial Furniture in America," a much-enlarged new edition of L. V. Lockwood's standard work.

Painting and other arts were the subject of many interesting works, notably August Rodin's "Art," Fenollosa's "Epochs of Chinese and Japanese Art," both very fully illustrated; "A Glimpse at Japanese Landscape Art," by Mrs. Dora Amsden and J. Stewart Happer; "American Graphic Art," a history, by F. Weitenkampf; "Frank Brangwyn and His Work," by Walter Shaw-Sparrow; "A Treatise on Ceramic Industries," the revision of a standard work by E. Bourry; and "Tapestries, Their Origin, History and Renaissance," by George L. Hunter.

Two collections of poetry attracted attention: "The Home Book of Verse," compiled by Burton Stevenson; and "The Lyric Year," a compilation of 100 poems by 100 American authors, submitted in a prize competition. "Irish Poems," by A. J. A. Stringer; "Hard Labor, and Other Poems," by John Carter; "The Singing Man," by Josephine Preston Peabody; and "The Ballads of the White Horse," by G. K. Chesterton, are but a few of the many good volumes from the poets.

Dramas in book form rose in popularity—a tendency noted during the last few years. Strindberg's plays, Hauptmann's dramas, Arnold Bennett's "Milestones" and "The Honeymoon," Loti's "The Daughter of Heaven," Lady Gregory's "Irish Folk History Plays," Kennedy's "The Terrible Meek," Galsworthy's "The Pigeon" were a few of these. An interesting study of the history and tendencies of our drama was given in "The American Dramatist,' by Montrose J. Moses.

Among the books of first importance not included under any of the above subjects were: "A New Conscience and an Ancient Evil," plain facts about the white-slave traffic, by Jane Addams; "The Truth of Religion," by Rudolf C. Eucken; "The Modern Gasoline Automobile," by Victor W. Page; "The Curtiss Aviation Book"; "The Montessori Method," which attracted much attention; "Railroad Finance," by F. A. Cleveland and F. W. Powell; and "Scientific Mental Healing," by H. Addington Bruce.

AMERICAN BOOK PRODUCTION, 1912.

THE number of books recorded in the weekly and monthly lists of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY during 1912 was 10,903, 220 less than in 1911, when 11,123 titles were recorded. Of the number, 10,135 were new books, and 768 new editions; 7975 were by American authors, 504 were copyright books by English authors, and 2424 importations. The slight falling off from 1911 can be located under the general literature division, ten other divisions showing gains, some quite noticeable. Interest in sociology and economics is still on the ascendancy, 867 titles having been listed in 1912, as against 653 in 1911. History jumps from 442 to 524, law from 682 to 862, domestic economy from 95 to 110, and agriculture from 240 to 305. Biography declines from 695 to 581.

Of the books listed, 4649 were received for record and annotation in the office of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY. The remaining titles include author's books not sent for record, certain government publications, titles reported by publishers, law and medical books and other books in special departments, and miscellaneous works of minor importance. With 1913, we propose to differentiate pamphlets in our statistics from bound volumes.

INTERNATIONAL STATISTICS OF BOOK AND PERIODICAL PRODUCTION.

CONDENSED IN LARGE PART FROM DATA COMPILED BY "LE DROIT D'AUTEUR."

Le Droit d'Auteur, the monthly organ, published at Berne, Switzerland, by the "International Bureau for the [Copyright] Protection of Literary and Artistic Works," has for two years past endeavored to compile a trustworthy summary of international statistics of book and periodical production. Such a compilation still faces an utter lack of uniformity in the countries represented in scope, accuracy of tabulation and classification of the statistics in question. The Droit d'Auteur takes, however, a hopeful view of the situation, and believes that more and more civilized countries are sinking their "fantastic oppositions" to proposed bases for securing uniform statistics of literary productions.

It points out, however, that defective methods in many countries and the general lack of uniformity in classification make, as yet, impossible anything like an international comparison of publishing activity. Progress toward uniformity in method is slow, for it is difficult to emancipate one's self from old habits and to abandon traditional processes. Nevertheless, points out Le Droit d'Auteur, steps have been taken toward the general solution of the problem. A uniform method and system of classification (based on the international Dewey Decimal Classification, already in general library use) was suggested by the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY in 1910, recommended by the International Congress of Bibliographers, and has been already adopted, according to Le Droit d'Auteur, by Belgium and Great Britain, as well as the United States.

Statistics for Great Britain are given for 1912. For all other countries the latest available statistics are quoted, generally 1911.

GREAT BRITAIN.

BOOK PRODUCTION.

THE number of books recorded as having been published during 1912 is 12,067, a large increase over the total for any previous year in the history of British publishing. An article in the Publishers' Circular states that the number recorded in 1911 was 10,914, so that the current yearly increase is 1153. The rate of production during the year has been fairly steady, without so much variation from month to month, as in 1911. The months of September, October and November still hold pride of place as the most prolific, and October has established a new record by rising to the total of 1740—which means that, on an average, during that month, 64 books were published every weekday.

The following are the totals for the last eleven years and last year:

Year.	New books.	New editions.	Total.
1901	4,955	1,089	6,044
1902	5,839	1,542	7,381
1903	6,699	1,682	8,381
1904	6,456	1,878	8,334
1905	6,817	1,435	8,252
1906	6,985	1,618	8,603
1907	7,701	2,213	9,914
1908	7,512	2,309	9,821
1909	8,446	2,279	10,725
1910	8,468	2,336	10,804
1911	8,530	2,384	10,914
1912	9,197	2,870	12,067

This is the second year that the statistical table has been constructed on the lines of the classification scheme adopted by the International Congress of Bibliographers at Brussels in 1910, so that a comparison of each class of literature is possible. The increased publishing activity of 1912 has been distributed over nearly all classes of literature. The largest increases have occurred in the following classes: Philosophy, education, science, technology, medicine, domestic arts, literature, fiction, juvenile literature and biography—particularly science, literature, fiction and juvenile literature. In the detailed table given, "Education" includes only books about educational theory and practice, and not textbooks on special subjects, which are classed elsewhere; and also that under "Music," only works about music are recorded.

Large though the total for the year is, it would be possible to swell it to a much greater figure by the inclusion of numerous leaflets (government and other), ephemeral pamphlets, the publications of borough councils and other local government bodies, and musical texts. The latter alone, if fully recorded, would require an annual volume rivaling The English Catalogue in size. The total would be greatly increased by the inclusion of all these items, but the figures would not represent so accurately the book publishing activity of the United Kingdom.

book on the appearance of that volume; so that, for example, the series of "Statutory Rules and Orders," issued by the government, and amounting to several hundred in the year, are merely counted as one item on the appearance of the annual collected volume. The same rule applies to volumes of magazines, etc.

GERMANY.

BOOK PRODUCTION.

The German production of books in 1911, despite the temporary setback in book trade activity, which was reflecting the general financial condition of the country, seems to have been dominated by great optimism, the increase for that year having been the greatest in ten years. As usual, books in German, published in Austria and Switzerland, are included in this count. The following table classifies the output:

	1910	1911
General Bibliography. Books on Library Methods. Encyclopedias. Collective Works. Selections. Writings of Learned Societies. University Questions....	455	469
Theology	2,510	2,732

Three-fourths of the increase is divided between the classes: fiction (+486), education (+400), and philology (+353). The considerable increase of literary works compensates the decrease in 1910. The fluctuations occurring in the other classes are of little importance.

AN ANALYSIS OF THE LEIPZIG BOOK FAIRS.

Two important bibliographical works have been recently published. The first, by M. R. Jentz, bears the title, "Der deutsch-lateinische Büchermarkt nach den Leipziger Osterniess Katalogen von 1740, 1770 und 1800 nach seine gliederung und Handlung." The author has undertaken to examine thoroughly the books offered for sale at the famous Easter fairs of Leipzig for three typical years, at intervening periods of thirty years. In 1740, the new books listed in the Leipzig catalogue numbered but 755, among them 57 translations (10.5 per cent): 32 from the French, 15 from the English, and 5 from the Latin. In 1770, the number had already increased to 1144 books (increase, 51.5 per cent.), 144 of which were translations: 64 from the French, 40 from the English, 12 from the Latin, 10 from the Italian, etc. In 1800, 2569 books were listed, 232 of which were translations: 102 from the French, 79 from the English, 13 from the Dutch, etc. The Latin language, which in 1740 was still predominant in the branches of philology, philosophy, law and natural sciences, had given way to the various national languages.

GERMAN BOOK PRODUCTION BY STATES.

The second study, by M. J. Goldfriedrich, was published a few months ago by the German Börsenverein under the title, "Statistische Uebersicht der im Gebiete des deutsche Buchhandels erschienenen Bücher und Zeitschriften des Jahres 1908." A typical year was chosen for detailed analysis, the figures being secured as data for the German book trade to defend itself against the institution of a forced depository, which the government was planning to reintroduce in Saxony.

The entire literary production of the country is divided in two principal parts—books and periodicals—and subdivided into thirteen groups by States (Prussia, Saxony, Bavaria, Wurtemberg, the other States of the Empire; Austria-Hungary, Switzerland, the other countries) and by cities (Berlin, Leipzig, Munich, Stuttgart and Vienna). A distinction is made in regard to whether or no the publications are accompanied by supplements, and as to whether the pages and the price are indicated. The number of German works published in Austria-Hungary is given as 2867; in Switzerland, 875; and in foreign countries, 187; for then there remains for the production in the German Empire during 1908 only the number of 24,474.

STATISTICS OF PERIODICALS.

The number of periodicals published in Germany in 1908 and recorded in the Annual of the Presse Periodique de Sterling, was 5747. Mr. Goldfriedrich found the number to be 6320 (of which Berlin published 1382; Leipzig, 599; Munich, 224; Stuttgart, 184; Vienna, 629).

SOME GERMAN BOOK COSTS.

One point of interest in the Goldfriedrich analysis was the estimates of book and periodical cost. If, for example, some one library had to buy one copy of each of those 28.403 books and 6320 periodicals, it would have had to pay 99,026 marks (about $20,000) for the former and 46,806 marks (about $9500) for the latter. These figures, of course, represent the retail prices.

The average retail cost of a German book is figured as 3.68 marks (about 70 cents), and of a periodical, 7.55 marks (about $1.50). The latter is probably slightly higher than a similar American average, the former certainly lower.

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF DISSERTATIONS.

The current bibliography of dissertations and academic writing appears in the monthly Bibliographischer Monatsbericht, published by the firm of Gustave Fock, at Leipzig. A considerable diminution in this output appeared in 1911, apparently without any special reason. The figures for successive years show considerable fluctuation:

ACADEMIC YEAR.	TITLES.
1907-08	5097
1908-09	6161
1909-10	5240
1910-11	6560
1911-12	4995

Classified by subjects, the dissertations show as follows:

	1910-11	1911-12
Classical Philology and Archeology		250
Modern Philology. Languages and Modern Literature	314	379
Oriental Languages. Comparative Linguistics	474	35

TRANSLATIONS OF GERMAN WORKS.

Translations of German works, either protected or uncopyrighted, have been, as usual, reported bibliographically in the Börsenblatt for the Slavic languages (Hungarian, Rumanian, and other languages of Oriental Europe). The total for 1911 was 576, the highest in six years, as shown from the following table:

YEAR.
1902	329
1903	319
1904	400
1905	333
1906	358
1907	425
1908	410
1909	477
1910	565
1911	576

The bibliography of German works translated into English, Danish, Spanish, French, Italian, Dutch, Norwegian and Swedish, in 1912, has again been taken up by Mr. Mühlbrecht, Jr. The figures are: 1906, 451; 1907, 488; 1908, 566; 1909, 439; 1910, 357.

GERMAN BOOKS IN THE UNITED STATES.

The number of registrations of German works, in 1911, for which copyright was solicited in the United States, under the American law of March 4, 1909, again showed a decrease, if we may believe the records of the official agency at New York (German book, Art and Music Agency). They amounted, in 1911, to but 3607 (1908, 3467; 1909, 3921; 1910, 3839). They were divided into: books, 623 (1910, 630); periodicals, 182 (195); dramatic works, 68 (67); pictures, drawings, sketches, 48 (121); map, 1 (52); musical works, 2680 (2760).

These figures were in part too small, for 503 books were registered, between April 1 and December 31, 1911, by the American Institute at Berlin, which practically performs this service.

Neither the propaganda made by the agency at New York, the facilities offered by the one at Berlin, or the urging made to German publishers to profit by the new American copyright legislation, have overcome the aversion of the German book trade to the formalities imposed upon foreign authors by the United States. Out of 33,000 works appearing in 1911, only 1211 were entered for copyright in the United States.

GERMAN BOOK TRADE STATISTICS.

The official directory of the German book trade (Offizielles Adressbuch des deutschen Buchhandels), the indispensable annual published by the Börsenverein, gives, in its last edition (1913, seventy-fifth year) a statistical table of firms engaged in the book, music and fine arts trade:

	1911	1912
Germany	9,634	9,525
Austria-Hungary	1,093	1,100
Switzerland	350	355
Countries of Europe	1,102	1,120
America	225	226
Africa	30	30
Asia	41	45
Australia	11	11
Total	12,486	12,412

The apparent decrease in the number of houses in Germany is due, as far as 1912 is concerned, to the exclusion of firms which make dealing in books only a part of their business. The 12,412 firms listed have their businesses in 2451 localities (in 1912, 2455; 1875, 1689). Of these, 330 (1912, 322) are situated within the German Empire: 84 (84): 242 (240) in Switzerland. There are 3249 firms exclusively occupied with publishing (1909, 3245; 1910, 3293; 1911, 3279; 1912, 3265).

On March 31, 1912, the German Börsenverein had 3543 members, 84 more than on March 31, 1911.

The German book trade exported, in 1910, a total of 51,017,000 marks' worth of books:

To Austria-Hungary	20,849,000	marks
" Switzerland	6,841,000	"
" Russia	4,827,000	"
" United States	3,373,000	"
" France	2,544,000	"
" Great Britain	1,516,000	"
" Italy	992 000	"
" Japan	818,000	"

Other large exportations go to Sweden, Argentine, Brazil and Chili.

ARGENTINE REPUBLIC.

STATISTICS OF PERIODICALS.

The commercial division of the Argentine Department of Agriculture finished in June, 1911, a census of the periodical press of the country. The number of organs recorded was 795 (in 1895, 345), among which, 334 (in 1904, 63) are published in the federal capital, 260 in the province of Buenos Aires, and the rest in the other departments. Ten of these organs have been in existence for more than forty years, 21 for more than thirty, and 61 for more than twenty. The great majority, that is, 724 journals, are published in Spanish, 16 are in Italian, 9 English, 6 German, 5 French, 4 Arabic, 2 Danish, 2 Slavic; 6 are published in both Spanish and Italian, 5 in Spanish and French, 4 in French and Italian, 2 in French and English, etc. These facts attest the cosmopolitanism of the population.

The last census of the Argentine press was taken in 1900, and included 739 journals. The growth since then has thus been continuous, but is now rather slackening.

AUSTRIA-HUNGARY.

STATISTICS OF PERIODICALS.

The number of periodicals in German, published in Austria-Hungary in 1908, was 918, of which 629 were in Vienna alone. Perle's Adressbuch, in its 46th edition, for 1911, which contains only periodicals of a certain importance, gives the periodical press of the entire monarchy at 2369, 11 more than in 1910.

BOOKTRADE STATISTICS.

We find in the same annual information as to the number of Austro-Hungarian publishing houses and allied industries:

	1910	1911
Booksellers	2,643	2,709
Publishing houses	700	720
Dealers in music	1,051	1,099
Circulating libraries	354	347

The booktrade had some representation in 839 towns in Austria-Hungary in 1911, as against 813 in 1910.

BOOK PRODUCTION.

Exact statistics of the book production of Austria-Hungary are lacking. Books in German (given in connection with German statistics) numbered 2867 in 1908.

Hungarian production is estimated by the author of an article on the "Hungarian Book Trade" (Börsenblatt, August 22, 1912) at about 3000 volumes a year, which is considerable, given the limited radius of the Hungarian idiom. Outside of official publications, it is the category of judicial and political works that contains the greatest number of works. Children's books and illustrated works are also very numerous; academic books are legion. In medicine and the natural sciences, there are relatively few publications; in architecture and engineering, books are even rarer. In philosophy and theology, are only manuals. Belles-lettres occupy a large place in the output.

BELGIUM.

BOOK PRODUCTION.

The Institut International de bibliographie, at Brussels, furnishes the following statistics of Belgian book production for 1910 and 1911:

BOOK PRODUCTION.

The only exact statistics on publishing output available are those of copyright registrations with the Canadian Minister of Agriculture. From April 1, 1909, to March 31, 1910, these numbered 1535.

The Canadian Courier, which makes a specialty of recording the publication of Canadian books each fall, shows that 94 books have been issued during the year, of which 15 consist of poetry, 31 of fiction, and 48 of general literature. The difficulty of deciding just what is or is not a Canadian book makes this figure somewhat misleading. If we include merely books that have been printed in Canada the number is very much smaller.

COLOMBIA.

STATISTICS OF PERIODICALS.

In 1911, Colombia had 470 periodicals; about a fifth, perhaps 88, appearing in the department of Cundinamarca, where the capital, Bogotá, is situated.

DENMARK.

BOOK PRODUCTION.

The following statistics of book production are made by the Royal Danish Library, and are based on the legal registry; these figures are for the periods between April 1 and March 31:

	1909-10	1910-11	1911-12
Theology	206	304	341
Law	37	30	34

Belles Lettres	736	737	898
Sports	28	20	1
Totals	3,358	3,305	3,633

Digitized by Google

The growth over the preceding year is 328 works; two-thirds of this last total is represented by the additions to the two categories of belles-lettres (+161) and of fine arts (+79). Medicine and the natural sciences are on the decrease.

In the total of 3633 publications, is comprised 1188 brochures (Smaaskrifter) and 403 translations. The greatest number of brochures, say, 363, is in this category. History and domestic geography, which includes the classification so difficult to define of Danemarks indre Forhold (447 publications, of which 204 are brochures); then follow theology, with 155 brochures, the natural sciences (144) and belles-lettres (102).

Of the translations, 46 belong in the classification of theology, 17 in that of pedagogy, 12 in philosophy, 11 in history and foreign geography, etc.; but the largest number of translations, as is natural, is to be found in the class of belles-lettres, where the publications are divided by languages. With 561 Danish publications (1909, 487; 1910, 503) and 37 Icelandic (1909, 17; 1910, 7), there are 300 translations (1909, 153; 1910, 227), a great increase. These translations rank by language:

	1909	1910	1911
Translations from the English	105	103	123
" " " German	38	54	67
" " " French	47	39	61

SPAIN.

BOOK PRODUCTION.

For 1911, for the first time, the Bibliografía Española enables us to give a complete table of the Spanish book output, upon which have been available heretofore only incomplete data. The total for 1911 was 2878 books, divided into four large classes: general works, philosophy and religion, 333; social science, 1006; literature, 1112; and history and geography, 425.

It is impossible to analyze these totals in detail, but one comparison is significant of modern Spain—that after novels, the highest total, comes immediately works in applied science.

STATISTICS OF PERIODICALS.

An equal good fortune befalls us in the statistics of the Spanish periodical press, concerning which we have been deprived of information since 1900 (1347 periodicals). The Revista Minera, Metalúrgica y de Ingenieria (for December 24, 1911) publishes figures on this subject gathered by the Minister of the Government, giving for 1911 a total of 1838 periodicals, divided as follows:

Newspapers and political reviews	749
Organs of societies and scientific associations	55
Military art	21
Literature	87
Education	39
Sciences	72
Law	56
Medicine and pharmacy	73
Religion	15

FRANCE.

BOOK PRODUCTION.

Statistics of French book production are made up from the figures of the Bibliographie de la France:

Year	Books and pamphlets	Music	Engraving, etc.
1902	12,199	6,719	843
1903	12,264	6,824	950
1904	12,139	6,429	927
1905	12,416	6,197	738
1906	10,898	5,926	1,054
1907	10,785	7,648	832
1908	11,073	7,531	468
1909	13,185	7,035	589
1910	12,615	5,767	534
1911	11,652	4,848	504

The decrease noted for the year 1910 extends, this time, through all three divisions (-963, -919, -30). The musical output seems not to have been so low for ten years, which hardly corresponds to actual trade conditions.

In discussing French book output by classes, it should be noted that for the year 1910 a radical change in the classification used took place. It comprised 7 main divisions and 66 subdivisions. This classification was revised again for the systematic tables of 1911, and extended to 9 main divisions. For purposes of comparison, the following analysis of the 1911 output is made according to the older classification:

RECORD OF FRENCH BOOK PRODUCTION.

	1910	1911
Philosophy	159	168
Religion and theology	855	888
Sociology and economics	206	258
Law	386	349
Education	1,237	1,097
Science	417	398
Medicine, hygiene	1,230	1,022
Agriculture	282	237
Domestic economy	19	15
Finance	36	38
Industry	274	284
Fine arts	328	381
Games and sports	77	110
Literature and the fine arts	2,818	2,749
Poetry	489	491
Fiction	1,152	1,107
History and geography	2,112	1,817
Totals	11,266	10,396

Some items in individual subjects may be of interest: "Aviation" had but 55 books in 1911, as against 67 in 1910; books on administration decrease from 133 to 126; colonization, from 130 to 88. Books on the organization of labor have increased from 51 to 68. There is no record of juvenile book production.

in India 747 newspapers (73 more than in 1904) and 793 other periodicals (283 more than in 1904).

ITALY.

BOOK PRODUCTION.

For a number of years, 1906-10, the Italian book production remained stationary; indeed, slightly decreased. Then, suddenly, without any plausible reason, the production in 1911 increased 4141 titles:

YEAR.	TOTAL.	REPRINTS.
1906	6,822	446
1907	7,040	416
1908	6,918	416
1909	6,833	536
1910	6,788	562
1911	10,929	614

To these totals must be added 59 academical writings and 779 musical works. The heavy increase noted is divided between all branches, as is shown by the following classified analysis:

	1910	1911
Bibliography, Encyclopedia	66	110
Philosophy	182	266
Religion	295	371
Education	357	538
Textbooks	601	863
History	599	938
Biography	242	354
Geography	86	194
Philology	344	723
Poetry	273	302
Fiction	414	415
Dramas, theatre	256	275
Sundries	171	156
Law, jurisprudence	349	622
Social sciences	730	1,111
Physical sciences	139	589
Medicine, pharmacy	503	1,082
Technology	253	411
Military and naval sciences	116	206
Fine arts	169	347
Agriculture, industrial and commercial arts	643	1,056
Total	6,788	10,929

The increase is particularly noticeable in the classes: medicine (+579), science (+381 and 450), agriculture, industrial and commercial arts (+413), philology (+379), and history (+339).

Of 11,317 publications, 10,835 appeared in Italian, 241 in French, 153 in Latin, 34 in English, 27 in German, 16 in Spanish, 10 in Greek and 1 in Portuguese.

The translation from foreign languages into Italian, during 1911, amounted to 461 (in 1909, 433; in 1910, 435); 235 of these were from the French, 97 from the German, 63 (in 1909, 60; in 1910, 65) from the English.

There is apparently more than the usual discrepancy between the trade statistics of publishing activity and the official record of copyright registrations. The latter, as very explicitly published in the Bolletino della proprietà intellectuale, gave the total registrations for 1911 at only 2121.

JAPAN.

BOOK PRODUCTION.

The Imperial Ministry of the Interior of Japan furnishes statistics of the Japanese book production and of the sales of printed matter there for the years 1910 and 1911:

Years	Works Total Number	Reprints	Translations	N'spapers Total Numbers	Other Periodicals
1902	23,357	407	8	1,329	586
1903	24,755	459	17	1,520	721
1904	30,736	1,068	28	1,585	777
1905	30,046	1,784	17	1,749	859
1906	28,861	542	65	1,952	979
1907	29,471	366	49	2,251	1,099
1908	29,029	507	43	2,481	1,227
1909	34,730	607	57	2,727	1,368
1910	41,620	.....	52	1,793	621
1911	43,244	.....	91	2,077	571

The former maximum of the year 1905 has been passed by a great deal in both 1910 and 1911, the latter year showing a production amounting to nearly double that of 1912. Translations have increased tenfold since that time, although even now they are few, and are mainly religious books, literature, fiction and sport.

Classified in 33 categories (new classification of 1909), the Japanese book production is as follows for the last three years:

	1909	1910	1911
Politics	3,490	8,391	8,524
Law and jurisprudence	1,191	1,182	1,277

Sundries	7,644	8,979	8,909
Total	34,730	41,620	43,244

The number of copyright registrations under the old law of March 3, 1899, was 205 in 1910; for 1911, 214. Registrations are made, however, only of transfers of copyright.

IMPORTATION AND EXPORTATION.

The figures of book export and import given below are taken from the report of the Minister of Finance, and are for the years 1908-1911 (expressed in yen). The statistics distinguish between foreign and Japanese productions. We can neglect, where the import is concerned, the small figure of Japanese production, and with relation to the export, the figures relating to foreign production:

BOOKS AND PAPERS.

	1908	1909	1910	1911

Exportation	647,776	664,019	618,851	495,443

The most important importing countries are the United States, Germany, and England, in this order.

NORWAY.

BOOK PRODUCTION.

The Auskatalog oner Norsk Literatur, edited by the Association of Norwegian Librarians, reports only books made known to the bureau of the association of book publishers. Statistics made therefrom are necessarily, therefore, incomplete. More comprehensive is the Norsk Bokfortignelse, the catalogue annually published by the university, and based upon the obligatory depot created by the law of June 20, 1882. We owe to the kindness of Mr. Klaus Hael, at Christiania, the following statistics:

	1909	1910	1911
Books and pamphlets	1338	1391	1342
Musical works	210	71	198
Printings	27	31	8
Maps	19	22	26

The Norwegian book output seems to be at present, as may be seen, practically stationary.

STATISTICS OF PERIODICALS.

The following statistics of periodical production in Norway are likewise obtained from the Norsk Bokfortignelse:

	1909	1910	1911

HOLLAND.

BOOK PRODUCTION.

The publications figuring in the first part of the annual catalogue, which the house of A. W. Sijthoff, at Leyden, publishes under the title of Brinkman's Alphabetische lijst van Boeken, Landkaarten, etc. (now in its sixty-eighth year), form the basis of trade bibliography for the Netherlands:

The Dutch production has been for some years practically stationary. It will be interesting to observe whether this regularity will be affected by the entrance of Holland into the international union.

SWITZERLAND.

BOOK PRODUCTION.

The Swiss national library at Berne has been, since 1848, charged with the compilation of all data relative to Swiss bibliography. It publishes figures of book production, as given below. It must be confessed, however, that these are, from a bibliographical standpoint, practically valueless, since, as we understand it, they include all accessions to the library, regardless of origin. This means that a very large proportion of these figures represents the publications of other countries:

STATISTICS OF PERIODICALS.

The excellent Annuaire de la Presse suisse et du monde politique gives an exact statement of the periodicals published within the Swiss Confederation. For 1909 the figures showed 1332 papers and reviews; for 1911, 1519.

REPORT OF THE REGISTER OF COPYRIGHTS FOR 1911-1912.

THE following is a summary of the report of Thorvald Solberg, the Register of Copyrights for the United States for the fiscal year 1911-1912:

RECEIPTS.

The gross receipts during the year were $120,149.51. A balance of $7377.33, representing trust funds and unfinished business, was on hand July 1, 1911, making a total of $127,526.84 to be accounted for. Of this amount, the sum of $3506.38, received by the Copyright Office, was refunded as excess fees or as fees for articles not registrable, leaving a net balance of $124,020.46. The balance carried over to July 1, 1912, was $7335.41 (representing trust funds, $6282.09, and total unfinished business since July 1, 1897—15 years —$1053.32), leaving for fees applied during the fiscal years 1911-1912, $116,685.05.

This is an increase in fees over the previous fiscal year of $6771.10.

EXPENDITURES.

The appropriation made by Congress for salaries in the Copyright Office for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1912, was $95,180. The total expenditure for salaries was $95,058.55, or $21,626.50 less than the net amount of fees earned and paid into the Treasury during the corresponding year. The expenditure for supplies, except furniture, including stationery and other articles, and postage on foreign mail matter, etc., was $1056.81.

During the fifteen fiscal years since the reorganization of the Copyright Office (from July 1, 1897, to June 30, 1912), the total receipts have exceeded one and a quarter million dollars ($1,251,161.82); the copyright fees applied and paid into the Treasury have amounted to more than a million dollars ($1,189,666.70); the articles deposited number more than two and three-quarters million

(2,801,691), and the total copyright registrations over one and a half million (1,577,732).

The fees ($1,189,666.70) were larger than the appropriation for salaries ($1,005,134.97) used during the same period by $184,531.73. In addition to this direct profit, a large number of the 2,801,691 books, maps, prints and other articles deposited during the fifteen years were of substantial pecuniary value, and of such a character that their accession to the Library of Congress through the Copyright Office effected a saving to the purchase fund of the Library equal in amount to their cost.

COPYRIGHT ENTRIES, FEES AND DEPOSITS.

The registrations for the fiscal year numbered 120,931. Of these, 108,393 were registrations at $1 each, including a certificate, and 11,189 were registrations of photographs without certificates, at 50 cents each. There were also 1349 registrations of renewals at 50 cents each. The fees for these registrations amounted to a total of $114,662.

The number of registrations in each class from July 1, 1911, to June 30, 1912, as compared with the number of entries made in the previous year, is shown in Table E.

The various articles deposited in compliance with the new copyright law which have been registered, stamped, indexed and catalogued during the fiscal year amounted to 219,521.

The copyright act which went into force on July 1, 1909, provides for the gradual elimination of the accumulated copyright deposits. During the year books desired for the Library, to the number of 8796 volumes, have been transferred to the Library through the Order Division. These volumes were in addition to the "first" copies of copyright books sent as received from day to day, numbering 13,578 for the fiscal year, thus making a total of 22,374 books and pamphlets delivered to the Library from the Copyright Office. In addition to the current copies of maps and musical works sent daily to the music and map divisions of the Library from the Copyright Office (4344 maps and 28,113 musical compositions), 25,782 articles (maps, music and periodicals) were transferred to the Library from the deposits received prior to July 1, 1909.

The act of March 4, 1909 (Sec. 59), provides for the transfer to other governmental libraries in the District of Columbia, "for use therein," of such copyrighted deposits as are not required by the Library of Congress, and during the present fiscal year, 15,755 books were selected by the librarians and thus transferred.

Under the provisions of the same act, authority is granted for the return to the claimant of copyright of such copyright deposits as are not required by the Library. Notice has been printed during the year for all works registered and deposited from 1880-1889, but no requests for return have been received. Twenty-six dramatic or musical compositions have been returned to the copyright claimants, and of the current deposits not needed by the Library of Congress, the following have also been so returned: 16,353 books, 6118 photographs, 13,015 prints, 4555 contributions to periodicals, 3070 periodicals; a total of 43,137 articles.

In response to inquiries during the year from the Card Section, the Order Division and the Reading Room, in regard to 503 books supposed to be copyrighted, but not found in the Library, it was discovered that 79 of these works were already in the Library, 119 of the books had been deposited and were still in the Copyright Office, 39 works were either not published, did not claim copyright, or for other reasons could not be deposited, and in the case of 101 works no answers to our letters of inquiry had been received up to June 30, 1912. Copies were received of 165 works in all, in response to request made by the Copyright Office during the period of twelve months.

COPYRIGHT INDEX AND CATALOGUE, BULLETINS AND CIRCULARS.

The copyright registrations are indexed upon cards. The cards made are first used as copy for the printed catalogue, and after printing are added to the permanent card indexes of the copyright entries. The temporary cards made for the printed indexes, etc., to the catalogue (numbering 78,517 during the fiscal year) are eliminated; the remaining cards (120,237 for the fiscal year) are added to the permanent card indexes, now numbering considerably over two million cards.

The publication of the Catalogue of Copyright Entries has been continued, as required by law. For convenience of search, the volumes are made to cover the works published and deposited during the calendar year, rather than the fiscal year. Five volumes of the Catalogue of Copyright Entries were printed during the calendar year 1911, containing a total of 6842 pages, divided into four parts, each of which is sold separately, at a nominal subscription rate within the maximum price established by law, as follows:

Part I.—Books, pamphlets, dramatic compositions and maps (two volumes), $1. Part II.—Periodicals, 50 cents. Part III.—Musical compositions (a very bulky volume), $1. Part IV.—Prints, including chromos and lithographs, photographs and the descriptions of original works of art—paintings, drawings and sculpture—50 cents. The price for the entire catalogue for the year is $3. The subscriptions, by express provisions of the copyright act, are required to be paid to the Superintendent of Documents (Office of the Public Printer, Washington, D. C.), and all subscriptions must be for the complete year for each part desired.

The considerable deposit of foreign books made under the operation of the present copyright law adds a new element of value to the Catalogue of Copyrighted Books. More than ten thousand volumes were deposited of books printed in languages other than English, and nearly 1500 volumes of books printed abroad in the English language.

The new British copyright act, which went into effect on July 1, 1912, was printed as "Bulletin No. 16" of the Copyright Office, entitled "Copyright in England." To the full text of the new law were added the texts of the previous copyright acts not repealed, and the whole was supplied with a complete and carefully made index.

In addition, a small edition was printed and distributed of the presidential proclamation in regard to the provisions of Section 1 (e) of the copyright act, relating to the mechanical reproduction of music in behalf of Cuba, November 27, 1911.

Note: The total number of books entered for copyright in 1908-9, the last year under the old law, was 32,533. In 1905-6 the total was 29,261, in 1906-7, 30,879, and in 1907-8, 30,191.

The greater part of the business of the Copyright Office is done by correspondence. The total letters and parcels received during the fiscal year numbered 140,305, while the letters, certificates, parcels, etc., dispatched numbered 154,436. Letters received transmitting remittances numbered 44,285, including money orders to the number of 29,190. During the last fifteen fiscal years the money orders received numbered 376,147.

LEGISLATION.

The new copyright law has now been in force three full years, and certain amendatory legislation has been suggested. Six copyright bills were proposed during the fiscal year in the second session of the Sixty-second Congress. The first was introduced by Hon. Edward W. Townsend, of New Jersey, and proposed to amend Section 25 of the act of March 4, 1909, to limit recovery to $100 in the case of the infringement of a dramatic or dramatico-musical composition by means of moving pictures. The same bill was presented in the Senate on January 8, 1912. After several changes, the bill was passed in the House on June 17, with the following provisions: Motion pictures were included as subject matter of copyright; provision was made for the deposit and registration of motion pictures; and provision was made as to damages in the case of infringement by means of motion pictures. In the final form, the provision for a minimum damage of $50, in the case of infringement of an undramatized or non-dramatic work by means of motion pictures, was stricken out. The bill passed the Senate August 19; on August 24 it was approved and became law. Three other bills were introduced in the House during the discussion of the Townsend bill. Hon. Martin A. Morrison introduced a bill in the House, on March 26, to make the certificate of copyright prima facie evidence of copyright. Subsequently, a substitute bill included certain additional statements in the certificate of copyright, such certificate to be "admitted in any court as prima facie evidence of the facts stated therein." The final amended text was presented April 20, and in the Senate on June 5. The House Committee on Patents reported favorably, with slight amendments, but no further action was taken. Hon. John H. Stephens, of Texas, also introduced a bill to provide for international reciprocity in regard to patents and copyrights. Hon. Mr. Campbell presented "A bill suspending the patent and copyright laws of the United States when a patent or copyright, or any article or product protected by patent or copyright, is owned, used or leased by any trust or monopoly in restraint of trade in violation of the act of February 4, 1887." This is the same bill, with minor changes, which was introduced by Mr. Campbell on April 10, 1911. On May 28, 1912, Mr. Mott presented a bill proposing to include in the list of the classes of articles subject-matter of copyright. "Labels, trade-marks, firm names, and special designs, pictures, prints, wrappers, cartons, containers, and advertisements which are specifically created for individual trades, manufactures or businesses, engraved, printed, colored or produced in any manner whatsoever." The bill also proposes to strike out the misdemeanor clause in Section 28 of the act of March 4, 1909.

INTERNATIONAL COPYRIGHT RELATIONS.

In the Register's report for the year 1910-1911, reference was made to the important fact that the United States had signed, at Buenos Aires, on August 11, 1910, the fourth Pan-American "convention concerning literary and artistic copyright," and that its ratification was approved by the Senate on February 15, 1911. On December 7, 1911, the President reported to Congress as follows:

"The four important conventions signed at the fourth Pan-American conference at Buenos Aires, providing for the regulation of trade-marks, patents and copyrights, and for the arbitration of pecuniary claims, have, with the advice and consent of the Senate, been ratified on the part of the United States, and the ratifications have been deposited with the government of the Argentine Republic, in accordance with the requirements of the conventions. I am not advised that similar action has been taken by any other of the signatory governments."

The President published, on November 27, 1911, a proclamation to the effect that citizens of Cuba are entitled to all the benefits of Section 1 (e) of the act of March 4, 1909, including "copyright controlling the parts of instruments serving to reproduce, mechanically, the musical work" in the case of all musical compositions by Cuban composers published since May 29, 1911, and duly registered for copyright in the United States.

A copyright treaty between the United States and Hungary was signed at Budapest on January 30, 1912. It was submitted to the Senate on March 8, 1912, ratified September 16, and went into effect October 16, 1912.

COPYRIGHT EVENTS AND LEADING AMERICAN CASES IN 1911.

The following schedule, continuing the chronological table of cases for previous years in Bowker's "Copyright," and the similar summary for 1911 in the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY and the AMERICAN LIBRARY ANNUAL, gives leading American copyright cases decided or recorded in 1912, together with a list of principal events in legislation and treaty relations. Cases of minor importance, settling no principle, but dealing only with details of procedure or applying settled principles to specific cases, are not covered. The schedule covers the name of the court, the name of the judge presiding or giving the opinion, reference to the law report, if the case is reported, and to the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY report, and also a condensed statement of the points decided, with page reference to the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY report.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE STATIONERS' BOARD OF TRADE.

At the annual meeting of the Stationers' Board of Trade, held January 14, 1913, Henry C. Bainbridge, president, read his address, and the reports of the treasurer and executive committee were read and accepted.

PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

Gentlemen of The Stationers' Board of Trade:

Another year has passed, and we are beginning the thirty-eighth year of our existence. The results of the past year, while not as profitable as we might wish, are very creditable to the board of trustees, who have given so much of their time and thought to the subject of supervising and directing the work of the office.

The treasurer's report shows a balance of $3281.84. The disbursements of the year exceeded the income by $918.57, which we charge to the falling off of business mainly in the bankruptcy department.

The information department has been used to about the same extent as last year, 105 members having asked for reports to the extent of their requirements. Effort is being constantly made to improve the quality of commercial reports and to obtain information from the highest sources possible.

The executive committee's report shows that in the collection department we received, during the year, 3630 claims, aggregating $185,535.15, which shows an increase of about 100 claims over the past year, aggregating about $13,000 more than last year; and while we have not collected as much through the office as last year, the same being about $12,000 less, we have caused to be paid direct to members, as a result of demand notice from the office and attorneys, about $9000 more than last year, and the fees and rebates in this department are $874.46 more than last year, which has largely helped to offset the decrease in the income of the bankruptcy department.

We would again call members' attention to the demand notices for collecting claims, which we sell for only 40 cents per hundred; and those that have used them, find it a desirable and inexpensive means of collecting past-due claims direct, without paying a fee to the board. If you have not used it, kindly give it a trial.

We also recommend the draft system to those who have not used it as an effective means of collecting claims at a very small expense when draft is paid to the bank.

The bankruptcy department shows that we have not handled nearly as much business as we did last year, there having been placed with us, during this year, 90 less new cases than last year. Notwithstanding this, the aggregate amount of the claims received by us this year amount to about $12,000 over the previous year, and the amount paid to creditors, all told, through this department, amounted to about $29,000, which is slightly in excess of last year, but the fees and rebates fell off to the amount of $1554.94.

There have been 10,337 letters received and 11,712 letters written, and 11,135 circulars sent out. We trust that members will not fail to make use of this department, as well as the collection department, when the opportunity presents itself, for the more claims we receive in bankruptcy and failure cases, the more apt we are to accomplish good results. Particularly so in bankruptcy cases, when we can control matters by electing a desirable trustee in the interest of the creditors.

Our secretary has had large experience in handling bankruptcy, failure and adjustment cases, and when it is necessary for him, in the interest of the creditors, to investigate the matter personally by proceeding to the locality where the failure has taken place, he is ready at all times to immediately proceed to same for the purpose of investigating the failure and ascertaining the best action to take in the premises.

Through the collection and bankruptcy departments, there has been collected and disbursed $98,349.19; and there was also paid direct to members $58,559.72, making a total paid of $156,908.91.

During the year we have lost from our membership by death Mr. Thomas W. Harbottle, member of firm of Kimpton, Harbottle & Haupt; Mr. Nelson Taylor, president of the Baker & Taylor Co.; Mr. Charles S. Dennison, president and treasurer of Dennison Mfg. Co.; Mr. Frank H. Scott, president of the Century Co.; Mr. Clarence W. McIlvaine, vice-president of Harper & Bros.; Mr. F. A. Flinn; Mr. Cyrus W. Brown, treasurer of the Irving Pitt Mfg. Co.; Mr. Edward J. Weis, of the Weis Mfg. Co.

The books and accounts have been examined by a certified accountant, Mr. Frank Broaker, and he reports same to be correct.

I had the honor to represent this board at the annual convention of the National Association of Stationers and Manufacturers, held at Omaha, Neb., in August last, the proceedings of which you have been made familiar with through the trade press.

There is great satisfaction in seeing how well the dealers and manufacturers are working together in bringing about reforms in trade abuses and in standardizing sizes in paper, etc., changing forms of doing up goods and in doing and undoing many things which, after careful consideration, are decided to be best. In this way the National Association is making itself of great value to the trade in general.

The next convention of the National Association will be held at Springfield, Mass., in August next, when the paper makers will do their utmost to make the visit of the delegates instructive and interesting.

Our annual dinner will be held at the Hotel Plaza, on the evening of Tuesday, March 25, 1913.

During the past year we have, in the hope of further helping our members, become associated with the Chamber of Commerce of the United States of America, and this board will be represented at their next convention by our second vice-president, Mr. Arthur P. Jackson. Our members can rest assured that they will be kept informed of any actions of the Chamber of Commerce which may be of interest to our trade.

In closing, I want to thank the members, trustees and office employees for their uniform courtesy and consideration during the past year, thereby making the duties of the office so much easier and pleasanter to perform.

I find a lack of interest on the part of some members, which is discouraging. Remember that your trustees, eighteen in number, are serving you without remuneration, but through loyalty to the trade and an honest desire to do what little they can to make trade conditions better, and to make it easier and safer for you to do business. Now, if the methods of the office do not please you, instead of sending your resignation, remember that you have a proprietary interest in the board, and should be personally interested in righting any wrongs. Then try and do it. The trustees will appreciate your work and help to carry out your ideas.

REPORT OF EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Mr. President and Members of the Stationers' Board of Trade:

As chairman of the executive committee of the Stationers' Board of Trade, I take pleasure in submitting the following report for the year ending November 30, 1912:

BUREAU OF INFORMATION.

The reports on file in this department to December 1, 1912, number 100,503. At the present time we have revised reports of the standing and credit of 83,343 dealers, of which 2847 are new names received during the year.

From December 1, 1911, to November 30, 1912, we have furnished to members 18,569 reports, as against 18,407 during the previous year.

INFORMATION (REPORTS) APPLIED FOR.

	1911	1912
Inquiries of correspondents	6,868	6,736
Requests for dealers for statements	5,181	5,264
INFORMATION (REPORTS) RECEIVED.
Reports from correspondents	6,682	6,627
Statements received	2,953	3,046

During the past year we sent to members for information 5972 inquiries. The previous year, 6379 inquiries were sent. Letters written, 992, as against 1057 during the previous year. Weekly circulars issued from this department during the year were 8400.

This department was used, in 1911, by 108 members, and in the past year by 105 members.

Various members have obtained 308 reports in excess of the number allowed.

COLLECTION DEPARTMENT.

In the collection department, there have been received for collection, during the year, 3630 claims, aggregating $185,535.15.

Collections to the amount of $69,388.68 have been made through the office, and nearly $59,000 was paid direct to members as the result of notice from the office and attorneys.

2377 claims have been closed by collection through the office, by attorneys or paid direct to members.

3887 claims were sent to attorneys during the year.

1271 claims, amounting to $58,559.72, were settled direct.

781 claims were settled through attorneys.

325 claims were settled through the office.

488 claims were returned uncollectible.

154 claims transferred to the bankruptcy department.

511 claims are still open and in process of collection, 3019 claims having been disposed of.

There have been received 17,114 letters and 34,815 written.

There have been received, during the year, 690 drafts, which are included in the number of claims received, aggregating $46,402.32, of which 115 have been collected, amounting to $6906.69. The remaining 575 unpaid drafts were turned over to attorneys for collection.

BANKRUPTCY DEPARTMENT.

During the year, 328 new cases, 1007 new claims, aggregating $114,114.78, were entered in this department; 11 cases, including 25 claims, aggregating $1420.29, settled in full. 169 cases, including 558 claims, aggregating $82,317.71, settled by compromise or through the bankruptcy court. 7 cases, including 7 claims, aggregating $596.71, were withdrawn. 82 cases, including 189 claims, aggregating $12,070.85, closed as worthless.

There has been paid during the year to creditors through this department, proceeds of $28,960.51.

10,337 letters were received and 11,712 written, and 11,135 circulars were sent out.

Through the collection and bankruptcy departments, there has been collected and disbursed $98,349.16; and there was also paid direct to members $58,559.72, making a total paid of $156,908.91.

The books have been audited monthly, and bills have been passed and paid regularly each month; besides, the accountant for the board, Mr. Frank Broaker, has audited the books to December 1 last, and according to the certified report, as rendered by him, they were found correct.

The year ended with a balance of $5967.74 in the treasurer's hands. This amount, less the redemption and dinner fund accounts and estate receipts undistributed, leaves at the disposal of the treasurer $3281.84.

Your executive committee earnestly requests the hearty co-operation of all the members in increasing the usefulness of the board and enlarging its membership, so that the year 1913 will make a better showing than any previous year.

Respectfully submitted,

STEPHEN FARRELLY,
Chairman Executive Committee.

At the first regular meeting of the new board of trustees, the following officers and committees were elected:

Mr. Stephen Farrelly, American News Company, president; Mr. Arthur P. Jackson, Hawkes-Jackson Co., first vice-president; Mr. Louis V. Blanchet, Berlin & Jones Envelope Co., second vice-president; Mr. Herbert M. Condit, secretary and treasurer.

ENGLISH BOOK SALES OF 1912.

REVIEWED BY J. HERBERT SLATER IN THE ATHENAEUM.

THE sale of the fourth portion of the celebrated library of the late Mr. Robert Hoe realized an enormous sum never before approached in the annals of the salesrooms when a library has been in question. This sale was not, of course, so interesting to us as it must have been to the collectors of the United States. It attracts primarily by reason of its magnitude, and has set people wondering how long it will be before a dispersal on the same colossal scale takes place among us. That will perhaps not be in our time, for Mr. Hoe had for fifty years been gathering together books of a peculiarly desirable kind, or of a kind which this generation believes to be most desirable; and some of the prices realized—for example, £10,000 for a copy of the so-called "Mazarin" Bible on vellum (it is better when printed on paper)—were greatly in excess of those previously obtained in this country, or anywhere else, for copies of a similar character. Mr. Hoe was at the height of his bookish activities at a transition period, and seems to have been able to read the signs of his time and to have anticipated with more than ordinary accuracy the events of the future, gathering about him a very large number of books which became of greater and still greater importance as the years rolled on. Many of them were well known to be in his posession; they were talked about; and when they came to the inevitable hammer, there was a rush, especially in the early stages of the sale, to obtain them.

This was no new experience; the same thing takes place every day on a smaller scale, for the commercial value of a book depends to a great extent on the company it keeps, and there is room for all sorts of comparisons and explanations whenever a library finds its way, either wholly or in part, into other hands.

The Athenæum compares the Hoe library with the Ashburnham, Heber and other great sales of the past, and goes on:

These are the most important book sales which have hitherto been held in this country, and yet the combined proceeds of them all does not amount to the sum realized by the Hoe sale alone. Times have changed, but although the desire to obtain a certain class of books of very expensive character has become more pronounced, because the available copies have become fewer, book-collectors still belong to the same old school and recite the same formulæ. All are alike in the main current of their aspirations, but not all are equally well provided with the means to follow them: and so, although there is but one school, there are many antechambers, and all comes right in the end under the changeable and inexplicable decrees of fashion. It would, for instance, be difficult to explain how it comes about that the ponderous folios of the Fathers and the works of those Greek and Roman writers which are quoted from repeatedly should, unless they happen to afford examples of ancient typography, have fallen to such abysmal depths in the bookman's regard. At one time he favored them, the latter especially, as well as many other classes of books which have since ceased to interest him, at any rate to the same extent, while other classes, at one time neglected, have taken their place. This change in one or other of its varied forms is accurately reflected in the tabulated results of every season's book sales, and what seems at first sight a mere slavish record of prices becomes an unerring guide to the fashion of the day when it is looked at aright.

No book is now sold "for its weight in gold," as the saying is (though the expression has ceased to have more than an academic application, for many books realize much more), unless it comes within one or other of the prominent divisions into which the chart is mapped out, and this accounts for the apparent ease with which those who are familiar with books are able to say whether any particular volume is or is not worthy of more than passing notice from a marketable point of view.

This appears at first sight to be an exceedingly difficult process, for there are millions of different books in the world, and it is not possible for any single person, however great his experience, to be acquainted with them all. The result is arrived at by a process of comparison which after a time becomes automatic. It is general, and not particular; and what appears to the uninitiated to be nothing short of miraculous is seen, when explained, to be natural enough, though of course it is dependent to an enormous extent upon experience, not of some individual book which may conceivably be quite unknown, but of the class or kind to which it belongs, and the position it therefore occupies, for the time being, in the scale.

Many of the sales held during the past year show the principles upon which the activities of the modern collector are based. The sale of the library of the late Dr. Frank Payne consisted almost entirely of botanical works closely connected with the medical practice of earlier days, and old English classics, among them a lengthy series of first and early editions of the writings of Milton, but deficient in respect of the extremely rare "Comus, a Maske," 1637, small 4to, which, however, appeared on June 27th, and realized £520, although it was not an immaculate copy. The first portion of Dr. Payne's library, sold en bloc in July, 1911, consisted mainly of medical works of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries in English, Latin, and German, manuscripts of the same character, and books relating to the Plague. The tendency here is precise, and needs no elaboration.

The sale of February 5th and two following days was of a miscellaneous character and, as often happens in such cases, some very good and desirable works had been brought together, including a number of Americana, always in great demand. The latter comprised William Hilton's "Relation of a Discovery lately made on the Coast of Florida," 1664, 4to, £16 (unbound); "The Two Charters Granted by Charles II. to the Proprietors of Carolina," n.d., 4to, £11 10s. (unbound): nineteen of the large maps published by Jefferys about 1750, £14: and "A Complete Collection of the Laws of Virginia," 1662, folio, with a neatly written MS. of 35 leaves entitled, "At a Generall Assembly Begun at James City, 1684," £22 10s. (original calf). A series of 22 volumes of the large plates of Piranesi, all Roman issues (those of Paris are inferior), brought £112 (half morocco); and part of an original manuscript in the handwriting of Ruskin, consisting of 4 pages of "The Gipsies," £19 15s. (morocco extra). Ruskin was very careless of his manuscripts, and it is doubtful whether a single complete work of his exists in that form.

At another miscellaneous sale at Sotheby's, on February 15th and 16th, Phineas Fletcher's "The Purple Island, or the Isle of Man," 1633, and his "Locustæ," 1627, in one volume, realized £46 (calf); an imperfect copy of "The Cronycle of Englonde," as printed by Wynkyn de Worde in 1498, £27 (calf); Thomas Killigrew's "Comedies and Tragedies," 1664, folio, £27 10s. (original calf); the first edition of Montaigne's "Essays," as translated by Florio, with the leaf of "Errata" and the rare poem by Samuel Daniel, £27 10s. (original calf); and Shakespeare's "Fourth Folio," 1685, a little stained in parts, but generally good, £55 (calf). These are mentioned particularly as they belong to one kind—that of old English classical literature, for which there is apparently a still greater future. Nicholas Statham's "Abridgment of Cases Down to the end of Henry VI.," printed at Rouen by G. le Tailleur for R. Pynson about 1490, realized £40 (calf) for another reason altogether. It is a specimen of ancient typography in English, and that is sufficient to carry it anywhere.

"The Library of a Collector" was of a distinct character. The books consisted almost entirely of comparatively modern English works, with illustrations by the Cruikshanks, "Crowquill," and Thackeray; and there was also a good assortment of original editions of Fielding, Sterne, Swift, Goldsmith, Dr. Johnson, and Charles Lamb. "King Glumpus," 1837, which fetched £90 (the two blank leaves wanting), and "The Exquisites," £16 (one of the four plates only), derive their importance from the fact that they were illustrated by Thackeray and are exceedingly scarce, more especially when the plates are colored by a contemporary hand, as in this instance. A copy of the first issue of the first edition of "Gulliver's Travels," 1726, 2 volumes, 8vo, brought £81 (morocco extra). The first issue of "Gulliver" has separate pagination and separate titles to the different parts, and the inscription is under the portrait instead of round it.

On February 29th, Messrs. Puttick & Simpson sold a set of the original editions of Dickens's "Christmas Books" for £34, a large sum, due to the fact that "The Battle of Life," 1846, belonged to the extremely rare second issue. Those who have "The Battle of Life" in that, the first, edition, should turn to the engraved title. If it has the words "A love story" in a scroll supported by a Cupid and the publishers' imprint without date below, then it belongs to the second issue, and should be made a special note of. At the same sale a copy of the first or Salisbury edition of "The Vicar of Wakefield," 2 volumes, 1766, fetched £72 (old calf).

The late Mr. Charles Butler, of Connaught Place, W., was an all-round collector. The sale of the third portion of his very extensive library occupied March 18th-20th, and with the first and second portions, sold by Messrs. Sotheby in April and May, 1911, realized nearly £17,000. This third portion was remarkable for a large number of manuscript and printed service books, Greek and Latin classics, and English and French literature of all periods. As a rule the prices realized were small, from £2 to £5. There were, however, many exceptional books, chief among them being Caxton's "Chronicles of England," 1482, the second edition (rarer than the first of 1480), which realized £115, many leaves being missing; a sound copy of "Chaucer's Works," 1561, folio, £28 (Russia gilt); and, perhaps more important still, a lengthy series of Horæ printed in Paris between 1497 and 1552. One of these fetched £197; the others all sorts of prices from £4 to £60.

Other sales held during March were of a miscellaneous character. That held by Messrs. Hodgson on the 28th and 29th was good of its kind, and a considerable number of useful books changed hands on that occasion. This sale opens up another view of the present state of the book market which is applicable to the vast majority of collectors—those who have enough money to spend upon books, but not more than enough. Most books come within their scope, and they can buy all that are really necessary for less than they could have obtained them ten years ago. What they cannot do is to compete with any chance of success for those exceptionally rare and important books which everybody wants, but only a few can have, and which, as many believe, are seen at their best on the shelves of the great public libraries of the world.

Another class of books which of late years has become more and more in request consists of copies of the English classics having inscriptions in the handwriting of their authors. Bare signatures are better than nothing, though the comparative ease with which they can be imitated has robbed them of a great deal of the interest they would otherwise possess. The Athenæum of April 27th reported the sale of the library of the late Louisa, Lady Ashburton, which contained many presentation copies from Browning, Carlyle, Froude, Tennyson, and other lights in the modern world of literature. The copy of "The Princess" which Tennyson had given to Carlyle, realized as much as £46, the inscription "T. Carlyle from A. Tennyson" constituting the magic touch that glorified it. Books by Carlyle and others presented by him to Lady Ashburton were numerous, and one of the latter fetched £53. This was "A Discourse on the Death of Marshal Keith," as translated by Formey, and printed at Edinburgh in 1764. It was inscribed "The Lady Ashburton; T. C. (Chelsea, Jan. 7, 1861)," and had a number of manuscript notes and additions in the same hand.

On April 18th Messrs. Puttick & Simpson sold for £128 a series of the reports of the proceedings at the Anniversary Festivals of the General Theatrical Fund. There were not many pamphlets in the series, but one of them contained the report of the "Thirteenth Festival," held at the Freemasons' Tavern on March 29th, 1858, Thackeray being in the chair. Only two or three copies of this are known, and one of them, it may perhaps be remembered, was in the Thackeray Exhibition held in the old Charterhouse in June and July, 1911. It consists of 36 pages in yellow wrappers, with the title repeated on the front cover.

The library of "A Collector" (probably Mr. Edward Henry Hill, as nearly all the volumes contained his book-plate), dispersed by Messrs. Sotheby on May 9th, contained a large variety of books illustrated by Rowlandson, Alken, the Cruikshanks, "Phiz," H. and W. Heath, and John Leech, as well as a number of eighteenth-century French books closely identified with the names of Eisen, De Longueil, Marillier, and other equally celebrated artists of the period. Given the right illustrator and the right date, works of this class have even yet a great future, provided they are in good condition and have not been rebound and cut down, as is too often the case.

The portion of the library of the late Sir Joseph Dalton Hooker sold by Messrs. Sotheby on May 17th contained, as might be expected, a large selection of botanical works, many written by himself and by his father, Sir W. J. Hooker.

The library of the late Mr. Charles Letts, sold by Messrs. Hodgson on June 3rd and four following days, comprised an extensive series of modern books, including the "Edinburgh Edition" of Stevenson's Collected Works, with the Appendix and Graham Balfour's "Life," 1894-8, £56 (original buckram); the edition de luxe of George Meredith's Works, 32 volumes, 8vo, 1896-8, £17 (half buckram); the edition de luxe of Kipling's Works, with "Departmental Ditties," 27 volumes, 8vo, 1897-1900, £27 (art cloth); the "National Edition" of Dickens's Works, 40 volumes, 8vo, 1906-8, £27 10s. (folded, with the cloth cases for binding); and a lengthy series of books illustrated by Aubrey Beardsley, comprising 46 volumes, £58 5s. (as issued). This was a very good library of its kind, as was that of the late Mr. Charles J. Wertheimer, sold at Christie's on June 5th, though it was not nearly so extensive. The features of the latter sale were Bode and De Groot's "Complete Works of Rembrandt," edition de luxe (limited to 75 copies), 8 volumes, 1897-1906, folio, £105 (original wrappers); and Graves and Cronin's "Works of Sir Joshua Reynolds" (limited to 125 copies), 4 volumes, 1899-1901, 4to, £48 6s. (half morocco gilt; as issued). During the last ten or a dozen years modern "Books About Art" have fairly eclipsed "Books About Books," to the unqualified disgust of bibliographers in general, whether they belong to that thorough school which discourses of incunabula and variations of type and format or to that less responsible body which appeals to the people rather than to Cæsar. For once these two schools are in much the same position, and united by a common affliction, though there are signs of a change in this respect. Unless these signs are altogether misleading, there will soon be plenty of "Books about Books."

On June 5th Messrs. Sotheby began the eight days' sale of the second portion of the Huth library (C to D), the total sum realized for this small portion of the collection being £30,169, making with the part (A to B) sold in November, 1911, nearly £81,000. On this showing, it is hardly likely to come up to the monetary standard of the Hoe library, though it must be remembered that all the Shakespeariana were sold privately en bloc, and that a number of extremely important and valuable books were selected by the Trustees of the British Museum in accordance with the terms of the will of Mr. A. H. Huth. Students and collectors have long been familiar with the Huth library through the catalogue published in 1880, and Messrs. Sotheby used that catalogue as the basis of the one they prepared, revising and amplifying it throughout, in order to include in it, as far as possible, the latest results of bibliographical research. The result has been, so far, not so much a catalogue, in the sense in which that word is usually understood, as a very valuable work of reference, full of detail and accurate to a nicety, reflecting the greatest credit upon every one connected with its production.

Mr. Henry Huth, the founder of this library, was an exceedingly discriminating collector, and nearly every book he acquired had something about it, in point of date, condition, or variation from the normal, which renders explanation necessary before its individuality can be thoroughly appreciated. He collected at a time when books of the class he favored—early printed books of classic interest for the most part—were to be got with much greater ease than is now the case. Some of them, indeed, were accounted unique even then, and time has not in all cases added to the number. The catalogue, to which reference has already been made, is really a descriptive account of one of the greatest libraries of modern times, and the thorough manner in which this has been carried out will be apparent from the fact that the two parts embodying A to D have monopolized more than 250 closely printed pages of Book Prices Current, edited, so to speak, down to the smallest space warranted in the circumstances.

As generally happens towards the close of the season, great masses of books were sold at the various rooms during the latter half of June and July—in fact the season did not close until the early days of August. A portion of the library of Mr. E. N. Adler and other properties, sold by Messrs. Sotheby on June 20th and two following days contained several works with colored views, another class of book for which there is at present a great demand. These comprised the "Voyage dans l'Oberland Bernoise," an oblong folio work, without date, containing 46 colored views, in a case, £63; "Views of the Rhine and Frankfort," large oblong folio, comprising 21 colored views by A. Radl, £71; and "Feuilles Détachées et Maisons de la Suisse," no date, oblong folio, comprising 32 colored views, £38. In each of these instances the views were mounted, but whether mounted or not, their interest is undeniable.

On June 27th and 28th, one of those miscellaneous sales which are often productive of large amounts came on at Sotheby's. There were only 465 lots in the catalogue, and yet the total sum realized amounted to more than £9,500, some very rare and costly works by Bacon, Bunyan, Sir Thomas More, and more especially Milton, contributing greatly to that result. "The Maske of Comus," was mentioned in my former article as realizing £520. In addition, a copy of the first edition of "Lycidas," 1638, fetched £400 (morocco extra, a leaf mended); one of the first edition of "Areopagitica," 1644, £29 (calf); and "Poems," 1645, by no means an immaculate example, £71. Cocker's "Arithmetic," the first edition of 1678 in the original sheep, made £68, due to the fact that it was absolutely perfect, there being no more than half a dozen copies in that condition known to exist. The first edition of Burns's "Poems," Kilmarnock, 1786, sold for £490 (morocco, gilt edges), and Young's "The Complaint, or Night Thoughts," 1788, a presentation copy from Burns with inscription in his handwriting, £355. The inscription, which was of an unusual character, was as follows: "To Mrs. McIlhose this, Poem, the sentiments of the heir of immortality told in the numbers of 'Paradise,' is respectfully presented by Robt. Burns."

Private libraries of real interest, regard being had to the classes of books now in the greatest demand, are becoming scarcer with the passing of time. They do not exist in any number in this country at any rate, and still fewer are in course of formation, owing to the great expense that would be involved. Hence, "miscellaneous sales"—that is to say, sales of books brought together from many sources—have become of much greater importance than they once were. A library barely worth selling, in the opinion of those who have inherited it, may contain one or two books of exceptional interest and value, and these are detached and sent to join others of a similar character selected from other libraries until the tale is complete. This accounts for the growing attractions of the "miscellaneous sale" for the collector.

July witnessed the sales of the libraries of the late Lieut.-Col. H. S. Home Drummond of Blair Drummond, £2,500, and the late Mr. William Harcourt-Hooper, £1,050. The first four folio editions of Shakespeare from the library of Henry B. H. Beaufoy were bought in one lot by Mr. Quaritch for £3,500 (ibid.). The miscellaneous sale of the 24th and two following days realized £3,033, and another on the 31st, £2800, the latter being one of the best of the series, having regard to the class of books involved. The following by Swinburne are of very infrequent occurrence, and are therefore worth noting: "Laus Veneris," 1866, £11 15s. (in sheets); "Robert Burns, a Poem," 1896, £6 10s. (wrapper); "The Bride's Tragedy," 1889, £4 (in sheets); "The Ballad of Dead Men's Bay," 1889, £4 15s. (wrappers); and "The Ballad of Bulgarie," 1893, £5 5s. (wrapper).

The new season which will close with the last days of next July is not as yet very far advanced. It was opened well on October 3 by Messrs. Puttick & Simpson, who sold for £900 the three series of the "Suite d'Estampes pour servir à l'Histoire des Mœurs et du Costume des François," published respectively in 1774, 1777, and 1783, folio, with 36 engravings by Freudeberg and Moreau le Jeune, the latter being responsible for 24, which in this copy were proofs before letters, hardly ever met with in that state. As a rule, collectors have to be satisfied with the proofs bearing the titles and the letters "A.P.D.R." (Avec privilège du Roi), though even this latest indication was soon suppressed. It is necessary to mention this fine work, as very little notice seems to have been taken of it at the time when it was sold.

Reference may also be made to the selections of books from the library of Mr. S R. Crockett and from that of the late Mr. G. E. Cower; to the library of the late Dowager Lady Napier and Ettrick, which contained many memorials of the celebrated John Napier of Merchiston, the inventor of the logarithmic system; to the selection from the library of Mr. R. W. Blathwayt of Chippenham, and other properties, which brought nearly £6,500; to Andrew Lang's library, sold on Dec. 5 and 6; and to about a dozen other sales which have occurred quite recently, and will be fresh in remembrance.

The story told by the sales I have mentioned, whenever they occurred and to whatever degree of importance they may lay claim, is invariably to the same effect. Competition for books of a certain privileged character, or, to put it more bluntly, of a kind which every one wants and only a very few can possibly have, is growing more strenuous year by year. Whenever some enormous price is realized, it is at the time regarded as fixing a limit not likely to be exceeded for a considerable period. The highest amount paid for a book was, until recently, £7,100, obtained at Paris in April, 1900, for the 6 volumes of "Molière's Works" printed there in 1773, with the 33 original drawings by Moreau inserted. Would-be buyers had traveled from England, Germany, and America, and all but one had to return empty-handed. A copy of the "Mazarin" Bible fetched £10,000 at the Hoe sale, as we have seen, and so Molière and Moreau are outclassed. There is, however, no finality even in these prices. Their only value is to prove, if proof were needed, that money is of hardly any account in a war of prices, whether it has reference to a book or a picture, or anything else which each of a half a dozen or more exceedingly rich collectors feels that he must and will have, regardless of cost.

Such instances as these are quite exceptional. Taking one book with another, and even choosing the best—those which rise above their fellows for their textual worth and accuracy rather than for the glamour that surrounds them—we may say that books still remain among the cheapest of the collector's possessions. This is apparent after a year's survey of the booksales as they are recorded, not in the journals of the day, which single out exceptional prices, but in the fuller reports which are published from time to time for the benefit of those who take a comprehensive survey of the whole position.

THE A. L. A. SELECTION OF THE BOOKS OF 1912.

1912, AS THE "BOOK REVIEW DIGEST" REVIEWS IT.

THE eighth annual cumulation of the Book Review Digest comes to its completion with but little change in the policy that has prevailed in former annual numbers. Practically the only new feature added is that of estimating by the thousand words the cost of the volumes entered. About 2300 books have been noted during the year. The subject index introduced last year has been continued, and will be found combined with a title index at the end of the volume.

The completion of this annual number marks for us, says its editor, the ending of a year's work, and appearing, though it does, near the middle of December, its publication occasions that state of mind arising more commonly near midnight on the last day of the twelfth month—the state of mind in which one is invariably tempted to look, Janus-like, both forward and back, with an increasing tendency to prolong the backward look as time advances. What at such a period of retrospection is the condition of mind of the book reviewer? R. L. S., speaking of his profession, once said that he felt like thanking God that he could earn his bread upon such joyful terms. Such, I imagine, should be the attitude of the book reviewer, according to the view of the average citizen. "You must have such pleasant work. You read all the new books, don't you?" Yes, all of them, from fiction to philosophy! And what of it all remains at the end of the year as residue in our sievelike minds?

There have been years when the satisfaction of a general conclusion or two has been possible for us. "For this thing has the year been notable," we have been able to say. But 1912, whatever it may stand for, financially and politically, seems to offer no satisfying generalizations as to its literary output. Yet it has been a prosperous year; there have been good things, and many of them. Possibly a little generalizing as to the trend in fiction is possible. For it may be that we are developing a new type of novel, or, rather, popularizing a new form—the discursive novel of which Arnold Bennett is the supreme exponent, the novel of no definite plot, which arrives nowhere and leaves an unsettled feeling of incompleteness at the end; the novel which pictures life, but does not try to explain it. Looking back over the year, one finds that so many of the novels that stand out in mind are of this type. "Marriage," of course, is one of them; Mary Austin's "Woman of Genius" is another; so is Albert Edwards' "A Man's World." And way back near the beginning of the year there was an English novel, "Christopher," by Richard Pryce. And there are, too, the three novels of Ethel Sidgwick, recently published in America, and the translation of Hauptmann's "Atlantis," which we read just the other day. Is this the type of fiction that is to predominate during the coming year? We wait to see.

The popularity of the printed drama has continued through the year. The translations of Strindberg's dramas have been, perhaps, the most interesting contributions. Others have been the translations from the Russian—plays by Gorky and Tchekoff and unpublished works by Tolstoi, with a number of good plays by our own English and American dramatists. Especially good, too, have been the year's additions to biography and the volumes of published letters and reminiscences.

LONDON LETTER.

1912, FROM AN ENGLISH BOOKSELLING STANDPOINT.

Special Correspondence to the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY.

LONDON, Dec. 18, 1912.

ONE who is pretty intimately connected with the English book world naturally asks, at the end of a year, what that year has been in a literary way. What has it been in the sense of authorship, especially in the discovery of new authors, and what has it been in the output of books, especially books with a new human interest, or a new literary note?

1912 A HUMDRUM YEAR.

Well, the answer to those questions, with regard to 1912, is not difficult to give. It has just been an average year, alike in authorship and in publishing; not a year of new discoveries of writers, or of fresh "notes" struck in literature. It is hard to make new discoveries, either in authors or in books, for they only come now and then, and they have not come, in London, anyhow, during the past twelve months.

It has, indeed, been rather a humdrum literary year; good enough in the average quality of the books written, good enough in the number sold from month to month, except, indeed, at the end of the year, when the Balkan war rather upset things. Upon the whole, it has been a year which has neither given much reason for grumbling, nor any very particular reason for satisfaction; one of the marking-time years, which are more frequent in the lives of all things, including the book trade, than any other kind of year.

IS FICTION OF SENTIMENT COMING IN AGAIN?

Needless to say, the greatest outcrop in new literature has been fiction, for fiction, like the poor, is always with us in quantity. The new half-realist school—if it may so be called—represented by Bernard Shaw, H. G. Wells, Arnold Bennett, and writers of that sort, still holds the field, but it is doubtful if it holds it so strongly as it did only a brief year ago. A witty Frenchman once said that the British people take their pleasures sadly. He might have applied that more justly to their reading; but the younger people, who are becoming the bulk of readers, are not content to put up with sombre reading.

This explains why the good sentimental novel, when it comes out here, which is not often, is nearly always popular. We are an old people, and we rather pride ourselves.

Digitized by Google

very foolishly, on not being sentimental. That is a pity, because we miss a good deal, and especially in the past we have missed giving that encouragement which should be given to the right, healthy sentimental novel. Mrs. Florence Barclay's "Rosary," and her other books that have followed it, show the immense demand there is here, as there is with you, for the sentimental story of any sort. Perhaps some of our first-class novelists are now beginning to realize this, and we may look forward in the year which is coming to a better supply of novels of sentiment, meaning, always, the right sort of sentiment, not the sham, mawkish thing.

New English biography, which is usually the second largest department in popular literature, has produced in the twelve months many creditable enough volumes, but hardly one that has been distinguished. There are so many biographies nowadays that it is hard for one to be distinguished, because to secure that end, you need in the first place the ideal subject, and you need, in the second place, the ideal biographer. These came together, for instance, in Lord Morley's "Life of Gladstone," a book which turned over more money for the book trade than any other book has done in a hundred years.

We have this past year had no Morley's "Gladstone," nothing approaching it in interest or in sale, but still biography has been a very substantial thing, from the bookseller's point of view. So has history, so has travel; but, again, both those departments have thrown out nothing new worth mentioning. They have just gone on their creditable way —books written by somebody and sold to somebody else—and that has been all, if, indeed, we always except, in the case of travel, Captain Amundsen's book about the South Pole.

THE GROWTH OF THE CHEAP BOOK MARKET.

What has been most marked in the year's British book trade has been the ever-increasing demand for cheap books, chiefly reprints. This comes about naturally enough as the population rises in education and in its demand for knowledge; but in England the change is attended by inner conditions which, for the time-being, anyhow, are bearing rather hardly upon the book trade. It was the habit of old English families, holding lands and living on the income of those lands, to have good libraries. The owners of the libraries were not perhaps themselves great readers, but it was a tradition in their families that the library should be kept up, and so they bought expensive books pretty widely.

Then, however, there came the slump in land values, smaller incomes for people owning land, and the first thing they did was to cut down their outlay on books. That is the real explanation of the grumble one constantly hears from leading booksellers. Expensive books are not bought now as they once were. They certainly are not bought by the landed classes of England, who, until the "new rich" came in, represented the wealthy classes of England. They are being bought by some of those "new rich," and in a growing way by the public libraries, but even so, the gap left by the perhaps necessary literary frugality of the old English families has not yet been made up.

It will be made up, though never, perhaps, in the sense of the steady purchases which once went on of quite expensive books. Partly, they will be bought by those who can afford them and by the libraries; but the great up-making, so far as the book trade is concerned, will have to be by the sale of cheaper books, again meaning chiefly reprints.

ENGLISH BOOK TRADE NOT UP TO DATE.

This takes us to changes in the method of English bookselling which will eventually have to be faced, and which, indeed, are making themselves felt already. To be frank, the English book trade, certainly on the bookselling side, has not been kept up to date as it should have been. It was well equipped for the conditions of the old days, so well equipped that it has hesitated to part with them and traditions, with the result that today it scarcely meets the new conditions. Those conditions, however, will have to be met before the English book trade can ever again be properly efficient for the distribution, and, therefore, for the adequate sale, of new English books.

Things are coming all right, the note of progress and adaptation is in the air, but it will take a little time for it to arrive. Would you believe that in the whole of south London, which has a population of two millions of people, there is practically not a single first-class bookseller? A friend, who had to give a marriage present, decided to make it a book, and he occupied a recent Saturday forenoon's walk looking for a likely one in South London. He not only failed to get it, but he failed to find a shop where he could have any chance of getting it. If he had crossed the Thames, as another day he did, he would have found excellent shops in Paternoster Row, the Strand, in Piccadilly, in Oxford Street, and elsewhere; but here was that whole south London of two millions of people practically a desert, so far as a likely book for a marriage gift was concerned.

Now, this shows that something is wrong somewhere, and then, everything is not always right with the English book assistant. His master generally knows pretty well about the new books, reads reviews of them, knows what they contain, takes an interest in them, so that he may be able to recommend them to likely customers; but the assistant is too often untouched by this literary tradition, and is more concerned with football and cricket and a cinematograph show than with the knowledge of literature which would enable him to sell the new books on his master's shelves. Another story will illustrate that, and it concerns a book called "John Jonathan & Company," which is about America, as the title suggests.

Again, a friend wanted this book, and he went to quite a good London bookshop and asked for it. "No," said the assistant; "haven't got it; never heard of it. What you want is surely 'John Johns.'" Now, "John Johns" is a novel with a rather spicy reputaton, which has been selling to a certain class of people for years, and that was not the book this particular inquirer wanted. The point, however, is the want of knowledge on the part of the assistant bookseller of a newer book for which he there missed a sale.

What we shall see before long, probably, is the establishment by the wholesale side of the English book trade of retail shops. In fact, this has already been well begun, for the great firm of W. H. Smith & Son has quite a number of shops in London now and a greater number in the country. A group of retail shops also a year or two ago came under the control of that other big London wholesale book house—Simpkin, Marshall & Co.—and these are now run by that firm, of course as entirely separate establishments. This tendency will go on, and sometimes you hear an enterprising publisher saying to himself: "Why should not we publishers have retail shops, as some of the American publishers do?" They are not going to have them yet, because tradition in the English book trade is strong; but the time may come when they will have them, and then that will mean a very large change in British literary affairs.

IS THE ENGLISH BOOK TRADE NOW AS EFFICIENT AS THE AMERICAN?

Anyhow, what is urgently needed is this, that the new English book and the possible buyer of that new book should be brought more intimately together. Our individual bookshops, when you can find them, are perhaps quite as interesting as yours, and within their geographical radius quite as efficient; but our whole organization for distributing books is less coherent, less efficient for its eventual purpose than yours. It is often a difficulty for an Englishman to be able to get the book he wants, although he is offered a choice of half a dozen dinners, or half a dozen suits of clothes, by as many caterers and tailors. Clearly this cannot last, and there is every reason why it should not last, and when the book trade machine is brought up to date in its methods and efficiency, we shall have a far greater overturn of books in a retail way than we now have, and that will be a good thing for everybody. J. M.

THE "SIX BEST SELLERS" OF 1912.

THE "BOOKMAN'S" COMMENTS ON ITS ANNUAL SUMMARY OF ITS MONTHLY LISTS OF SIX BEST SELLERS.*

THE closing months of 1911 showed the leading books to be Harold Bell Wright's "The Winning of Barbara Worth," Robert W. Chambers' "The Common Law," Rex Beach's "The Ne'er Do Well," Margaret Deland's "The Iron Woman," and Gene Stratton-Porter's "The Harvester." But the books by Mr. Beach and Mr. Chambers were past the full flood of their popularity, for neither of them endured beyond the coming of the new year. As was the case in 1911, a woman's book had the distinction of being the leader in the list for the first month of 1912. That was Mrs. Deland's "The Iron Woman," which, with 200 points, was threatened only by "The Winning of Barbara Worth" and "The Harvester," which were, respectively, second and third, with 187 points and 171 points. Not one of the books in fourth, fifth and sixth places—Mrs. Barclay's "The Following of the Star," Mr. Harrison's "Queed," and Mr. Farnol's "The Money Moon"—reached 100 points. The loss of "The Iron Woman" in the February lists was not so perceptible as were the gains of "The Winning of Barbara Worth" and "The Harvester." Mr. Wright's book, with 307 points, a gain of 120 points over its total for January, was in first place, and "The Harvester" in second place, with 225 points. "The Iron Woman" was third, with 174 points, and grouped about the hundred-point mark were the same three books that had completed the list in the January number.

The first newcomer to break into the 1912 lists was Mr. Oppenheim's "Peter Ruff and The Double Four," which, in the March issue, temporarily displaced Mr. Farnol's "The Money Moon." "The Winning of Barbara Worth," "The Harvester," and "The Iron Woman" were again first, second and third in the order named, with 229 points, 219 points and 147 points, respectively. Clinging persistently to fourth place was Mr. Harrison's "Queed," with Mr. Oppenheim's book and Mrs. Barclay's book filling out the list. With the coming of the April number, "The Winning of Barbara Worth" had to relinquish first place to "The Harvester," which had been gaining steadily since the beginning of the year, and was by this time well in the lead by a margin of nearly 100 points. In third place was a newcomer, Mr. Sherman's "He Comes Up Smiling." "Queed" was fourth, its tenth consecutive appearance in the lists, a record surpassed only a few times in all the years that we have been compiling these tables. "The Iron Woman," rapidly dropping back, was fifth, and "The Money Moon," after a month's absence, reappeared in sixth place.

Although in May the point total of "The Harvester" was slightly less than it had been the preceding month, its hold of first place was even more secure than before, for it led its closest rival by a margin of 162 points. That rival was Meredith Nicholson's "A Hoosier Chronicle," which, if it made its appearance quietly, was destined to have a more or less permanent stay. Third and fourth were "The Winning of Barbara Worth" and "He Comes Up Smiling," with two new books—Emerson Hough's "John Rawn" and Anne Douglas Sedgwick's "Tante"—in fifth and sixth places. By June, "The Harvester" had dropped to fourth place. In the lead was a newcomer, J. Breckinridge Ellis' "Fran," with 210 points. "The Hoosier Chronicle" was second, with 178, and another book by Mrs. Barclay, "Through the Postern Gate," was third. Fifth was Kate Langley Bosher's "The Man in Lonely Land," and sixth Miss Sedgwick's "Tante." For the only time in the entire year, every book on the list had a total of 100 or more points.

The July list showed a rather unusual condition of affairs. "The Harvester," which had been first in May and fourth in June, again took the lead, although its point total was only 158, the smallest point total of any first-place book during the year. Twenty-four points behind was "Fran," which, in turn, led "A Hoosier Chronicle" by seven points. "The Street Called Straight," the new story by the anonymous author of "The Inner Shrine," was fourth, Maria Thompson Daviess' "The Melting of Molly" fifth, and Miss Bosher's "The Man in Lonely Land" sixth. By August it was apparent that the comparatively obscure position of "The Street Called Straight" in the July issue had been due to the fact that it had appeared a little too late to get a fair chance, for the August list showed it in the lead, with the high point total of 356 points. At a considerable distance behind, but still with the very respectable sum total of 198 points, was Vaughan Kester's "The Just and the Unjust." "The Melting of Molly" was third, with 147 points; "The Harvester" fourth, with 108 points; and "A Hoosier Chronicle" and Mr. Oppenheim's "The Lighted Way" fifth and sixth, with 96 and 85 points, respectively.

Great as has been the point total of "The Street Called Straight" in the August issue, in September it rose to 372 points, the high-water mark of the year. Two hundred and nineteen points behind was "The Harvester," which held second place over "The Melting of Molly" by the slender margin of two points. "The Just and the Unjust" was fourth, "A Hoosier Chronicle" fifth, and the second anonymous book of the year, "To M. L. G.," sixth. In September the point total of "The Street Called Straight" was materially reduced, but its hold on first place was still secure, 238 points to 145 points for "The Melting of Molly," the runner-up of that month. A new book, "The Red Lane," by Holman Day, was third, "The Harvester" fourth, "The Just and the Unjust" fifth, and "To M. L. G." sixth.

As is very often the case, the last two months of the year brought radical changes. In first and second places were two new books—Harold Bell Wright's "Their Yesterdays," with 329 points, and F. Hopkinson Smith's "The Arm-chair at the Inn," with 169 points. But Mr. Smith's book held second place over "The Street Called Straight" by a single point only. Fourth was a newcomer, Mary Roberts Rinehart's "Where There's a Will," with "The Harvester" and "The Melting of Molly" fifth and sixth. In referring to the lists for April, we said that they marked "Queed's" tenth consecutive appearance in the list. But by holding fifth place in November, "The Harvester" appeared in the lists for the thirteenth consecutive time. The December issue did not show a single book that had been a competitor two months before. "Their Yesterdays" was still in first place, but a dangerous second was George Barr McCutcheon's "The Hollow of Her Hand," with Rex Beach's "The Net" not far behind. Alice Hegan Rice's "A Romance of Billy-Goat Hill" was fourth, "The Arm-chair at the Inn" fifth, and Richard Dehan's "Between Two Thieves" sixth.

In the lists for 1912, twenty-seven books were represented, as against the same number for 1911, thirty-two for 1910, twenty-nine for 1909, thirty-six for 1908, thirty for 1907, thirty for 1906, twenty-nine for 1905, thirty-one for 1904, thirty-two for 1903, twenty-eight for 1902, twenty-nine for 1901, and twenty-nine for 1900. Two books, "The Street Called Straight" and "To M. L. G.," were published anonymously. No book was the result of collaboration. Eliminating the two books whose authors were anonymous, the remaining twenty-five books represented the work of fifteen men and ten women. Again eliminating "To M. L. G." and "The Street Called Straight," eighteen of the twenty-five books were written by American authors.

THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY'S CONSENSUS.

THE following lists show the best sellers of 1912, in order of popularity as evidenced by sales, in each of the three classes: Fiction, Non-fiction and Juveniles.

This consensus for the year is based on the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY monthly consensuses for eleven months only, January-November, complete statistics for December, 1912, not yet having been received. The sales for this month are so important as considerably to modify individual ratings, and a revised table will be published later.

WHAT MAKES A BOOK SELL.

ROBERT STERLING YARD, IN THE DECEMBER "BOOKMAN."

"NEVERTHELESS, there is no doubt that Blank & Company can sell more copies of a book than any other house in America."

The publisher did not dispute this, though

Digitized by Google

he did not believe it. In the first place, in spite of her great faith in the selling ability of this other house, he had secured on other grounds this celebrated lady's next book, with the prospect of more to follow, and he did not have to argue; in the second place, decent publishers do not compete by running down each other's abilities.

"There's not so much in this selling business as you think," he said, diplomatically, as he patted affectionately the signed contract between them on the table. "You do not do justice to your own vogue."

This was a red-letter day. While they were still talking, another, a recent celebrity, called him on the telephone and asked for an appointment. When they met the author said:

"Yes, I'm leaving Dash & Company. Of course, they have done very well with my novel, but I am satisfied that they should have done better. I want to come over to you."

"Why do you think they should have done better?" asked the publisher. "I thought your last sold finely for a second novel. We have all been congratulating Dash. It is generally thought among publishers that he handled your book very well."

"I don't see how you can say that, when he didn't advertise more," said the author. "I simply pleaded with the man, but it was no use. The newspapers were full of book advertising, but mighty little of my book. I am sure that if he had advertised properly he could have put it to a hundred thousand. Now, you really advertise. I see your big black-faced, three-column announcements everywhere. So I'm leaving him and coming to you. In spite of common belief to the contrary, an author can also be a man of business, and I'm a man of business."

The publisher shrugged his shoulders as he instructed his secretary about the terms of the contract. His duty was fully done. He had sufficiently defended Dash & Company, and his defence had not driven the novelist back to their office. His conscience was clear. It only remained to accept what the gods gave him. It was with a cheerful smile that he blotted the author's signature.

Yet this publisher was far from being a larger advertiser than Dash & Company; in fact, he was a smaller one. But he was a shrewder man. He used few of the magazines and obscure advertising mediums so effective for solid books, in which Dash's advertisements appeared the year around; and he did not believe in circularizing. He depended largely upon his books to "sell themselves." But he perceived that several thousand dollars a year, cunningly displayed in certain newspapers, would create a public impression of his advertising prowess that would be invaluable in reputation, even if not in direct sales. Year after year his reputation grew. But he never told his advertising appropriation. It would not be believed. The result more than justified the expense. Novelists flocked to him. His name was waved like a club by many dissatisfied authors over the heads of their own publishers.

And he kept his novelists, too—at least as well as most other publishers. He had his share of "best sellers," and as some of the best selling of his best sellers were among those he advertised least, he became, year by year, more and more justified in his policy. He was a canny man and a good publisher. He made money even in the worst of years. But often it worked too well. The novel that didn't sell, that wouldn't sell, came along in its turn, and the author who had sought the house for its advertising came down hard upon the publisher who had accepted him, knowing the reason for his coming.

"It's up to you," the author would say, grimly.

"No," the publisher would reply; "it's up to the book."

"But you said"——

"I said nothing," the publisher would interrupt; "it was you that said it. No amount of advertising will sell a book that isn't what the public wants just at that moment"——

"But it is because Dash & Company talked that way that I left them and came to you."

"All publishers talk that way about books that will not sell. They talk that way because their experience with books that will not sell is identical and leads inevitably to the same conclusion."

And so on.

But every author must learn the truth, as publishers learn it—namely, by bitter experience. Not the least of every publisher's burdens is the disappointment of his authors over the inevitability of the law of supply and demand. It is a lesson which he himself learned early in his business life, and has learned over again every day since. With him, therefore, the failure of any book to sell is no surprise, almost no disappointment. The proportion of unprofitable and small and moderate sellers to larger sellers is so great in the season by season practice of the years that the advent of a "real winner" is generally a delightful surprise.

The study of failures and successes, with the purpose of deducing the laws underlying the sales problem, is the publisher's everlasting occupation. This is a problem that never has been solved. It never will be solved. It cannot be solved. It is a problem that changes like the April sky. Conditions are never the same. The taste of the buying public changes, and there are a thousand publics. When your author says (as every author says at least once), "My book is twice as good as Jones', but his sold and mine didn't; he must have a better publisher," he assumes one public. He also assumes that Jones' publisher had something to do with the book selling well. In the latter assumption there is a small percentage of fact.

Authors who accept sales as publishers accept them, namely, as so many phenomena naturally resultant from a complicated, incalculable and always different combination of human and commercial causes, and make such study as is possible of the elements, with the purpose of producing, as far as possible, the same or more fortunate combinations with succeeding books are usually the authors who succeed eventually in making book writing a profitable business.

But it may be said, in passing, that the authors who do this, who are capable of doing it, are raræ aves, compared with the other kind. That combination of imagination, insight, originality, power of expression, combativeness, vanity and thin skin which is commonly miscalled the "artistic temperament" usually refuses to stand for more than one or two failures. It then heaps the blame on the shoulders of the nearest publisher, and dabbles with some "easier" art. But at that there are a plenty left of the true temperament to bend the enlightened eye, the chastened mind and the hand rendered skilful with effort more laboriously, more painstakingly, to the arduous advancement of true art.

Meantime, the publisher continues perplexedly to scratch his head alike over the inexplicable failure and the surprising success, questions his salesmen about the latest freaks and usages and tendencies of the country's markets, consults with booksellers whose judgment he trusts, glances over the newest book covers and the last eccentric advertisements, and reads in the Elevated on the way home the novel from another shop which he heard that morning was in its fourth printing. His is the perpetual job of keeping up to date on the market for everything sold between covers.

These are days when every business process is submitted to the merciless probe of the analyst. There is no excuse for any man any longer. The Psychology of Salesmanship, like the Psychology of Everything Else, is obtainable at a dollar net under half a dozen titles, and Advertising claims to have become Mathematical Science. The modern university professor has made it all so simple that all men in the next generation cannot help being rich and successful.

The publisher, however, has his troubles, notwithstanding. Unfortunately, books refuse to come under the given rules. A book seldom sells well after the first season, and its first costs tend to kill its first year's profits; consequently, it sets at naught about every one of the rules, both for selling and advertising. The psychologist of sales, who attempts to "modernize" the publisher, is as tiresome and futile as is the advertising "expert," who calls the publisher "conservative" and "old-fashioned" because he refuses to believe that a newspaper or a string of newspapers of vast circulation, at a dollar or more an agate line, won't produce the same sales with a psychological novel as with Cream of Sesame or Bleachem's Pills—that is, "if you take big enough copy."

Far from being "conservative" and "old-fashioned," however, every publisher wishes so heartily that what the psychologists and experts say were true about easy sales that already he has disregarded the experience of many generations of publishers and sowed his own wild oats—with the customary result. Yes, and too often he continues to experiment, in the vain hope that times or human nature may have changed.

Yet, though he cannot, without disaster, do the "stunts" of men of some other trades, there are still many things he may do to sell his books, to fit his authors to their market and to surround and saturate his business with the atmosphere of success. Difficult though his business is, it may be conducted soundly and brilliantly. The problem of selling involves importantly every department and every function of a successful house. It does not lie in manuscript selection, nor in salesmanship, nor in advertising, but it lies in all of these things and more. Though it is an axiom that few books are bought because of their imprint, nevertheless a house's sales involve mysteriously, but importantly, the very tissue and repute of the house. It is not for nothing that good will figures so extensively in the valuations of publishing business. It has many times more reality in publishing than in most other businesses. Next to its list, this mysterious quality is by far the publisher's most precious possession.

What, then, is it that makes a book sell?

One distinguished publisher, whose exploits in the difficult art of combining selling and literary qualities are altogether notable, replies:

"That question is a tough one. My own growing belief is that the answer should be the publisher's will and the success vibrations that he emanates, extending from his travelers and advertising men to the trade and the public. Woe betide the publisher, however, who tries too often to give success vibrations for books that haven't quite the 'potency of life' in them; and, as our friend Henry James says, 'There you are.'"

This is a statement as shrewd as it is breezy. It contains, in fact, all the law and the prophets. It is not, however, the recipe for success in publishing only; it applies with approximate force to all businesses dependent upon an appeal to the public taste. It is also, for instance, most of the story of producing plays and selling calico. The human aspects and conditions are at least the same. The difference from other businesses lies chiefly in the more complicated problem involved in publishing, the more delicate determinations of what the public wants and what it doesn't want, the more difficult medium for influencing large bodies of possible purchasers and the comparative smallness of the possible market, with its consequently greater proportional penalty for not guessing right.

A publisher seldom stops to figure out the reasons for his success, any more than the average successful man in any other business. He is lucky. Or he's "got things running." Any phrase will do if called upon for an explanation. The fact is that he lives and works in such sympathy with his tools and his market that he identifies himself so completely with his work, that day by day, season by season, year by year, he so radiates the spirit of the institution he is upbuilding that presently he, or the business (for the two things merge into one in the years) acquires a power and a personality of astonishing magnitude, and, within its lines of influence, quite irresistible. His clerk and his stenographer feel this mysterious spirit in the very air. His advertising man becomes saturated with it and translates it into palpitating appeal. His salesman absorbs it and exudes it to the increase of his sales and the making of his own reputation. This is the spirit that wins battles. In business it is called by many names. It is what is generally meant when a staff is said to have esprit de corps. "Success waves" express the idea as well as any. This common, but mysterious, personal quality, is the greatest element in selling books.

Once a novel sold close to the half million mark, which was, from every point of view, quite an ordinary production. It had no literary or narrative or sentimental distinction whatever. It contained no element of novelty, either in the story itself or in its characterization. It was a fairly well-written, interesting novel, but little else. It had no advantage over fifty or more other novels, just as interesting or more so, published the same season, which did not sell more than five to twenty thousand each—except that the author's former novels, all equally without unusual distinction also had large sales.

The doctors have sat on this case, and various have been the explanations. Advertising cranks grew red in the face proclaiming it the triumph of clever advertising, for the book had been very thoroughly and skilfully exploited. Anti-advertising orators struggled fearfully to discover some occult popular quality in the book itself which could explain the sale in spite of the advertising. Still others proclaimed it largely a triumph of salesmanship. The fact is that all three were partially right.

The greatest of all causes, however, the cause of causes, lies somewhere in the personality of the publisher. The sales triumph of this author was a triumph of faith—his publisher's faith. In the trade this publisher was admiringly called "the crazy man"—because he was so "crazy" about his author. It was his only author. He believed him to be—really, honestly believed him to be—in many respects the greatest living novelist. He devoted himself to making this author's work known and read as no other living novelist's work was known and read. His intense convictions got somehow into his advertising and made the reader believe, even against his will. His fervor passed to his salesmen, and they talked as men inspired. The "big trade," which he sold in person, were willingly carried along by his enthusiasm and determination, for they saw in these qualities the promise of success; therefore, they helped him along by good orders and personal work. Of course, he was also a sound business man, though his enthusiasm was responsible for the great daring of his start.

This is the whole story of this novel's and this author's great sales. It is an extraordinary story—to be hitched up with success. But most of all, it is an extraordinary example of this wonderful personal quality in leadership that is as much an element in successful selling as it is in successful war and politics.

So much for this particular case, which, however valuable as an example of a great principle, is in other respects altogether exceptionable. For it is evident that every author cannot have his individual publisher, and that very few authors have the universality to justify and to make profitable such distinguished devotion. In the nature of things, there must be few publishers and many authors. In the nature of things, a publisher cannot be as "crazy" about each of five hundred authors as he can about one—especially if a big seller.

The conditions of book advertising are highly specialized. A volume might explain. Sufficient here to say that one principal fundamental difference is that the publisher has as many businesses to advertise as he has books. On the other hand, a corset maker, let us say, may have as many styles as a publisher has books, but in an advertising sense, as in every other sense, he has, unlike the publisher, only the one business.

For example, Mrs. Ess is impressed by the advertising of the X, Y and Z corset and asks for it at the department store where she deals. "I liked the picture of Number 23," she says. The saleswoman shows her many styles, out of which, at length, she chooses one. It is not Number 23, but it is, you observe, the X, Y and Z corset she has asked for and purchased. Then she goes to the book counter.

"Have you got 'Adventures in a Harem?' she asks. "I saw the advertisement, and liked what they said about it."

"H—m," says the saleswoman, "I don't know the title. Must be a brand-new book."

"Yes," says Mrs. Ess; "it said, 'Published this day' at the top of the advertisement."

"I suppose we just have it in," says the saleswoman; "it will be—oh, who is the publisher?"

"The publisher?" asked Mrs. Ess. "What do you mean? I thought you'd have the book. You have everything as soon as it is out. Do you mean the printer? Why, I don't know. How could I know?"

"No; the publisher," says the saleswoman, running over the lists of books not yet on the counters. "You know, the firm that published it. Their name must have been on the advertisement."

"Oh, yes," says Mrs. Ess; "there was a name, I think, but the title is 'Adventures in a Harem.' The author's name was—let me see—I think it was Green—somebody Green."

"Here it is," says the saleswoman; "up this very minute."

Mrs. Ess carefully examines the cover of the book. "I don't care much for that," she says; "I don't like the girl's face. She looks silly. I hate silly heroines."

Then she glances at one or two of the illustrations, and runs carelessly through the leaves.

"It is awfully short," she says. "If a story is good, I like it long. If it isn't good, I don't want it at all. Is there anything else here I haven't read? What would you recommend?"

Digitized by Google

The saleswoman painstakingly describes four or five recent novels, but Mrs. Ess does not fancy them on examination, and she finally picks out one that mysteriously appeals to her mood. Its publisher? I don't know, and neither did she.

You see, the advertising results are radically different. The corset maker has made a customer for his brand, irrespective of any particular style, a customer who will probably come again and again until some new advertisement catches her fancy. But the publisher has accomplished little. He has not sold the lady a book. He has not even impressed his name upon the memory of a possible future purchaser. He has persuaded her to pick up that particular book from the thousands offered and give it a few moments' examination. And that is all. Even if she had purchased the book, she might not have liked it, and if she had not she would industriously have informed her friends that it was poor or silly, and advised them not to get it. If she had liked it, she would lend her copy to several of her friends. But, on returning to the shop for other books, neither she nor her friends would ask to see Dash & Company's new novels. She would ask again for a title, or, having none in mind, would look over the counter for something that "looked interesting."

The book advertiser's problem, therefore, is one requiring a quality of care and judgment not demanded of the corset advertiser, for if he has fifty books on his list, he has fifty special problems to the corset man's one. And as one injudicious plunge may practically ruin the profits of any of these books for a season or two, his responsibility is times greater than that of the other, whose problem is chiefly to cover, as cheaply and effectively as possible, all parts of the country inhabited by women who can afford to buy his corset; and so long as there continues a satisfactory relation of profit to expenditure, he need not worry a great deal about occasional errors in placing his advertisements.

All attempts to chart this shifting unknown sea have failed. Some have tried to play the game after a "system," as the gambler attempts to reduce the chances of faro or roulette. One house deliberately settled down to solve this one problem, and for some years published only a given number of novels a season, each chosen specially for the purpose of catching this greater public. Each novel was started off with a thousand dollars' worth of advertising and received additional appropriations of a size exactly proportional to the amount of returns. Automatically, so to speak, one novel would swell in sales and advertising, while another, under the same formula, would dwindle and disappear. This seemed to work all right for several boom seasons, but, unfortunately, trade conditions would persist in changing. This would be shown by disturbances in the returns, and our pioneers would experiment with a new formula, which, in turn, would develop its period of prosperity and decline. Then, to see, every now and then, some comparatively unadvertised novel from another house rush into an astonishing success, could not fail to be upsetting to our pioneers, who were never sure that some of their own successes, which had cost ten or twenty thousand dollars to advertise, would not have sold equally well at perhaps fifteen hundred each.

As to such selling devices as picture covers, illustrations and decorations generally, they are part of the campaign to catch that casual public of which we have spoken. Many publishers who will not take the long chances of advertising for Mrs. Ess's patronage, will design a cover to catch her wandering fancy at the book counter or load down his volume with frightfully expensive colored illustrations The argument in favor of this is that if your book does not "catch on," you are in for only the original cover and picture costs, which, heavy though they may be, will be only a fraction of any half decent advertising campaign. The weakness of it is that if your book does sell, you are saddled with colored illustrations to the bitter end, whereas you might stop your advertising when the run is really on and take real profits for, say, a hundred thousand copies.

The pressure on the publisher from his salesmen and, through them, from the trade, is always strongly for bright colored covers and illustrations, and the fair success of many novels is attributed to the external beauty which attracted Mrs. Ess and her friends at the book counter. At the same time an infinitely larger number of novels, equipped with outward beauty or gaudiness, have failed utterly; and perhaps most of the conspicuous successes of each year have appeared between plain covers and without illustrations. It is anybody's race. You may pick your own horse!

So, finally, we come down to the book itself! Ah! Now we have torn aside the curtain and entered the sanctuary. We are not the first, by any means. Here is one celebrated publisher, at least, who has dwelt comfortably and happily and most profitably here for these many years, scorning the gibes of those who rushed after the noisy advertising parade, some years ago, and who have since been dropping back, one by one, all looking just a little foolish, possibly, as they peered in at him through the lifted flap. Yes, this is the answer to our connundrum, if that answer must be expressed in one word.

It is the Book Itself that Sells Itself, because it is the book that a thousand or ten thousand or a hundred thousand buyers want to buy at the time it is published. No publisher can sell a book that does not come under this definition, any more than a corset maker can sell a corset, no matter how handsome, that is not cut to the figure admired at the moment. Many different corsets cut to the fashionable lines will sell side by side in competition for tastes in frills differ. But no corset cut to the lines of a decade ago will sell now, no matter how it sold then, and your novelist who produces to-day an imitation of some novel famous several years back (and most novels amount to that), must not blame his publisher if it does not sell.

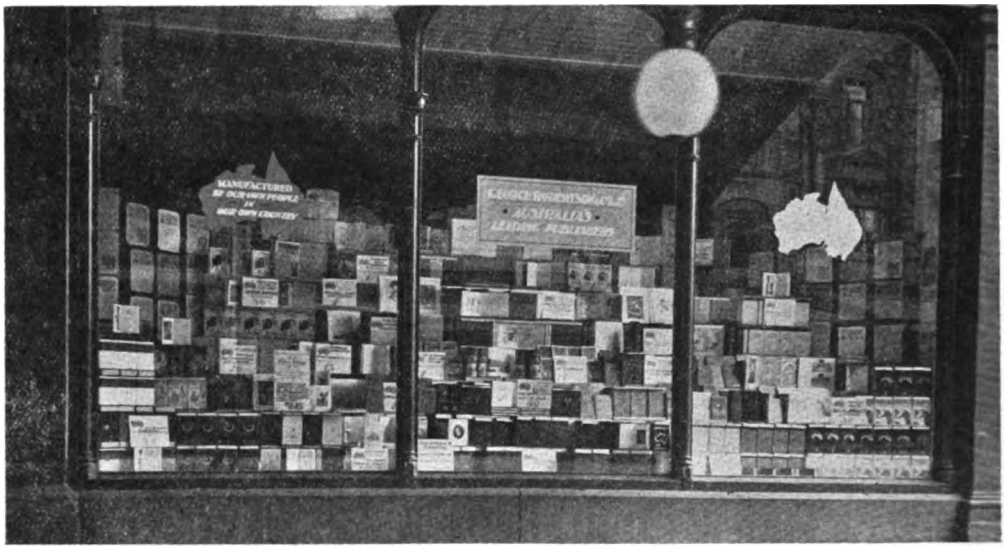
Of course, our corset simile will not carry long, for, after all, we are dealing with art when we deal with fiction, no matter how crude its expression and how commercial its object. Most novels, of course, are frankly commercial in object on the part of both writer and publisher. But occasionally a publisher is fortunate enough to produce a novel which is also literature — and the exception smashes our generalizations.



Such novels are destined to success, greater or less according to their natural publics, entirely without reference to the handling of their publishers. Now that is not to say that they would be unaffected by such handling, for clever publishing may bring fame and sales to a Real Novel whole seasons, or even years, before it could have won them for itself. But my point is that if it be really a Real Novel, eventually it will win them anyway, even in spite of bad publishing, for that is the way of a book. We all know of instances (they occur nearly every season) of Real Novels themselves setting the pace and keeping their publishers puffing and perspiring to stay even in the tail of the procession.

In closing, let us sum up, as the parson does at the end of his discourse. The principal element in the sale of a book is the book itself. A long way after comes the second element—the spirit and enthusiasm and genius of the publisher, as expressed through every wheel of his complicated human machine. Still a longer way after comes the third element, scientific thought—not necessarily voluminous advertising.

And then comes the rest.

A LEADING AUSTRALIAN BOOK FIRM.

George Robertson & Co., Prop., Ltd., Melbourne, Australia, the photographs of one of whose windows is reproduced above, are probably the largest wholesale booksellers in Australasia, with principal offices in Melbourne and branch offices in the other leading cities of Australia. They hold the Australian agency for many of the leading American publishers, including Charles Scribner, D. Appleton & Co., Doubleday, Page & Co., Bobbs-Merrill Co., Fleming H. Revell, McGraw-Hill Book Co., and some twenty-five or thirty others, and have been able to dispose of about $100,000 worth of American books during 1912. This $100,000 is at the special price given by publishers on Australian business, which is 40 cents to 44 cents on a regular $1.25 and $1.50 book here. This special price is necessary, because of the fact that the regular retail book price in Australia is 3s. 6d. per copy. Robertson & Co. also handle a great many English publications, having a London office, with a large staff, in that place to take care of their English shipments.

SHOW WINDOW—GEORGE ROBERTSON & CO., PROP., LTD., MELBOURNE, AUSTRALIA.

In Melbourne they have a five-story building in the principal street, the photographs showing one of its show-windows. In another part of the city they have another building given over to their publication work, in which line they do a large business. They also have a building in Sydney on the principal street.

AMERICAN ACADEMY APPROVED BY SENATE.

Senator Lodge, of Massachusetts, secured the passage in the Senate on the 18th of two bills. One of these bills authorizes the incorporation of the National Institute of Arts and Letters and the other incorporates the American Academy of Arts and Letters.

The avowed purpose of the Institute corporation is "the furtherance of the interests of literature and fine arts."

The membership is limited to 250 regular members and honorary associates. The corporation is authorized to receive devises, bequests and donations of real or personal property and to invest and reinvest the same in the interests of the organization.

The Academy of Arts and Letters is limited to fifty members and has the same objects as are authorized by the Institute of Arts and Letters.

TAYLOR LIBRARY SOLD.

THE John Howard Taylor library sale of January 16 and 17, at Anderson's, produced some sharp bidding, resulting in high prices.

The best price, Thursday, was $875, paid for "The Tenth Muse, Lately Sprung up in America, or Several Poems, compiled with great variety of VVit and Learning, By a Gentlewoman of those parts." The gentlewoman was Anne Bradstreet. Her book was printed in London at the sign of the Bible in Pope's Head Alley, 1650.

The next highest price was $750, for the Jerrold "Life of Cruikshank," a first edition in two volumes. With it went a lot of extra Cruikshank material, such as several hundred copper plates, 384 colored plates, fifty-seven caricatures, 207 wood engravings, many autographs, play bills, etc. G. Weiss bought the sixty volumes of Charles Dickens, with the illustrations by Cruikshank. Leech, etc., for $605. This was the 1881-1882 edition.

The "Bradford" that brought the highest figure was the "Laws of Her Majesties Colony of New York," being the second revision of the New York laws as printed by William Bradford. It sold to Dodd & Livingston for $610.

Four original letters, addressed by Thomas Carlyle to his mother, with a binding by Riviere, sold to G. D. Smith for $212.

The remarkable series of autograph letters by John Fiske, the American historian, sold to G. D. Smith for $339. They had been addressed to Shepherd D. Gilbert, Fiske's most intimate college friend.

The high price, Friday, was paid for an uncut copy of the rare, suppressed first edition of Percy Bysshe Shelley's "Laon and Cythna," London, 1818, afterward published as "The Revolt of Islam," with the objectionable passages omitted. This was bought on order for $910.

For the extremely rare discourse of Daniel Price, "Saul's Prohibition Staide," London, 1609, Mr. Hill gave $585. It relates to the colony of Jamestown, Va.

G. Weiss paid $240 for the complete Smith, Elder & Co. de luxe edition of William M. Thackeray, with the author's illustrations.

The total for the entire sale was $25,678.

NEW BOOK SALESROOM FOR ANDERSON'S.

THE Anderson Company, the well-known New York City book auction house, last week opened a new salesroom for their rare book and autograph department.

The new room is well-fitted and well-lighted, on the ground floor, eminently suitable for its purpose. Much attention has been paid to comfort of the buyer and the proper disposition of the material to be sold; the room is finished in quartered oak, the shelves lined with baize to prevent the rubbing of bindings, a much-needed innovation in the auction room, and certain cases are fitted with locked glass doors to preserve rarer and more valuable books from promiscuous handling.

OBITUARY NOTES.

SOLOMON W. JOHNSON.

SOLOMON W. JOHNSON, president of the American News Company, died at his home, 28 East 55th Street, New York City, last Sunday morning at 8 o'clock. Mr. Johnson, who was in his eighty-fourth year, was seized with a severe chill the week before, from which he never entirely rallied.

Solomon Whittlesey Johnson was born on a farm in the Catskill Mountains, educated in the country schools, and came to New York City to look for a job before he was twenty. He first obtained work in the office of the French Courier, where he was put to work addressing wrappers. Then he drifted into the business of distributing newspapers, and for two or three years he worked for the New York Herald as a carrier. He next turned his hand to the business of selling newspapers at wholesale, and in 1854 he entered into a partnership with John Hamilton, forming the firm of Hamilton & Johnson, which did a wholesale business in buying and distributing daily newspapers. This firm had its offices at 22 Ann Street, and later branched out as distributing agents for all kinds of periodicals.

Some years later, the business of Hamilton, Johnson & Farrelly, as it then was, was combined with that of Dexter & Bro., forming the firm of Dexter, Hamilton & Co., and in 1864 the American News Company was formed by combining the business of this firm with that of Sinclair Tousey, at that time the leading wholesale dealer in newspapers and magazines. The seven founders of the American News Company, of whom Mr. Johnson was the last survivor, were Sinclair Tousey, Henry Dexter, George Dexter, John Hamilton, Patrick Farrelly, John E. Tousey and Solomon W. Johnson.

From its beginning, Mr. Johnson was treasurer of the American News Company, and when, several years ago, Mr. Dexter, the president, died, at the age of 97, Mr. Johnson became president and treasurer of the company.

Mr. Johnson is survived by three children—Edward H. Johnson, manager of the Central News Company, of Philadelphia; Mrs. James M. Fuller, and Mrs. J. Wilson Hart, of Glen Ridge—all children of his first wife, Adelaide Heine. The present Mrs. Johnson was Miss Minnie Arkell.

MRS. JULIA CAROLINE RIPLEY DORR, the Vermont poetess and novelist, died at her home in Rutland, Vt., on January 18. In her early days she was associated with the famous "Cambridge group" of poets and writers. Ralph Waldo Emerson and Mrs. Dorr carried on a correspondence for years. She exchanged letters with Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes for more than twenty years, and Longfellow, Lowell, Julia Ward Howe and many others who composed the most famous company of American writers visited Mrs. Dorr frequently.

She was born in Charleston, S. C., on February 13, 1825. Her mother died, and she was taken by her father to Vermont in 1830. In 1847 she married Seneca R. Dorr. It was not until 1848 that she published her first story at her husband's request. Since then she published fifteen or sixteen volumes, among them "Farmingdale," "Lanmere," "Sibyl Huntington," "Expiation," "Bride and Bridegroom," "Friar Anselmo" (1879), "Bermuda" (1884), "Afternoon Songs" (1885), "Poems Complete" (1892), "The Flower of England's Face" (1895) "A Cathedral Pilgrimage" (1896) "In Kings' Houses," "A Romance of the Days of Queen Anne" (1898), "Afterglow" (1900), and "Beyond the Sunset" (1909).

BRAZIL ACCEDES TO BERNE CONVENTION.

THE Brazilian federal government, under date of December 31, 1912, voted in favor of adhering to the Berne-Berlin convention, being the first South American country to enter the union. The passing of this measure is due to the efforts of Senator Alcindo Guanabar.

TRADE ASSOCIATIONS.

BOOKSELLERS' LEAGUE.

THE Booksellers' League School for Salesmen will have a session next Tuesday, January 28, at 1 P.M., at the Liberal Club, 132 East 19th Street. The speaker will be Daniel Nye, head of the sales department of Doubleday, Page & Company. His subject will be "The Bookseller's Vocation," from the point of view of the publisher's representative. This is one aspect that has not yet been treated before this class; it supplements the work of those who have addressed it previously.

The following new members, the largest number ever received at one time, were received into the League at the January meeting:

Arnold, W. H.	Syndicate Trading Co.
Brown, C. J.	Geo. H. Doran Co.
Burghardt, W.	Brentano's.

POSTAL MATTERS.

POSTAGE ON PARCELS FOR FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

THE local post office calls attention to the fact that ordinary postage stamps must be used in payment of postage on parcels and other matter addressed to foreign countries, including Canada, Cuba, Mexico and the Republic of Panama. Parcel post stamps must not be affixed to mail matter of any kind whatever addressed to any foreign country.

PERIODICAL NOTES.

THE Homiletic Review, published by Funk & Wagnalls Co., has been greatly broadened in scope. Six pages in the January number are devoted to book reviews.

The Fashionable Woman is a new monthly 25-cent fashion magazine which appeared this month. It is folio, and generously illustrated with attractive cover for display purpose. It is returnable.

De Witte Mier (the White Art), a new monthly to be published in Holland, will be devoted to matters relating to books, with especial attention to binding and typography. The editor is C. M. B. Dixon, Apeldoorn, Holland. (Subscription, gulden, 1.50.)

FREDERICK C. MATHEWS has plans for the permanent establishment of a national weekly newspaper organ of the Progressive party, to be a continuation of the Weekly Bulletin published in Detroit during the campaign. The new weekly is to be illustrated by such artists as Henry Hutt, Lyendecker and McCutcheon, and among the contributors will be Richard Harding Davis, George Fitch, Winston Churchill, recently Progressive party candidate for Governor in Vermont; George Ade and Herbert Kauffman, all enthusiastic Rooseveltians.

THE February Century contains the opinions of several college presidents and deans on the subject of "Fraternities in Women's Colleges." James M. Taylor, of Vassar; Marion Talbot, of the University of Chicago; Virginia Gildersleeve, of Barnard; Ellen F. Pendleton, of Wellesley; Mary E. Woolley, of Mount Holyoke; and M. Carey Thomas, of Bryn Mawr, are among those who will explain the merits or evils of girls' fraternities. These opinions are supplementary to two recent articles by Edith Rickert, published in the Century, setting forth the results of her investigation into the effect of fraternities on college women.

THE first number of Art in America, the new illustrated quarterly edited by Dr. Wilhelm R. Valentiner, of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, made its appearance this week. The publisher is Frederic Fairchild Sherman. There are sixty-two pages, printed on very fine paper and profusely illustrated in black-and-white. Among the contributors are Dr. Wilhelm Rode, with an article on "The Earliest Dated Painting by Rembrandt of the Year 1626"; Joseph Breck, "Paintings and Drawings by Tiepolo in the Metropolitan Museum"; Bernhard Berenson, with an article on Tiepolo; Frank Jewett Mather, "A Madonna by Carlo Crivelli"; and Allan Marquand, "A Terra Cotta Bust of François." Art in America publishes as its advisory committee: Joseph Breck, George H. Chase, Kenyon Cox, August F. Jaccacci, Albert M. Lythgoe, Allan Marquand, Frank J. Mather, Jr.; William A. Paton and Chandler R. Post.

THE English Bookseller plans hereafter to run each month a Special Export Number. It will contain, in addition to the lists of publications and items of information for the current week, the complete list of books published during the previous month, together with special information likely to be of interest to the foreign and Colonial trade. Every attention will be paid to books dealing with Colonial subjects. The Bookseller, in announcing the new departure, adds: "It is well known that American publishers and booksellers are making great efforts to secure as complete a command as possible of the book trade in the Colonial and foreign markets, and particularly in South Africa, Australasia, and the Far East. It is therefore clearly to the interest of the English publishers and wholesale booksellers that they should not allow themselves to be superseded in a market which promises an almost indefinite expansion in the near future."

THE HOUSEWIVES' LEAGUE, "a national movement for the federation of housewives," is starting its own magazine, the first number of which has just appeared. The magazine will be essentially constructive in its policy. It will warn against adulterated foodstuffs and textiles and uphold the manufacturer and producer whose integrity is established and will always bend its efforts toward bringing consumer and producer together for their mutual benefit and to reduce the cost of living. In a word, the League's policy will be the Magazine's policy. This includes, for example: the establishment of public markets and co-operative stores; the encouragement of the parcels post; the dissemination of inside information and advice to the individual housewife and to local clubs and organizations; and campaigns in different States for needed legislation. Mrs. Julian Heath, founder and National President of the Housewives' League, will be supervising editor of the Housewives' League Magazine, and will contribute to it regularly. The subscription price is $1.00 a year; publication department at 31 East 27th Street, New York City.

PERSONAL NOTES.

WILLIAM J. SCHWARZ, for many years connected with Henry Siegel Co., Boston, Mass., as buyer for books, stationery, music, notions, etc., has resigned, to accept a position as manager for books, stationery, notions, candy, etc., with the firm of Houghton & Dutton, also of Boston.

AFTER twenty years' service, ten in the capacity of manager, with the Joseph McDonough Co., of Albany, N. Y., Charles H. Platz has established himself as a dealer in scarce and fine books at 227a Delaware Avenue. Albany. He intends to issue catalogues and special lists from time to time.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

A STATUE of Hawthorne, by Bela L. Pratt, is projected as a Hawthorne memorial in Salem, the birthplace of the novelist.

DR. DAVID JAMES BURRELL'S first volume of homiletics—"The Sermon: Its Construction and Delivery"—will be published early in February by Revell.

THE Putnams have just published "The Chafing Dish and the Preparation of Sandwiches," by Alice L. James, author of "Catering for Two."

DR. JAMES FORD RHODES' book of lectures on the American Civil War, delivered at Oxford last year, is to be published next week by the Macmillan Co.

THE Century Co. will publish, early in the new year, "The Shadow," a tale of detective adventure, by Arthur Stringer, and a book of short stories by Anne Douglas Sedgwick.

JORDAN & COMPANY has just completed "The Bride's Book of Gifts," a generously illustrated book for the bride-elect. It comes in leather and cloth bindings.

"THE FEAR OF LIVING," by Henry Bordeaux, which was "crowned" by the French Academy and has run through edition after edition, is announced for publication in a translation by Ruth Helen Davis. (Dutton.)

AT a special meeting of the trustees of the Stationers' Board of Trade, held January 21, Henry C. Bainbridge was elected president in place of Stephen Farrelly, who was obliged by press of other business to resign.

DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & Co. will bring out this spring two new books by Maurice Leblanc, creator of the famous detective-criminal and criminal-detective Arsène Lupin. It is understood that one of these publications will be the confessions of Lupin.

PROMPT to the need of the hour is "Education for Economic Democracy," which Sturgis & Walton Company promise for early spring publication. The book is by Prof. Arland D. Weeks, who grapples with the question of "cultural" versus vocational education.

FICTION on the Crowell list this spring is represented by "A Superman in Being," by Litchfield Woods; "The Debt," a lively story of South African life, by William Westrupp; and by Samuel W. Odell's "Princess Athura," an historical romance, dealing with events in ancient Persia.

THE author of "One Way Out," who calls himself William Carleton, has now confessed that in "One Way Out" he told only half his story, so that he has been impelled to tell the rest of it in a second volume, to be called "New Lives for Old," which Small, Maynard & Company are publishing this month.

P. J. KENEDY & SONS announce that they have made arrangements to supply the Catholic trade with Monsignor Benson's new historical novel, "Come Rack! Come Rope!" cooperating with Dodd, Mead & Company, who hold the copyright. The book will be published January 30.

CASSELL & COMPANY will publish, February 1, "Cleek; the Man of the Forty Faces," a detective story somewhat after the order of the Sherlock Holmes type; and an anonymous romance, "Princess Mary's Locked Book," said to be by an author whose work ranks among the "best sellers" annually.

"THE Land That Is Desolate"—so Sir Frederick Treves names his account of Palestine, is promised for immediate publication by E. P. Dutton & Co. But though the land be barren, no one need fear a jejune narrative from the pen of the great English surgeon and traveller.

AMONG the death claims filed with United States Commissioner Gilchrist for the "Titanic" disaster is one for $300,000 for Jacques Futrelle, the novelist, by his widow. She also asks $3600 for mss. and ms. material. Mrs. Frank D. Millet asks $100,000 for the death of her husband, the artist.

DANA ESTES & COMPANY announce that owing to the extraordinary demand for Laura E. Richards' new book, "Miss Jimmy," which was announced for publication on January 20th, as advertised in the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY of January 18, the publication was deferred until to-day.

ALTHOUGH not wholly a story of the stage, Mrs. Isabel Gordon Curtis' new story, "The Lapse of Enoch Wentworth" (F. G. Browne & Co.), will appeal to the theatrical profession. Mrs. Curtis edited a dramatic page for a number of years, and in this novel she presents a picture of stage people and stage life, the good side as well as the bad.

THE publication of "The Red Hand of Ulster" and the passing of the Home Rule bill having occurred on the same day, we have just about reached that period of time in which Mr. Birmingham's story is supposed to be enacted. For all its humor and absurdities, the book is a very shrewd picture of the present-day situation in Ireland. Whether the Irish will unintentionally dramatize the work remains to be seen.

IN connection with the editorial note in last week's PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY on the use of books for Valentine remembrances it might be noted that Baker & Taylor are glad to co-operate with the booksciler in working up this particular line of trade. They manufacture a special line of wrappers and bands which they will supply without extra charge on the books of any publisher which are ordered in "Valentine editions."

THAT our modern science is not entirely our own invention, but an outgrowth of many generations of investigation, is brought home to us by those who trace the history of research back to its origin—or rather, its earliest records. The science of psychology is so traced in two very dissimilar Macmillan books just published: G. S. Brett's "History of Psychology," and Max Dessoir's "Outlines of the History of Psychology." Other volumes along the same lines are announced.

A VOLUME of essays, "Cross Views," by Wilfred S. Jackson, and "A Struggle for Bread," a reply to Norman Angell's "Great Illusion," by "A Rifleman," were published yesterday by the John Lane Company. Five novels also appeared: "Lanchester of Brazenose," by Ronald MacDonald; "The Fifth Trumpet," by Paul Bertram; "Sopham's Folly," by George Stevenson; "The Finger of Mr. Blei," by Peter Blundell; and "Jocasta and the Famished Cat," by Anatole France.

UNCLE SAM has recently passed favorably upon the availability for the crews' libraries of his fleets of four South American books, as follows: Winter's "Chile and Her People of To-Day"; Winter's "Mexico and Her People of To-Day" (recently issued in a new revised edition up to date); and Lindsay's authoritative work dealing with "Panama and the Canal To-Day" (also recently revised to date), as well as Charles Livingston Bull's "Under the Roof of the Jungle," all published by L. C. Page & Company, Boston.

THE Penn Publishing Company are sending out a circular which reflects in an unusual way the high standard of excellence of their juvenile publications. It consists wholly of reprints of entries of their books from the American Library Association Booklist. This list is an official and very carefully made selection, intended as a guide for library buying for the smaller libraries. No less than twenty Penn juveniles have appeared on the List in the last three years, eight of them with the star of special merit, certainly an enviable record.

MCBRIDE, NAST & Co. are publishing immediately: "The Best Motor Routes Through Europe," an automobiling guide-book, by George D. Webber, with a tendency toward pointing out the things to be seen, as well as the manner of reaching them; "Dyes and Dyeing," by Charles E. Pellew, a book for the home craftsman; two new volumes in the House and Garden Making Series—"Making a Fireplace," by Henry H. Saylor; and "Making a Water Garden," by William Tricker. "Old-fashioned Gardening," by Grace Tabor; and "Theatrical and Musical Memoirs," by Rudolph Aronson, the well known theatrical manager who built the Casino Theatre, New York.

THREE novels by Richard Pryce, author of "Christopher," head the Houghton Mifflin Co. list for February. One of them, "Elementary Jane," will not be ready until the 15th, but "Jezebel" and "The Burden of a Woman" will be published the 1st. Other books to be published February 1 are: "A Wayfarer in China," by Elizabeth Kendall; "Irish Plays and Playwrights," by Cornelius Weygandt; "Field Days in California," by Bradford Torrey; "Old Homes of New Americans," by Francis E. Clark; "Psychology and Industrial Efficiency," by Hugo Münsterberg; "The Diary of a Free Kindergarten," by Lileen Hardy; "Letters of a Post Impressionist," by Vincent Van Gogh, edited by Anthony Ludovici; and the Satchel Guide for 1913.

THE English house of Macmillan & Co. announce that they will begin, in April, the publication of the Bombay edition of the works of Rudyard Kipling, in prose and verse, newly arranged and corrected by the author. This edition will be limited to 1050 copies, and will occupy twenty-three royal octavo volumes, two of which will appear every two months. The price will be one guinea net per volume, and the edition will be sold only in sets. The books will be printed by R. & R. Clark, of Edinburgh, in the well-known Florence type designed by Herbert P. Horne, and lent by the owners, Chatto & Windus, for the purposes of this edition. The paper used will be real hand-made paper, specially manufactured with a distinctive water-mark, and the first volume of every set will contain an autograph signature of Rudyard Kipling.

THE new section of the Oxford Dictionary makes the beginning of the tenth volume of that monumental work, and includes the words from "Ti" to "Tombac," the total entries numbering 3191. Among the more noticeable words treated, we may mention the preposition "To," which has required some eighteen columns, and about a fourth of the whole time occupied in the preparation of the section. "Time" takes up fourteen columns, besides seven columns of compounds and derivatives, including the first appearance of "Timetable" in 1838. Other words of importance or interest are "Tide," "Timber," "Tobacco," "Tithe," "Toil," "Ticket," "Toilet." Among words of which the etymology still remains uncertain, the section includes "tinker," "tinkler," "tipple," "tipsy," "titivate."

THE Syndics of the Cambridge University Press propose to publish a comprehensive history of India, from the earliest times to the present day, on the model of the Cambridge Modern History. The work, as projected, will be completed in six volumes of about six hundred pages, two volumes being devoted to each of the main periods—ancient India, Mohammedan India and British India—under the editorship, respectively, of Professor E. J. Rapson, Lieut.-Col. T. Wolseley Haig, I.S.C., and Sir Theodore Morison, K.C.I.E. The various chapters in these sections will be entrusted to scholars who have made a special study of the period or subject; and the Syn-dics hope, in this way, to produce a history of the nations of India, past and present, which shall take its place as the standard work. They are indebted to the generosity of Sir Dorab Tata for the means of providing additional maps and illustrations, which will add greatly to the value and interest of the volumes.

A VERITABLE hail of books about the Balkan campaign, if we are to believe a London report, will shortly descend upon us. The war correspondents of the various newspapers have all come back laden with material for the inevitable volume, and the fact that they were able, for the most part, to obtain such meagre facilities for describing the actual operations of war in their respective journals has presumably made them all the more eager to "take it out" in discursive narratives of their experiences. One can only hope that their eagerness will not result in the appearance of more books on the subject than the public will want to read. Two of the ablest of the correspondents, Philip Gibbs and Bernard Grant, have resorted to the wise expedient of joining forces and producing a single book in combination. The former having been with the Bulgarian army, while the latter was with the Turkish forces, their joint work, which the firm of Methuen have published under the title, "Adventures of War with Cross and Crescent," has the advantage of presenting the story of the campaign from the point of view both of the successful and the defeated combatants. Small, Maynard & Company are the American publishers. Another war book of peculiar interest is that of the somewhat mysterious Lieutenant Wagner, special correspondent to the London Daily Mail and New York Times, whose dispatches showed him to be capable of obtaining information which was apparently not within the reach of his brother war correspondents. This is to be issued by the house of Constable in England and Houghton Mifflin on this side. Among many other books on the same subject, we are shortly to have from Mr. Heinemann that written by Ellis Ashmead-Bartlett, who represented the Daily Telegraph at the front. On the whole, there seems little fear that the Balkan campaign will miss its due prominence in the chronicles of European warfare through any lack of zealous historians "on the spot."

PICK-UPS.

BALLADS OF THE TEMPTING BOOK.

Sometimes when I sit down at night,
And try to think of something new,
Some odd conceit that I may write,
And work into a verse or two,
There often dawns upon my view
The while my feeble thoughts I nurse,
A little book of gold and blue—
"The Oxford Book of English Verse."

And though I try in wild affright
At thought of all I have to do,
To keep that volume out of sight,
If I so much as look askew,
I catch it playing peek-a-boo;
Then work may go to pot—or worse,
I'm giving up the evening to
"The Oxford Book of English Verse."

O, some for essays recondite,
And some for frothy fiction sue;
But give to me for my delight,
One tuneful tome to ramble through,
To hear the first quaint "Sing Cuccu,"
And all those noble songs rehearse
Whose deathless melodies imbue
"The Oxford Book of English Verse."

L'Envoi.

Kind reader, here's a tip for you;
Go buy, though skinny be your purse,
And other books of yours be few,
"The Oxford Book of English Verse."

J. Safford. N. Y., Putnam. c. 14+408 p. O. (Putnam's science ser.) $2 n.

A presentation of the attitude of the ages toward woman and a plea for her further enfranchisement from imposed and unnatural limitations. The plea for a deeper participation in life of a sex that has too long been regarded as predestined to domesticity, is made as much in the interest of the race as in that of woman herself. Only through the co-operation of women in the tasks that lie before the world and the problems that await solution can a definite and representative advance be achieved. By author of "The science of happiness," etc.

Margueritte, Victor. The frontiers of the heart; tr. from the French by Frederic Lees. N. Y., Stokes. c. 345 p. D. $1.25 n.

Time is just before the Franco-Prussian war. Marthe Ellangé, a young French woman, falls deeply in love with Otto Rudenheim, a German physician. She is opposed in her choice by her parents, who can feel the oncoming disagreement between the two great nations. She marries him, however, and goes to Marburg to live, but returns to her old home just before the war. The effect of this upon both their lives and the final estrangement make the story.

Stiles, G: K. The dragoman; a novel. N. Y., Harper. c. 311 p. D. $1.30 n.

Rumors of a coming rebellion against the English in Egypt reach the ears of Randall, of Natori-Alga. A glimpse of a beautiful and imperious woman on a strange ship bound for the falls of the Blue Nile, the heart of the rebellion, arouses his interest. Disguised as a native he sets out to unravel the mystery, ultimately taking the place of the dragoman on board the strange ship. He comes into the possession of a mysterious emerald, the token of the expected deliverer, and to save the girl impersonates the prophet. Adventures follow thick and fast.

Traces the development of the Christ myth from its originator, Straus, to Professor Drews. Discusses under historical data the pre-Christian Messianic concepts, the Jesus of the primitive Gospel, and the Logia, St. Paul and the historic Jesus, and the testimony of contemporary Roman and Jewish writers. In dealing with mythical data insists on lack of evidence of the existence of pre-Christian cults worshipping a Redeemer or Healer-God.

The Publishers' Weekly

Subscription Rates

One year, postage prepaid in the United States, $4.00; foreign, $5.00.

Single copies, 10 cents. Educational Number, in leatherette, 50 cents; Christmas Bookshelf, 25 cents.

Advertising Rates

One page	$25 00
Half page	14 00
Quarter page	7 00
Eighth page	4 00
One-sixteenth page	2 00

The above rates are for unspecified positions. Special rates for preferred position (full pages only).

Higher rates are charged for the Summer Reading, Educational Number and Christmas Bookshelf, and for the monthly Book Review supplement sections.

Advertising copy should reach us Tuesday noon—earlier, if proof is desired out-of-town. Forms close Thursday noon.

Under the heading "BOOKS WANTED" booktrade subscribers, under their own names, are given five nonpareil lines (exclusive of address) free advertisement for specific books out of print in any issue except special numbers, but not exceeding 100 lines a year. If over five lines are sent the excess is at 10 cents a line. Books not out of print, unspecified wants, repeated matter, and all advertisements from nonsubscribers cost 10 cents a line. Objectionable books are excluded so far as they are noted.

In answering, please state edition, condition and price, including postage or express charges. Houses that will deal exclusively on a cash-on-delivery basis should put [Cash] after their firm name. The appearance of advertisements in this column, or elsewhere in the WEEKLY, does not furnish a guarantee of credit. While it endeavors to safeguard its columns by withholding the privilege of advertising should occasion arise, booksellers should take usual precautions in extending credit.

"Books Wanted" must be designated by actual title, not by "any."

Write your wants plainly, on one side of the sheet only. Illegible "wants" are ignored. The WEEKLY is not responsible for errors. Parties with whom there is no account must pay in advance.

Under "BOOKS FOR SALE" or for other small undisplayed advertisements, the charge is 10 cents a nonpareil line. No reduction for repeated matter. Count seven words to the line.

THE MAKING OF A NEWSPAPER MAN

I DO not know how other people feel about stories of their own trades, but nothing delights me more than to take up a book which deals with newspaper life in the right way. The reporter is often in modern fiction, as he is in the current drama, but usually he is a caricature. There is no need of this, for of himself he is such an interesting fellow, and his experiences are so varied and so vital that he can be put in book or play without one stroke of exaggeration.

It is in this same way that Samuel G. Blythe deals with the craft in his little book, "The Making of a Newspaper Man" (Henry Altemus Co., 50 cents). It is told in the first person, and it probably is quite as autobiographical as the style would indicate. Yet the things that happened to Sam might be duplicated by any of the earnest, bright boys who are thumping typewriters in the city room not a dozen yards away this very minute.

It is the story of failures and scoops; of the foolish pursuit of the firefly of one's own paper which, alas, seizes upon us all sooner or later. It is a story of hard work and hardships, and not overmuch of hard cash. But it is, also, the tale of good times that no other trade can approach, and, if not of riches, yet of good living.

This is the view of the case which "Sam" takes after he has told his story of working up from cub reporter to star man. If there is any boy who wants to be a newspaper man, and is hesitating, I can think of nothing better to bring his decision to a head, one way or the other. The arguments against such a life are set down honestly by "Sam," and its good points treated in the same candid way. But his final conclusion is of delight that he is one of the newspaper boys, irrespective of the handicaps.

Of course, "Sam" would be of this opinion, for he is now in the happiest of all conditions —the man who does the thing he wishes to do, and does it almost as well as he would. No one ever is really satisfied with his work, except the overconceited, and he is soon jolted out of that self-sufficiency. But if anyone can write as well as "Sam," he has every reason to wear the smile that won't come off.

There's no one in the land that has just his manner of putting things. It is funny and striking, full of that warmth of imagination and that incongruous gathering together of things which is the essence of American humor. But it is much more than that. A keen, observant eye, and a brain trained to weigh men and affairs, are also in evidence there. If I wanted to get at the nature of a man or the condition of a political cause, I would take Sam's jocular summing up more readily than the most labored analysis of one of the highbrows.

A layman, I believe, will like to read this, "The Making of a Newspaper Man." The newspaper boys themselves will dote on it.—The Cleveland Leader.

Sonolexika Langenscheidt

A series of Pocket Dictionaries with indication of pronunciation according to the Toussaint-Langenscheidt System

JUST PUBLISHED

LATIN-ENGLISH

COMPILED BY K. FEYERABEND, PH.D., PROF.

1 Vol. XVI. 407 pp. 16mo. Cloth. Price 80 cents

THIS Latin-English Pocket Dictionary, shortly to be followed by an English-Latin part, contains all the words used by the Latin authors most generally read. The following poets and prose writers have been laid under contribution: Plautus, Terence, Cicero, Cornelius Nepos, Catullus, Virgil, Horace, Tibullus, Propertius, Ovid, Livy, Phaedrus, Curtius Rufus, Quintilian (Book X), Pliny the Younger (Letters), Justin, and Eutropius.

Under each word the original meaning is given first, and then, wherever modifications have taken place, the development of the meaning is shown in clearly arranged divisions and sub-divisions. Grammatical constructions, except very rare or incorrect usages, are also given, and when necessary are illustrated by examples.

PREVIOUS VOLUMES:

A Novel by the Author of "To M. L. G."

Ready February 20

"The Life Mask" is laid largely in Granada, to which the author retired after the publication of "To M. L. G.," the romance of which terminated so successfully by the author's wedding on October 8.

Cloth, 12mo, $1.30 net

"To M. L. G." was one of the successes of the year. not solely because of the extraordinary circumstances which caused it to be written, but largely on account of the power and artistry of the work itself.

IMPORTANT NEW BOOKS

The Port of Dreams

By MIRIAM ALEXANDER

Author of "Beyond the Law." 12°. $1.35 net. By mail, $1.50

In the new story by the winner of the Great Prize Novel, awarded the prize of $1,250.00, Miss Alexander turns to a century with the history of which she is thoroughly imbued and the scenes of which are to her a familiar landscape. It is a tale of love and adventure laid in the stirring Jacobite days and confirms the opinions of the critics, who welcomed the author of "Beyond the Law" as a notable recruit to the small band of novelists that may be relied upon to produce something distinctive.

Who Laughs Last

By ASHTON HILLIERS

Author of "As It Happened," "The Master Girl," etc.

12°. $1.25 net. By mail, $1.40

A story rich in human content, abounding in telling contrasts of character and impressive portraiture and seasoned with incident and adventure, and the author has filled the page of his new novel with glowing incident and thrilling happenings.

Ashes and Sparks

By PERCY WHITE

12°. $1.25 net. By mail, $1.40

The book is full of fine perception, and its kindly humor is free from exaggeration. The dry, devoted, conservative, anti-Suffragist cousin of the heroine, who tells the story, is rendered with masterly fidelity.

The Hero of Herat

A Frontier Romance

By MAUD DIVER

Author of "Candles in the Wind," "Captain Desmond, V. C.," etc.

12°. With Frontispiece. $1.50 net. By mail, $1.65

Maud Diver has chosen as the central figure of her present story Eldred Pottinger, an historic personage whose life, brim full of adventure, had all the charm of romance. For the setting of the story we have the tumultuous period when the last half of the Indian Empire was in the making, a period that produced characters conspicuous for courage, daring, and steadfastness.

The Romance of the Rothschilds

By IGNATIUS BALLA

8°. 4 Illus. $3.00 net. By mail, $3.25

The story of the accumulation of the greatest aggregate fortune and the history of the most noteworthy family of financiers that the world has seen. Contents: The Rise of the Rothschilds—the founder of the House The English Rothschild, Baron James Rothschild. The Rothschilds at Naples. The Frankfort House. The Vienna Rothschilds.

THE LOWELL LECTURES, 1912

The Personality of Napoleon

By J. HOLLAND ROSE

12°. $2.50 net. By mail, $2.75.

This volume, by a scholar of authority, presents a study of the most important sides of Napoleon's character—Man, Jacobin, Warrior, Lawgiver, Emperor, Thinker, World Ruler, Exile. This method of treatment, supported by numerous extracts from Napoleon's letters, etc., will offer new points of view in an oft-treated theme.

'TWIXT LAND AND SEA

By the author of "Youth," "Lord Jim," "The Mirror of the Sea," etc.

Joseph Conrad has come into his own. The three stories contained in this volume take rank with the most mature and romantic of his work. The charming love and adventure of the life which he depicts in remote places confirm the growing belief that he is among the greatest of living creative writers.

THE PRIVATE LIFE OF HENRY MAITLAND

This book has roused a furore of controversy in England and America because of its relentless frankness. Under a thin veil of disguise, easily penetrated by those who recognize, one of the most curious life stories of one of the premier novelists of the English school of realists is told. At one stride this book has taken a permanent place in literature as one of the most human of records.

HALF-DOLLAR BOOKS

POPULAR STANDARD NOVELS

¶ A reading public for the work of Modern Novelists is a development. The regular purchasers of dollar-and-a-quarter fiction are recruited steadily from the ranks of those who buy half-dollar books.

¶ We have consistently published fiction of a very high average of worth and genius, and in this present venture it is our purpose to present some of the work of our leading writers in attractive form to sell at half-a-dollar in the hope that an active interest will be stimulated in all the books by the authors represented.

¶ This is a logical and reasonable method of extending the market for good books.

¶ We earnestly invite the co-operation of booksellers at our liberal profit-providing terms.

TAO-TEH-KING

道德經

China's Most Mystical Book

By C. H. A. BJERREGAARD

LIBRARIAN, NEW YORK PUBLIC LIBRARY

FIFTEEN years ago the Tao-Teh-King was practically unknown outside a very narrow circle of scholars. Now there are several English and German translations on the market, all very different in value. No commentary on the Tao-Teh-King as a whole or in part has been published until the present attempt by C. H. A. Bjerregaard, Librarian, New York Public Library. His object has been to draw attention to that wonderful life of simplicity which is the keynote of the book and which was lived by the ancients at a pre-ethical period. This book tells the wisdom of ages in the terms and life of to-day.

THE BOOK SUPPLY COMPANY

PUBLISHERS AND BOOKSELLERS

231-233 WEST MONROE STREET

CHICAGO Jan'y 15, 1913.

Mr. S. C. Britton, Prest.,
The Reilly & Britton Company, Chicago.

Dear Mr. Britton:

Since my conversation with you I have canvassed the situation thoroughly, with the following result:

"Their Yesterdays," from publication day to the first of January almost equalled the unprecedented sale of "Barbara Worth" for the same period of the year previous. The popularity of "Their Yesterdays" is fast increasing and from all indications it will prove the most popular, as well as the most masterful book that Harold Bell Wright has yet written.

Realizing the importance to humanity of this contribution, I am determined to continue to further its sale in every possible judicious manner, and I have decided to put no overshadowing book in its way. Therefore, as final and conclusive, I wish to say there will be no new book of any description by Harold Bell Wright published this year.

The demand for "The Winning of Barbara Worth" continues to be strong, and there really is no reason for its going into a Popular Edition next fall. I am, however, tempted by a proposition for One Million copies first edition in Popular form, and it remains to be seen whether or not the temptation is strong enough to make me break a good resolution.

But if "Barbara Worth" does go into a Popular Edition next fall, we will protect every bookseller to the extent of his stock on hand.

Everything looks promising and I am sure we will all be well pleased with the sale of the Harold Bell Wright books this year.

Yours sincerely,

Elsbery W. Reynolds
Prest.

The above letter will give booksellers the exact situation regarding the publication plans of The Book Supply Company for 1913. As exclusive selling agents to the trade, we desire to say that since the close of the holiday season we have received reorders from all sections of the country for "Their Yesterdays" and "Barbara Worth," showing conclusively that stocks were cleaned up and that the strong demand of the previous year is to be continued. We are assured by Mr. Reynolds that both books are to be well advertised all through the present year.

The Quest of Glory

By MARJORIE BOWEN

This brilliant romance based on the career of the young Marquis de Vauvenargues is told, says an English critic, with "a kind of dignified tenderness that never degenerates into sentimentality. Her style has just the color and movement which mastery of the historical novel requires, with some added touch of sincerity which redeems it from mere swashbuckling."

CHARGING INTEREST ON DELINQUENT ACCOUNTS.

OUR attention was called the other day to the case of a bookseller who had entered complaint against a certain New York publisher's rule of requiring interest on delinquent accounts. The publisher's statement of his case was frank:

"I found that certain booksellers, not content with the usual trade datings, let their accounts run practically indefinitely. Investigation discovered that most of these dealers were perfectly able to pay their bills—had they not been, we would not have extended them credit—but through bad habit, or deliberate intention, they had become accustomed to letting accounts hang fire a year, sometimes longer. We have our own business to finance. To a certain extent, in accordance with the practice usual in the booktrade, as in other retail trades, we finance our customers. To do this, we borrow money of our banks, and on this money we, of course, pay interest. When a customer desires an unusual extension, we always endeavor to accommodate him; but we consider it simple justice to ourselves to ask him to pay us interest on the additional bank balance we are carrying for him."

The PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY does not think that publisher really put it strongly enough. To allow one dealer to let his accounts run a year, while his neighbor pays promptly, is to deal unjustly with the latter. In effect, it means giving the slow payer an unwarranted extra discount, viz., the free use of the money represented in the unpaid account. That is both unfair to the dealer who deserves best of the publisher, and demoralizing to the trade in general.

Five years, ten years, ago, the bookseller who discounted his bills was a rarity; extensions were the rule. Fortunately, that isn't the condition to-day; most booksellers are approving and adopting the credit customs that govern general business. We believe that the bookseller who was "miffed" at the publisher above mentioned because the latter enforced a sensible and equitable rule, made a mistake; we venture that, on reconsideration, he will reverse his resultant action.

OUR Canadian cousins are agitating the question of organizing, or, rather, of reorganizing, a booksellers' association of their own. The booksellers and stationers of Canada have, we understand, been organized several times before, with indifferent success, but did not have the enthusiastic support of the rank and file of dealers throughout the country. The carrying out of a work designed to benefit the trade as a whole devolved, as is so often the case, upon a small group of men, who naturally grew discouraged because of the failure of the majority of the merchants to appreciate what these few workers were doing to forward the general well-being of the Canadian trade. As to the value of trade organization, especially for the bookseller, there is not the slightest chance for argument. Co-operation has been the making, or, rather, the rejuvenating, of the American trade. If we judge from the number of new stores starting, the Canadian trade is in a flourishing condition; but that does not mean that an efficient and enthusiastic organization could not make it more prosperous.

THE BOOKSELLERS' VOCATION.*

I HAVE been asked to speak to you on "The Booksellers' vocation from the point of view of the publishers' representative."

What are some of the requirements necessary to the making of your vocation a successful one?

First, as thorough a knowledge of your stock as possible. Next, close attention to the desires of your customers and suggestive help, as quick service as the occasion will permit, and at all times politeness, which includes, of course, a pleasing manner.

A "GET TOGETHER CLUB."

Now, regarding the knowledge of your stock. It can hardly be expected that any one

* An address by Daniel W. Nye, sales manager for Doubleday, Page & Company, at the Booksellers' League's School for Booksellers, January 28, 1913.

Digitized by Google

salesman or saleswoman can find an opportunity to read every book that comes into the store, and as a suggestion I would recommend that you form a "Get Together Club." I believe the buyer would find it profitable to himself, to his employer and to his associates. To the buyer, because he would be opening up a way to more readily dispose of the stock for which he is responsible; to his employer, because he would sell more books and so increase the profits, and to his associates, because they would find an inspiration in these discussions and the interchanging of ideas.

If once every two or three weeks he would take an hour, gather his salesmen and saleswomen together, and discuss the list of new books which had been purchased during that period, he would find that each had a certain pride in having formulated some definite selling idea and, incidentally, there would be created a personal interest and enthusiasm, which means service in the departments that is invaluable.

We have many such gatherings a month at Garden City, and I believe they are responsible for making, and also for saving, several thousands of dollars a year.

SUGGESTIVE HELP.

When a customer comes in and says, "I want a book for a friend," do you ever inquire if it is for a young person or an older one? and then do you suggest a good nature story, or a book on philosophy, or poetry, or a good novel? and do you inquire if the customer can recall any books this friend may have spoken highly of and enjoyed, to help you make a suggestion?

This may possibly seem superfluous to you, but I have watched many clerks display book after book without making a sale, heard them complain of the disappointed customer "not knowing what he wanted," when by a careful analysis of the situation this salesman could have worked out the customer's problem, invited his confidence, satisfied him and made a regular customer. I know of no occasion when a person is so liable not to know exactly what he wants as in the purchasing of books.

QUICK SERVICE.

How many times have you walked out of a store without having purchased, the house having lost your patronage, because you could get no one to wait on you? On the other hand, if a customer wishes to "browse" around he should be allowed to do so.

THE VALUE OF THE SOFT VOICE AND THE GLAD HAND.

And now, politeness and a pleasing manner. I can best illustrate this with an incident that actually took place a few years ago in one of our best known book stores in New York City. One evening, just a few moments before closing time, an elderly man and his wife entered. Practically every one had left the floor with the exception of one clerk. The lady wanted a particular kind of book for a most particular friend, and after the clerk had spent half an hour (during which time he had taken nearly every book out of the shelves), the husband became impatient; not the bookclerk—he was as genial and agreeable and pleasant as though he were selling a diamond necklace and was to receive the entire profit of the sale. Finally she secured just the book she wanted. The man was so impressed with the salesman that he offered him a position at $20 a week more than he was then receiving.

How many of you study the characteristics of your customers? Can you call those who frequent your store by name, and do you remember where they live, if they should desire a book charged and sent? At one large wholesale house in this city there is an employee who draws a very large salary, merely to greet customers who come there to buy. It is said no one ever visits the store a second time, regardless of the length of time between visits, that this employee does not at once greet him by name, inquire of his particular kind of business and speak of the town or city the customer lives in. If a big concern like this finds it worth its while to pay a large salary for this service is it not proportionately worth while for you to make a study of it?

"FEWER BOOKS" VS. "MORE SALES."

We all hear in these days a great deal about the over-production of books. I do not believe there is half the truth in that phrase that there is in the fact that we have not progressed, like other big commercial organizations, in finding more adequate ways to sell our goods.

We who are gathered here have one of the greatest of opportunities to work out book problems, in fact to revolutionize the book business. Someone will do it in the next five or ten years. Why not let it be you? The reason the opportunity is so great is because there has been so little real development in the book trade for so many years.

I believe the time will soon arrive when you will find book stores all over the big cities of the United States, and these stores will make profits too, and when that time arrives I believe it will be a help to the progressive book store to have them there. Of course it will put the unprogressive man out of business, but that kind of weeding out will be good for the business and it will be good for you.

MORE BOOK STORES A NECESSITY.

We want more book stores all over the country. There are hundreds of towns in which there is not a single book store. There are more homes in this country that own a piano or an organ than homes that own a library. The publishers realize the deficiency and they are more than willing to help you who are alert, wide-awake and competent to get on and in business for yourself. They are always open to any reasonable suggestions.

How many ideas do you take every month to your employer or to the head of your department? Possibly you reason that it is not worth while, for he reaps the benefit or glory, or whatever you may desire to call it. But reason further—what if he does? If it is a good idea and helps him, he is going to do all he can to keep you; you are valuable to him and he needs you, and all the time you are building your foundation and preparing yourself for bigger undertakings to follow.

What responsibility do you take in working out the problem of getting better books? Have you formed the habit, which so many dealers have, of putting a book under the table when it begins to sell big so they can sell their slower moving stock? If I were operating a book store and had a book that was a big seller, I would push it to the limit, believing that by so doing it would naturally interfere with the sales of the unnecessary books. Then the publishers would find it unprofitable to publish them, and in a short time you, not the publishers, would have solved the problem of "Fewer and Better Books."

THE STRENUOUS LIFE IN A SCOTCH BOOKSHOP.

In a recent address before the Booksellers' Association of Philadelphia, telling of "Rambles in England and Scotland," Warren Snyder commented on the lack of system in some of the bookshops of those countries.

"In many of the shops," he said, "little or no effort is made to classify the stock. In some it is classified under two headings—books that are sold in sets and books that are not sold in sets. I said to a dealer: 'If your stock were only classified, I would buy a great many more books.' His answer was: 'You can't classify a popular stock like this.' I only know of one reason why it could not be classified, and that is the lack of ambition to go to work at it.

"In a shop where I bought some books last summer, I inquired the price of a number of finely bound sets that I saw on the shelves, and in every instance the salesman had to go to some other part of the shop to find the volume in which the selling price was marked. Many of the shops are in buildings that were formerly dwellings. In one shop that I recall, the stock is alphabetically arranged according to authors, regardless of the subject. For instance, Byron's 'Poems' would be in the third story, and the book next to it might be Bacon's 'Essays' or Buckle's 'History of Civilization.' Milton's 'Poems' would probably be in the second story and Scott and Wordsworth in the basement. The main floor is usually kept for sets and expensive books.

"One morning I went into a shop in Edinburgh and commenced to look over the shelves. The only person in attendance was a man of about seventy. After a while, when I crossed to the opposite side of the shop to examine the stock there, the old man called out in a loud voice, with a decided Scotch accent, 'Those books are not on view; they are not on view.' I said nothing, but stepped to a shelving that extended part way through the middle of the shop. Again he thundered out, 'Those books are not on view.' 'What do you mean?' I asked. 'Are not these books for sale?' His answer was, 'They are catalogued.' 'You catalogued them to sell, did you not?' I replied. 'I came in here to buy books, and I am ready to buy as many as I find to suit me; it does not matter whether I spend a hundred pounds or a thousand pounds.' After looking at him for a few seconds, during which he remained perfectly silent and motionless, I said, 'Good morning,' and walked out. I turned as I passed through the doorway to take another look at him, and apparently he had not moved. I wonder what his afterthoughts were. The books had probably been catalogued, and he thought the money spent for the catalogue would be lost if he sold them to me. His reasoning was something like the Scotchman who went to London to see a big parade. On his return, one of his friends asked how he liked the parade. 'I did not see it,' he said. 'But I thought you went expressly to see it?' 'I did, mon, but the landlord charged me ten shillings a day for a room, and after paying so much, I was not agoing to leave it to see any parade and let the landlord get the best of me.'"

The estimated lowest aggregate market value of photo engravings (halftones and line etchings) produced in the commercial process plants of the United States during 1912, according to William Hughes, publisher The Engraver and Electrotyper, is $21,197,576.

Wages made up the principal cost in the production thereof, aggregating $5,616,000; being nearly 26½ per cent. of the sales. The next biggest outlay was for the metals used, amounting to $1,024,051—$756,000 being for the polished copper, and $268,051 for the polished zinc sheets.

The wages and the metals combined aggregated $6,640,051; which is a shade under 31⅓ (31.32) per cent. of the sale—of the mounted engraved copper and zinc printing plates. This leaves a balance of $14,557,525—which is over 68 2-3 (68.68) per cent. of the market value of their products ($21,197,576)—for the proprietors; minus office and outside salaries and "overhead" expenses, renewals or repairs of apparatus, chemicals and losses. 228,221,592 square inches of the polished metal sheets were used during the twelve months: 97,834,968 inches of copper, and 130,446,624 inches of zinc. Calculating 15 cents an inch as the average selling price of the copper halftones, the total sales thereof amounted to $14,675,245. Taking five cents per inch as the average selling price of the engraved mounted zinc plates, their total sales amounted to $6,522,331; being much more than a third (the selling price proportion) of the copper plates sales, on account of 32,611,666 square inches more of zinc being used.

The total weight was 2,160,000 pounds of

the copper sheets used; and the zinc sheets weighed 276,823 pounds more, namely, 2,436,823 pounds. The proportionately greater excess of zinc by area, over the increase by weight, is due to the zinc being lighter. The standard sheet of zinc weighs two pounds less than the same size sheet of copper; the lighter metal being eleven-thirteenths (11-13) the weight of the heavier.

THE BORDEN LIBRARY SALE.

THE valuable library formed by the late M. C. D. Borden will be sold at the American Art Galleries by Thomas E. Kirby on the evening of February 17, and the afternoons and evenings of February 18 and 19. The sale will consist of 838 lots, many of which contain more than fifty volumes.

Included in the rarities is a fine, clear copy of the first edition of Robert Burns's "Poems, Chiefly in the Scottish Dialect," printed by John Wilson at Kilmarnock in 1786. The Robert Hoe copy of this edition, with two holograph letters by Burns inserted, was knocked down at Anderson's for $5,800. The Borden copy is in full black morocco binding, with gold tooling on sides in dentelle, gilt edges.

Another valuable and interesting Burns item is an extra-illustrated set of his works, Edinburgh, William Patterson, 1877-78, extended from seven to thirteen volumes. Included in the insertions are a number of original manuscripts and holograph letters. On the inside panel of volume VII. is incased under glass a lock of Burns's dark brown hair, tied with a bow of blue ribbon.

A folio album contains two holograph letters of Napoleon Bonaparte, letters from the Empress Josephine and from Queen Hortense to the Conte de Lavalette. The album, which is in green levant morocco binding by Chambolle-Duru, contains likewise many rare portraits and interesting historical matter.

Another folio album, once the property of the Duchess de Berry, contains thirty-six autograph letters signed, documents, official communications of the kings and queens of France, seven rare prints, and forty-two folio engraved portraits of French royal personages. "Album Artistique de la Reine Hortense" (Eugénie de Beauharnais) is extra-illustrated by the insertion of choice plates of Napoleon I., Josephine and others. "Précieuse Correspondance de Marie-Louise à Marie-Amélie, 1816-21," has 11 rare portraits, also a holograph letter of Napoleon I. "Napoleon Ier et Son Temps" contains sixty-three autograph letters from royal personages; 205 portraits, mostly colored, and thirteen plates illustrative of Napoleon's life.

A rare old English work is the first edition of "A Paraenisis to the Prince," by William Alexander, Earl of Sterling, quarto, London, 1604, in binding by Riviere. Another English rarity is "The Right Pleasaunt and Goodly Historie of the Foure Sonnes of Aimon," printed by William Copland in 1554. It came from the Jersey library, was afterwards owned by William Morris, and is said to be the only perfect copy offered for sale for nearly a century. It is in binding by Riviere. Extremely rare also is a copy of the second edition of "The Garden of the Muses," by John Bodenham, London, 1610.

Scarce, too, is a first edition of Richard Brathwaite's "Nature's Embassie, or The Wilde-Man's Measures," London, 1621; "M. T. Cicero's Cato Major, or His Discourse of Old Age," Philadelphia, 1744, "Printed and Sold by B. Franklin," was considered by Franklin the finest production of his press. A first edition of "Letters to Several Persons of Honour," by John Donne, London, 1651, contains a rare frontispiece portrait of the author by Lombart.

Contained in two volumes is a valuable collection of original dispatches and letters of General U. S. Grant.

Of Homer there are the editio princeps, Florence, 1488, of the Iliad and Odyssey, and the first complete edition of George Chapman's English translation, printed in London in 1611 or 1612 by Richard Field. A copy of the "Hours," manuscript on vellum, is of the fifteenth century. A fine clean copy of the first edition of Washington Irving's "History of New York" has the folding frontispiece, "View of New Amsterdam, 1640," which is seldom found. An extra-illustrated first edition of the same author's "Life of George Washington" contains autograph letters of Washington Irving, George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, and others; the original document of a war council held by Washington and signed by him, Gates, Kosciusko and others, and Washington Irving's original manuscript for Chapter 32 of the "Life of Washington." A note-book in the handwriting of Irving contains extracts and notes from various books of prose and verse.

George Keith's "Truth Advanced in the Correction of Many Gross and Hurtful Errors," quarto, 1694, is one of the first books printed in New York City. The "Imitatio Christi," by Thomas à Kempis, circa 1471, is an uncommonly fine and tall copy of the first edition. An exceedingly scarce little volume is Rudyard Kipling's "Schoolboy Lyrics," printed at Lahore in 1881. Interesting Keats, Charles Lamb, Dryden, Nelson, Defoe, Milton and other items are also offered.

"Institutio Principis," by Harduino de Perefixe de Beaumont, Paris, 1647, is King Louis XIV.'s copy, and is one of the choicest specimens from his library that has been preserved. An extremely rare twelfth century manuscript of the Gospels on vellum is written in the ancient Armenian language. "La Navigation: Poeme," by J. Esmenard, Paris, 1806, is Napoleon I.'s own copy, with his autograph on fly leaf.

One of the most noteworthy items in the library is the Daly-Borden collection of views of New York City in twelve folio volumes. These views consist of 1,243 maps, original drawings, lithographs in color and broadsides, many of them rare. These and the plates in the extra-illustrated "Life of Washington" have been catalogued by Robert Fridenberg. A fine John Ruskin manuscript is his "Notes by Mr. Ruskin on Samuel Prout and William Hunt."

$266 FOR BURTON EDITION OF "ARABIAN NIGHTS."

SALE OF ROBERTS LIBRARY DEVELOPS INTERESTING PRICES.

THE private library of the late Dr. O. S. Roberts was sold by the Merwin Sales Company last week, Friday, in two sessions. G. Weiss and Mr. Sessler, of Philadelphia, were the heaviest buyers.

The top price was $266, paid by Mr. Weiss for the Burton edition of the "Arabian Nights," that was privately printed in Benares, India, in 1855-58. No illustrations appeared with the edition, but this copy has been embellished with 368 plates, including twenty-one full-page etchings by Lalauze.

Mr. Weiss paid $155 for the manuscript edition of Thoreau's works, printed by Houghton Mifflin & Co., 1906; $50 for the Temple edition of Thackeray, by Dent & Co., 1904; $200 for Amateurs edition of Shakespeare, Estes & Co., 1900; $152 for the autograph edition of Richardson, Crosscup & Sterling Company, 1901; and $100 for the memorial edition of Ingersoll, Dresden Publishing Company, 1902.

Mr. Sessler paid $200 for the "Secret Memoirs of the Courts of Europe," printed by Barrie & Son, of Philadelphia; $50 for the same publishers' "History of America"; $175 for a Japan paper edition of Poe, with a Poe manuscript inserted; $151 for the autograph edition of Scott; and $60 for the Constable edition of Field, 1898.

THE HARVARD UNIVERSITY PRESS.

THE president and fellows of Harvard College voted, on January 27, to establish the Harvard University Press, for the publication of works of a high scholarly character. For some years the University Publication Office, besides printing the catalogues, department pamphlets, and other official documents, has found it possible, in spite of its limited resources, to issue, from time to time, a few special works, until it now publishes seven periodicals and more than eighty books, ranging from treaties on Indic philology to practical directions for American lumbermen. To organize and extend this activity, so as to make the university properly effective as a publishing center for scholarly books, is the object of the new foundation.

The Harvard University Press, though so recently established, is able to announce several noteworthy volumes as in preparation, including books by the late Professor James Barr Ames, of the Law School, and by Professors George Foot Moore, Eugene Wambaugh, Arthur E. Kennelly, George L. Kittredge, Charles H. Haskins, George A. Reisner and W. B. Munro. Most of these will appear in a short time.

The board of syndics who will decide on the books to be published by the new Press are Robert Bacon, fellow of Harvard College, chairman; George Foot Moore, professor of the history of religion; Arthur E. Kennelly, professor of electrical engineering; George L. Kittredge, professor of English; Charles H. Thurber, member of the firm of Ginn & Co.; Edwin F. Gay, professor of economics and dean of the Graduate School of Business Administration; and W. B. Cannon, professor of physiology. The director of the Press is Charles Chester Lane, for the last five years publication agent of the university.

The establishment of the Harvard University Press recalls the fact that the first printing press in America was a gift to Harvard College in 1639, and was set up in the house of President Dunster. Among other important books which were printed on it were the Bay Psalm Book and John Eliot's Indian Bible.

GENERAL BOOK TARIFF WILL PROBABLY REMAIN UNCHANGED.

PRESENT indications are that the existing 25 per cent. tariff duty on books will remain unchanged by the proposed tariff revision which the new national administration has already under way.

Hearings upon Schedules "M," pulp, paper and books, were held by the Congressional committee on January 17. Emphatic protest was registered against the retention of the present duty on pulp and paper, John Norris, of New York, chairman of the committee on paper of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, being the chief protestant. Arthur C. Hastings, of New York, president of the American Paper and Pulp Association, made equally emphatic protest against change. The Washington feeling is that Congress "does not really desire to reduce pulp and paper rates, but that the position of the newspapers to make trouble if opposed is only too well realized.".

R. E. Magill, secretary of the Presbyterian committee on publication, was present to register a protest against the retention of the present duty on Bibles and other religious works. It is said to be not improbable that these may be put on the free list.

James L. Feeney, of New York, representing the International Brotherhood of Bookbinders, asked that the provision in the present tariff law admitting books printed over twenty years ago free of duty be amended to provide that the books admitted free must also have been bound twenty years ago. Mr. Feeney said that ten years ago 1000 men were employed in "art binderies" in the city of New York, and that to-day but 200 were employed. He credited this condition to the practice of sending old books abroad to be rebound by "cheap foreign labor" and reimporting them free.

RIGHTS IN UNPUBLISHED MANUSCRIPT.

SEVERAL INTERESTING POINTS COME UP IN A CANADIAN LAWSUIT.

TORONTO, Jan. 11.

A LAWSUIT of considerable interest to both publishers and authors has just been decided by the High Court of Justice of Ontario. In effect, the case is a sequel to an earlier case which was fully reported in the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY of October 28, 1911. Briefly, an author, Dr. W. D. LeSueur, of Ottawa, was invited to prepare a life of William Lyon Mackenzie for the "Makers of Canada" series, published by Morang & Company. Through the courtesy of the Mackenzie family, he was allowed access to a collection of papers and documents left by Mackenzie and, with the assistance of this material, compiled his biography. When his manuscript was submitted, however, it was found that he had taken such a prejudiced view of the subject that it was deemed inadvisable to publish his work in the series, and another life was prepared in its place.

Doubtless influenced by the Mackenzie family, Morang & Company refused to return the manuscript to Dr. LeSueur. The latter sent back the money which had been paid him in the first instance and brought suit against the publishers for the recovery of his property. The case was carried from court to court and was finally decided in favor of the plaintiff by the Supreme Court of Canada in October, 1911. The Court directed that Morang & Company should forthwith hand over the manuscript to the author.

Following the return of the manuscript Mr. G. G. S. Lindsey, grandson of Mackenzie and custodian of his papers, took steps to prevent its publication by Dr. LeSueur. He brought suit against him to compel him to deliver up all extracts from and copies of any manuscripts, books, papers, writings, and documents of every kind, obtained from the Mackenzie collection and to restrain him from publishing them or causing them to be published. This case has just been heard and judgment in favor of the plaintiff delivered on January 9.

"It seems to me clear," said Mr. Justice Britton in rendering his decision, "that the plaintiff (Lindsey) and the late Charles Lindsey (plaintiff's father) supposed that the defendant (LeSueur) intended to write of William Lyon Mackenzie as one of the men in Canadian history who can fairly be called, speaking colloquially, as one of the 'Makers of Canada.' The conduct of the defendant and what he said warranted the plaintiff and Charles Lindsey in so thinking. I must find as a fact, that the defendant gave the plaintiff and Charles Lindsey to understand that the views and feelings of the defendant towards Mackenzie were friendly and that his attitude in presenting Mackenzie to the public was a fair one, that he had no bias against Mackenzie, and that he had no feeling or opinion which would prevent him, as a writer, from truly presenting the facts and circumstances of Mackenzie's life and character. The defendant, in my opinion, intended that the plaintiff and Charles Lindsey should believe as they did in reference to defendant's feeling and attitude.

"At the time of defendant's arrangement with the plaintiff, the defendant did hold strong views against Mackenzie. At that time the defendant intended to write the life of Mackenzie on other than conventional lines. He intended to write of Mackenzie, not as one of the 'Makers of Canada,' but as a 'puller-down,' as was stated during the trial.

"I am of the opinion, upon the evidence, that the defendant made use of the Mackenzie collection of books and papers other than was in accord with the understanding between him and the plaintiff and Charles Lindsey. The use was made contrary to the wish, and contrary to what was known to be the wish, of the plaintiff's father. It is inconceivable upon the facts that either Charles Lindsey or the plaintiff would have permitted access to the Mackenzie papers had either known or supposed that such manuscript as the defendant produced would have resulted. It is plain to me that the defendant knew that he could not have obtained access to the collection had he revealed his true feelings or declared his real intention.

"No question of copyright is involved. It is a question of getting access to the house of another and using the property therein for personal purposes, different to what was consented to by the owner."

W. A. C.

A SMALL CITY BOOKSTORE WITH A SIXTY-FOUR-YEAR RECORD.

When John Sterling, the Watertown, N. Y., bookseller and stationer, moves his store from its present quarters in the Y. M. C. A. Building to the Sherman Block, in Washington Street, it will be the second time in sixty-four years that the store has been moved.

When the Sterling firm first started in business, nearly three-quarters of a century ago, it occupied a store in the Paddock Arcade. When the owners later desired the store for their own use, Mr. Sterling's father moved to the Y. M. C. A. Block. The move was against the advice of friends, so Mr. Sterling said, as many firms had failed in the newer location. Mr. Sterling replied that he would endeavor to disprove the prevailing notion, and he succeeded. The firm is now one of the oldest, if not the oldest, doing business in the center of Watertown.

The Watertown Y. M. C. A. are now to tear down their old building to make way for a new $250,000 one. Mr. Sterling is to have a store in the new building when it is ready, and, meantime, has taken a store three doors away; and, to take no chances, on a two-years' lease.

COURSES IN JOURNALISM AT NEW YORK UNIVERSITY.

The New York University School of Commerce and Finance offers the following evening courses in journalism this winter:

6a. Newspaper Making. — Fridays, 6-7.45 p.m.

The organization and methods of the modern newspaper are studied in this course. Lectures and discussions of the duties of the managing editor, the city editor, the telegraph editor, the Sunday editor, the newspaper correspondent, etc.

Lectures and discussions of the various problems connected with the special feature work of the modern magazine, the newspaper supplement, and the literary weekly.

ADVERTISING RECORDS OF 1912.

Last week's issue of Printers' Ink was an annual review number. According to its statistical summaries, the Cosmopolitan headed the list of general magazines in lines of advertising carried. In 1910 and 1911, it had stood second to Everybody's. Second place this year went to an outsider, Sunset. The figures for the ten leaders are:

Cosmopolitan	484,686
Sunset	378,454
Review of Reviews	320,640
Everybody's	302,076
McClure's	267,193
World's Work	261,689
Scribner's	205,795
Munsey's	203,590

Digitized by Google

American	194,265
Harper's Monthly	181,726

The total advertising carried during the year by all the twenty-one representative general magazines listed was 4,761,997 lines, almost exactly the same as 1911, but considerably below 1910.

The ten first women's magazines in advertising patronage were:

Vogue	747,765
Ladies' Home Journal	344,140
Woman's Home Companion	294,873
Good Housekeeping	286,125
Delineator	249,004
Woman's Magazine	220,677
Designer	220,385
Pictorial Review	188,750
Modern Priscilla	171,217
Ladies' World	160,730

Here the totals fell below both 1910 and 1911.

The largest advertisement carriers among the class and special magazines were:

Motor	963,312
Motor Boating	474,901
Country Life in America	468,422
System	404,480
Architectural Record	328,832
Popular Mechanics	297,614
Suburban Life	177,523
Outing	172,311
House Beautiful	162,418
House and Garden	151,337

This class of periodicals showed largely increased totals over both 1910 and 1911.

For the weekly general magazines, the figures ran:

Saturday Evening Post	1,177,329
Town and Country	661,315
Collier's	634,898
Literary Digest	553,911
Outlook	410,752
Life	390,135
Leslie's Weekly	270,715
Independent	261,282
Scientific American	246,958
Christian Herald	240,,997

Here again totals for the class showed increases over both 1910 and 1911. In other words, weeklies seem to be tending to displace monthlies as general advertising mediums.

PLATT & PECK MOVE.

PLATT & PECK are moving from their former offices at 395 Broadway to new and larger quarters at 354 Fourth Avenue, New York City.

TRADE ASSOCIATIONS.

BOOKSELLERS' LEAGUE.

THE fourth in the series of Booksellers' League trade lectures was given at the Liberal Club last Tuesday noon. Daniel Nye, of Doubleday, Page & Company, being the speaker. His paper is reprinted elsewhere in this issue of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY. The two months' break in the lectures had affected the attendance, but interest was keen, and the lively discussion that followed the formal lecture was most informing.

BOOKSELLERS' ASSOCIATION OF PHILADELPHIA.

THE regular monthly dinner of the Booksellers' Association of Philadelphia was held at the Franklin Inn Club, Friday evening, January 24. The speakers were Warren Snyder, of the John Wanamaker store, whose subject was "Rambles Among London Bookshops"; William M. Bains, who gave some interesting recollections of Philadelphia booksellers; and Stan V. Henkels, who talked about "Book Sharks." Mr. Snyder's paper is quoted from elsewhere in this issue of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, and Mr. Bains' will be reprinted in a forthcoming number.

OBITUARY NOTES.

BY an error, the obituary notice of Harry Peyton Steger, in the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY for January 11, stated that he was born in 1876. The date should have been 1882.

RICHMOND SEELEY, of the English publishing firm of Seeley, Service & Co., died at Epsom, January 9, in his eightieth year. The second son of Robert Benton Seeley, and an elder brother of the late Sir John Seeley, he succeeded in 1857 to his father's share in a business which had originally been founded in the city by his grandfather about 1784. Of wide reading, no small attainments, and much native modesty, Mr. Seeley worthily carried on the high traditions of his family business, which, under the influence of his father, had acquired a strong tone of evangelical churchmanship. Mr. Seeley took a particular interest in the processes of illustration and the application of photography for the purpose of reproducing pictures and designs, and he developed his business strongly on these lines. One of his earlier ventures in this direction, which met with great success and well known on this side, was a series he promoted in conjunction with the late Professor A. J. Church, his cousin on his mother's side, of stories from classical writers with designs from Flaxman, colored after the manner of the paintings on Greek vases.

COPYRIGHT NOTES.

"PARSIFAL" COPYRIGHT.

ACCORDING to a Berlin dispatch Crown Prince Frederick William heads the list of signers of a petition which has been presented to the Reichstag asking for the enactment of a special law to extend the copyright of Richard Wagner's opera "Parsifal," which expires this year.

COPYRIGHT IN THE SOUTH AFRICAN UNION.

THE committee appointed to bring about the uniform regulation of Copyright in the South African Unions lately published its first draft.

It contains regulations mainly identical with those of the British Imperial Copyright law; one deviation is found in the provision for voluntary registration, which will serve to prevent a plea of ignorance and good faith by the infringers.

COMMUNICATIONS.

POST OFFICE TRACERS.

To the Editor of The Publishers' Weekly.

SUPPLEMENTARY to the query of Mr. W. B. Clarke concerning the non-delivery of correctly addressed parcels, I should like to ask if any dealer ever has had returned to him by the post office a parcel in search of which he has sent out a "tracer," filling one of those cyclopedic forms provided by the department.

New York City. EDWIN C. WALKER.

POSTAL MATTERS.

BOOKS TO BE ADMITTED TO PARCELS POST.

ACCORDING to a newspaper report, given some currency, Postmaster-General Hitchcock will, within the next few days, by executive order, materially change the present parcel post rates and classifications. Books will probably be admitted at the new rates, and there will undoubtedly be a reduction of charges on other articles on the longer distances. It is known that the Postmaster-General hopes, before his term expires, on the 4th of March, to have greatly extended the benefits of the parcel post system. Under the act of last August, he has the power to enlarge the field almost arbitrarily.

PERIODICAL NOTES.

THE Harmsworth papers of London report profits for 1912 of $1,316,415.

THE Constructive Quarterly, "a new journal of the faith and work and thought of Christendom," will make its appearance March 1, published by George H. Doran Co. Silas McBee is the editor. Among the contributors to the first number are Wilfrid Ward, Prof. Friedrich Loofs, Shailer Mathews, Bishop F. J. McConnell, and Prof. W. L. Bevan.

THE Century Syndicate announces the publication of a new Sunday newspaper section of eight pages, printed in four colors and entirely "devoted" to children. The principal feature of the section will be the "Tarryvale Town" series by Raymond Perry, a full-page pictorial serial, and Dan Beard will contribute a regular department, "Talks with the Boys," weekly. The publishing company is now under contract to furnish the sections to the following papers: New York Sun, Philadelphia Record, Boston Herald, Buffalo News, Pittsburgh Leader and Chicago Inter-Ocean.

THE New York Evening Post, beginning February 8, will start the publication on Saturdays of an illustrated magazine, a periodical of sixteen pages, the outside to be in colors. This magazine will be part of the regular Saturday issue of the Post, which will thereafter sell for five cents a copy, and the new section will not be sold separately. Its cover designs will include the work of leading American artists. The Evening Post Saturday Magazine will not be syndicated to other newspapers. It will be the exclusive property of the New York Evening Post, and its entire contents will be protected by copyright. Henry Edward Rood, for ten years a member of the editorial staff of Harper's Magazine, will be responsible for the editorial conduct of the new venture, and Charles Edwin Jones, for several years with Munsey, will be advertising manager.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

GEORGE HAVEN PUTNAM returned from Europe last Wednesday.

"SEVEN KEYS TO BALDPATE," by Earl Derr Biggers, is announced by the Bobbs-Merrill Company.

JOHN MURPHY COMPANY call attention to the gift-book possibilities of their Catholic prayer books and Bibles at the Easter season.

"CHILD OF STORM," a new novel by Sir Rider Haggard, is just announced by Longmans.

"V. V.'s EYES" is the title of the new novel by Henry S. Harrison, author of "Queed." Houghton Mifflin Co. will publish the book shortly.

"THE POOR LITTLE RICH GIRL," dramatized from Eleanor Gates' book of the same title (Duffield), is having a most successful run at the Hudson Theatre, New York City.

A. H. CLAPP is now with the H. S. Crocker Co., successors to Cunningham, Curtiss & Welch, assisting Mr. Fassett, head of the book department.

E. P. DUTTON & Co. have in preparation a volume in the Channels of Literature Series, edited by Oliphant Smeaton—"The English Novel," by Prof. George Saintsbury.

PROFESSOR FRASER and Professor Squair, authors of the well-known French grammar, have prepared a "Shorter French Course," which is about to be issued by D. C. Heath & Company.

THE Fowler family and their kin will be interested in a genealogy just published by The Biblio, Kansas City, of which H. Alfred Fowler is editor. The work is called "Fowler Family; an Incomplete Genealogy of a Branch Thereof."

EARLY this spring, Doubleday, Page & Co. will publish a novel by A. M. Chisholm, the young Canadian writer, author of "The Boss of Wind River." Mr. Chisholm calls his new story "Precious Waters." It is said to have for its theme the great irrigation problem.

THE new Chicago publishers, F. G. Browne & Co., have ready fourteen volumes of The Regent Library, a series of autobiographical works covering the standard authors. The books are by well-known writers, and are especially adapted for use in schools.

DANA ESTES & COMPANY will publish early in February a new work of fiction by J. S. Fletcher, author of "The Town of Crooked Ways," "Paths of the Prudent," etc., entitled "The Fine Air of the Morning."

"THE PENALTY," the first novel by the short-story writer, Gouverneur Morris, will be published by Charles Scribner's Sons in March. It has a great many illustrations, full-page and double-page, by Howard Chandler Christie.

THE circumstances under which some of our familiar hymns were written, stories about the writers, and other interesting items are given in "Short Stories of the Hymns," by Henry M. Kiefer, published by Steinman & Foltz, of Lancaster, Pa.

W. J. WATT & COMPANY announce for publication, about February 10, a new novel by Frederic Arnold Kummer, "A Song of Sixpence," the life-story of a girl brought up to believe that physical beauty is a woman's greatest asset in the struggle for existence.

THE BOOK SUPPLY CO. announce that they will publish no new work by Harold Bell Wright during the present year. Their efforts will be used in pushing to still larger sales their latest great successes—"The Winning of Barbara Worth" and "Their Yesterdays."

HENRY C. ROWLAND, popular with the readers of the Saturday Evening Post, is the author of "The Apple of Discord," a story of a summer colony, three delightful girls and one fascinating man, written somewhat in the style of Robert W. Chambers' shorter books. Dodd, Mead & Co. are the publishers.

CHINA'S most mystical book, "The Tao-Teh-King," is the subject of a commentary by C. H. A. Bjerregaard—the first work of its kind. Several English and German translations of this work, almost unknown fifteen years ago, are now on the market. "The Inner Life and the Tao-Teh-King" is published by the Theosophical Publishing Co.

IN "Sally Castleton, Southerner," by Crittenden Marriott, the principal characters are Sally Castleton, the lovely daughter of a Confederate general, and Frank Radcliffe, a Northern spy, who penetrates the Southern lines on a dangerous mission. Under peculiar circumstances, Sally becomes the captor of Frank. The J. B. Lippincott Co. are the publishers.

AFTER she wrote "To M. L. G.," she retired to Granada, that mysterious author; and there, we are assured, the story finished itself outside the book, ending in the author's wedding on October 8. Now another novel from the same pen is to be given us—this time a story of Granada, and entitled "The Life Mask." The Frederick A. Stokes Co. promise the book for February 20.

STANLEY PAUL & Co., of London, are about to publish a Votes for Women Six-shilling Novel Series. The first story of the series will be "The Poodle-Woman," by Annesley Kenealy, which gives a picture of the repression of a woman's talents and faculties, and the destruction of her happiness by a man who takes advantage of the power conferred on husbands by the laws of marriage and divorce.

THOUGH Kathleen Norris has become most widely known through her two novels—"Mother" and "The Rich Mrs. Burgoyne"—it was, as is so frequently the case, through the short story field that she entered the ranks of fictionists. "Poor Dear Margaret Kirby, and Other Stories," published by Macmillan this week, is a collection of tales from her pen—tales of sentiment, of purpose and humor.

FOUR novels are promised for February by D. Appleton & Co.: "The Lost Despatch," a romance of the secret service in the Civil War, by Natalie Sumner Lincoln; and "Windyridge," by W. Riley, a quaint tale of an English village, will be published February 14. A week later, Robert W. Chambers' "The Gay Rebellion," a merry tale on the militant suffragists, and Edith Barnard Delano's "The Land of Content" will appear.

AMONG modern fiction writers, perhaps there is none who has passed through more of the experiences he describes in his books than has Ridgwell Cullum. Now comes word that Mr. Cullum has written a new tale reflecting another phase of his life—cattle-ranching. This occupation he followed for some three years, and the new story, "The Night Riders," depicts in vivid style some of his most exciting experiences in that capacity.

ARTHUR F. BIRD, London, has secured from the Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Co. the right to bring out an English edition of Maud Howard Peterson's "The Sanctuary." This book, already in its fourth edition, has proved itself popular in many sections of the English-speaking world. A third edition has just been ordered for Canada by McLeod & Allen, Toronto, and there have been very heavy orders for Australia. Even the Sandwich Islands are ordering freely.

HENRY HOLT & COMPANY will follow up George Herbert Perris' "Germany and the German Emperor," issued November 7, with Henri Lichtenberger's "The Evolution of Modern Germany," to appear February 15. This account of the Fatherland by a Frenchman is more sympathetic than one might at first suppose, and vividly treats the gradual transformation of Germany during the nineteenth century from a patriarchal feudal country into an individualistic capitalistic one.

LOUIS TRACY'S first American story, "One Wonderful Night," a rapid-fire mystery romance, with the scene laid in New York, the entire action of the story covering a period of twelve hours, is announced by Clode. On the list of the same house are "No Other Way," a detective story, by Gordon Holmes; "Mark," by Frances Newbold Noyes; "The Girl of the Golden Gate," by William B. Me-loney; and "The Enchanting Mysteries of Kathleen Carter," by Pierre Leclercq.

"THE LAND OF THE NEW GUINEA PYGMIES" is shortly to be issued by Seeley, Service & Co., of England. The author, Capt. Rawling, was the leader of the British expedition to Dutch New Guinea, sent out under the auspices of several learned societies to obtain geographical information and collect specimens of the fauna and flora of the land. His account of the discovery of a pygmy race will be, perhaps, the most interesting part of his book, which will include numerous illustrations taken by him and his friends.

INCLUDED in Stokes' spring list are the following titles—Fiction: "The Declension of Henry D'Albiac," by V. Goldie; "The White Thread," by Robert Halifax; "The Sixty-first Second," by Owen Johnson; "Roast Beef Medium," by Edna Ferber; "The Kingdom," by Harold Elsdale Goad; and "The Dream Ship," by Cynthia Stockley. Miscellaneous: "Complete Poems" and "Tales of the Mermaid Tavern," by Alfred Noyes; "A Guide to the Montessori Method," by Ellen Yale Stevens; and "Pedagogical Anthropology," by Maria Montessori.

E. J. HARRISON, author of "The Fighting Spirit of Japan," a Scribner importation for the month, has resided in Japan for the last fourteen years. The present volume, as he explains in a preface, is a result of certain studies during that period along lines which have not heretofore been open to the inquisitive foreigner. Thus, Mr. Harrison claims that he has here brought together "material as yet new to the Western reading public," special circumstances having put him in the way of making certain discoveries as to "the occult aspects of Japanese military arts."

"FUNDAMENTAL POLITICS—Rights of Citizenship" (Warne), a survey of the safeguards of the people, describing the evolution of various constitutions, consists of a series of articles by Rt. Hon. Sir William R. Anson, Prof. A. V. Dicey, and Rt. Hon. Sir R. Finlay, with a preface by the Marquess of Lansdown. The same house publishes "Money Making Art," a practical work on sketching, line drawing, color drawing, etc. "Against Home Rule; the Case for the Union," a Warne publication in its fortieth thousand, is of especial interest as a symposium of the opinions of leaders in the great controversy.

DELLA CAMPBELL MACLEOD, a Southern newspaper woman, now living in New York, has written for publication, in February, a romance with a Southern setting, called "The Maiden Manifest" (Little, Brown & Co.). As the story runs, an impressionable young man, while looking at a blue frock hanging in a Fifth Avenue cleaner's window, suddenly has a vision of its fair owner. The vision recurs at intervals, and so ensnares the young man's heart that he resolves to find this fascinating, tantalizing "Dream Girl," as he comes to call her. Thereupon begins his quest, which leads him into a web of difficulties and sadly upsets his order of life. This is Miss MacLeod's first novel.

THE following books are soon to be published by the Putnams: "Rahel Varnhagen," by Ellen Key, translated by A. G. Chater, with an introduction by Havelock Ellis; "Bible Reading in the Early Church," by Adolf Harnack, translated by the Rev. J. R. Wilkinson; and "The Story of the Borgias," by John Fyvie. Several Cambridge books are forthcoming, among them: "Ancient Babylonia," by C. H. W. Johns; "L'Invasion ou le Fou Yégof," by Erckmann-Chatrian, edited, with notes and vocabulary, by A. Wilson-Green; Dryden's "Preface to the Fables," edited by W. H. Williams; Plato's "Ion," with introduction and notes by J. M. MacGregor; "Forfarshire," by Easton S. Valentine; "Key to the Exercises in English Composition," by W. Murison; and "Cambridge University Law Tripos Papers (1907-1911)."

RECENT Doran publications include "Bunch Grass," by Horace Annesley Vachell, a series of pictures of a California cattle ranch of thirty years ago; "The Private Life of Henry Maitland," by Morley Roberts, the story under a thin veil of disguise of the tragic career of one of the premier novelists of the English school of realism; "Modern Problems," by Sir Oliver Lodge; "In the Case of Oscar Slater," by Sir A. Conan Doyle, who has applied the great detective's methods to the case of a man, recently condemned to death in England, whom he feels to have been wrongly convicted; "The Blindness of Virtue," by Cosmo Hamilton, the play which has created so much interest in New York and Chicago, as well as in London, dealing with the dangers of keeping young people in ignorance of the great facts of life; and "The Elements of Child Study," by William Walter Smith, an up-to-date text-book on child training, valuable to superintendents, teachers and officers in the Sunday school.

BIBLIOGRAPHIC NOTES.

THE librarian of Columbia University has in preparation a bibliography of American college verse, and would be glad to receive information regarding printed collections of this class, especially those of early date and those printed in the smaller college communities.

A. & C. BLACK in England, Macmillan in this country, announce a new reference handbook, "Books that Count," being a dictionary of standard books, edited by W. Forbes Gray, and uniform with "Who's Who" in binding, format and style. It is, in scope and purpose, practically an English rendering on a smaller scale of the well-known "A. L. A. Catalog of 8000 Volumes for a Popular Library," viz., a select, classified annotated bibliography of the most important books in print. Intended for the general reader, rather than the specialist, erudite and expensive books are alike excluded. It will sell for $1.50 net, and should be of value to librarian and bookseller alike.

Weekly Record of New Publications

The entry is transcribed from title page when the book is sent by publisher for record. Books received, unless of minor importance, are given descriptive annotation. Prices are added except when not supplied by publisher or obtainable only on specific request. The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. c. indicates that the book is copyrighted; if the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Where not specified the binding is cloth.

A colon after initial designates the most usual given name, as: A: Augustus; B: Benjamin; C: Charles; D: David; E: Edward; F: Frederick; G: George; H: Henry; I: Isaac; J: John; L: Louis; N: Nicholas; P: Peter; R: Richard; S: Samuel; T: Thomas; W: William.

Sizes are indicated as follows: F. (folio: over 30 centimeters high); Q. (4to: under 30 cm.); O. (8vo: 25 cm.); D. (12mo: 20 cm.); S. (16mo: 17½ cm.); T. (24mo: 15 cm.); Tl. (32mo: 12½ cm.); Fe. (48mo: 10 cm.). Sq., obl., nar., designate square, oblong, narrow. For books not received sizes are given in Roman numerals, 4°, 8°, etc.

Adams, J: Quincy. Writings of John Quincy Adams; ed. by Worthington Chauncey Ford. v. 1, 1779-1796. N. Y., Macmillan. 24+508 p. front. O. $3.50 n.

Selected from public and private correspondence, with intent to include what is of lasting historical value, and is needful for comprehending the writer.

Alexander, Miriam. The port of dreams. N. Y., Putnam. c. '12. 6+410 p. D. $1.35 n.

By the author of the prize story "Beyond the law." Tale is concerned with the Jacobite cause and its Irish supporters. John Clavering had served the Stewarts for thirty years with courage and ability, only to fail on three critical occasions, overcome by cowardice. There had been cowards before in his family, but he had always held fear at bay, and his overwhelming shame, the influence of his failures on the cause and his friends amid stirring adventures make an interesting story.

Amundsen, Roald Engelbregt Gravning. The South Pole; an account of the Norwegian Antarctic expedition in the "Fram," 1910-1912; tr. from the Norwegian by A. G. Chater; with maps and numerous illustrations. N. Y., L. Keedick. 2 v., fronts. pls. (1 fold.) pors. maps, (fold.) facsims., diagrs. $10.

Begins with a brief summary of Antarctic exploration, followed by an account of the preparations. Then the reader embarks with the expedition and follows its experiences day by day from Norway to Madeira, thence to the Antarctic, where Amundsen makes his dash south, Lieut. Prestrud explores the barrier to King Edward VII. Land and Lieut. Nilsen takes the "Fram" away to examine the ocean depths. The "Fram" met both the "Terra Nova" of Captain Scott's expedition and the Japanese Antarctic party, and while they addressed each other politely they had very little to do with one another. The book is illustrated with many interesting photographs and with serviceable maps. In the appendix the scientific results obtained are summarized. Index.

Ibsen, Sigurd. Human quintessence; authorized tr. by Marcia Hargis Janson. N. Y., Huebsch. c. '11, '12. 303 p. D. $1.50 n.
Author is son of Henrik Ibsen. Book is divided into four related essays. The first, "Nature and man," discloses the means by which mankind's capacity for self improvement is to be rationally developed. The factor which determines the best fitted to survive is "human quintessence." Second section, "Why politics lags behind,' is an attempt to solve the question why, when industrial, æsthetic and scientific activities are ruled by a spirit of progress the field of political and sociologic efficiency is largely abandoned to hazard. "Of human aptitudes and human art" is a recapitulation of the possibilities lying latent in us all. "Of great men: an essay in valuation," author makes clear that the really great man is a combination of forces.

Macaulay, R. The lee shore. N. Y., Doran. c. '12. 6+308 p. D. $1.25 n.
Novel won first prize in the $5000 Prize Novel Award made by Hodder & Stoughton. Story of a man determined to be happy. An aristocrat by birth and training, a vagabond by nature, Peter Margerison preferred the chance-met adventurers of the highroad to more normal and well-regulated persons. He rebelled against conventions, and fled from cities to the freedom of the road, his "lee shore." Tale is full of lovable men and women, an atmosphere of holiday care-freeness, and sun-bathed landscapes of Italy's coast towns.

McDonald, Ronald. Lanchester of Brazenoze. N. Y., J: Lane. c. 397 p. D. $1.30, fixed.
Raymond Lanchester is a modern knight of chivalry, who, in loyalty to an unfaithful wife and for love of his little son, takes upon his own shoulders the burden of another's crime. The clever amateur detective work of his young actress friend, "Divvy-Di," brings to light a writer of anonymous letters who is spreading misery far and wide. The story ends with the reconciliation of friends long parted and the well-earned happiness of Lanchester and "Divvy-Di."

Author makes a searching inquiry into the vestiges of primitive art left by palæolithic and by neolithic man and into the crude beginnings of some of the great art movements of antiquity. Petroglyphs and pictographs that have been preserved under shelving rocks or enshrined in multi-millennial caves are brought into the clear light of day. Inscriptions on ivory and bone, the decorations of pottery, the incised drawings on metal utensils, sculpture in relief and in the round are drawn upon as significant landmarks in the early history of artistic development. Book is a comprehensive account of the graphic and plastic arts from the animal talismans of the reindeer men to the first gropings of the Greeks. Index.

Stevenson, G: Topham's folly. N. Y., J: Lane. c. 305 p. D. $1.30, fixed.

Topham, a tyrannical man of business, builds an elaborate house, but his money gives out before it is finished. An opportunity presents itself by which he appropriates the fortune of some people who ask him to investigate their claims. Disaster comes upon the unlucky possessors of the money, but Topham never suffers the exposure he deserves, because he dies before his crime is discovered. Mary Ann, a servant in the Topham household, is the means of bringing content and peace into the lives of the family. Book is made up of incidents in careers of the various Tophams, seen largely through Mary Ann's eyes.

Stringer, Arth. J: Arbuthnott. The shadow. N. Y., Century Co. c. 302 p. D. $1.25 n.

Takes a detective on a zig-zag chase around the world in pursuit of one Binhart, wanted for forgery. Starting from the New York police headquarters he follows a false trail through Canada, south then west across the United States, where his quarry eludes him by taking a trans-Pacific steamship. The detective follows him to Honolulu, to Hongkong, to Macao, where he catches up only to lose his man. Scenting the trail again the detective follows it through India, through the Suez Canal and the Mediterranean to Corfu, to Naples and Marseilles. Still two days behind he follows him to South America and a fever stricken trail that leads to Costa Rica, where for the second time he lands the fugitive and again loses him. Pursuit finally ends in New York.

Is Easily and Quickly Mastered by the
LANGUAGE-PHONE METHOD
Rosenthal Method of Practical Linguistry

This is the natural way to learn a foreign language. You hear the living voice of a native Professor pronounce each word and phrase. He speaks as you desire—slowly or quickly, night or day, for minutes or hours at a time. It is a pleasant, fascinating study; no tedious rules or memorizing. It is not expensive—all members of the family can use it. You simply practice during spare moments or at convenient times, and in a surprisingly short time you speak, read and understand a new language.

THE CLIQUE

The Recognised Organ of the ANTIQUARIAN BOOK TRADE

This "unique paper" was founded for the benefit of the ANTIQUARIAN BOOK TRADE in 1890; and so marked has been its success that no bookseller of any standing can now afford to be without it.

The paper is issued every Saturday, and supplied to the Trade only. This unique feature renders it the ONLY paper published in Great Britain in which trade prices can be fearlessly advertised, and it is thus the BEST MEDIUM for wholesale houses who desire to appeal direct to the trade.

As a means of obtaining "BOOKS WANTED" its columns have long been recognised, not only here but abroad, as the MOST SUCCESSFUL which have ever been placed at the service of advertisers. It is received and read by every ANTIQUARIAN BOOKSELLER in the United Kingdom and the chief houses abroad.

SUBSCRIPTION, 8s. 8d. PER ANNUM. Subscriptions end at December 31st. Subscribers joining after January 1st should therefore deduct 2d. for each week that has passed. Any "live" bookseller can make the subscription out of the first number he receives.

SPECIMEN NUMBER GRATIS on receipt of trade card.

Our terms for advertisements are lower, notwithstanding that we stand FIRST among Antiquarian Book-trade organs, than those of any paper in the world.

THE CLIQUE is the official organ of the International Association of Antiquarian Booksellers.

Reference List of New Publications

Recorded in JANUARY, 1913

This Reference List enters the books recorded during the month under (1) author, in Clarendon type, anonymous books having Clarendon type for the first word; (2) title in Roman; (3) subject-heading in SMALL CAPS; (4) name of series in Italics.

A colon after initial designates the most usual given name, as: A: Augustus; B: Benjamin; C: Charles; D: David; E: Edward; F: Frederick; G: George; H: Henry; I: Isaac; J: John; L: Louis; N: Nicholas; P: Peter; R: Richard; S: Samuel; T: Thomas; W: William.

For books received sizes are given in CAPS, Q, O, D, etc., books not received sizes are given in Roman numerals, 4°, 8°, 12°, etc. Prices are added except when not supplied by publisher or obtainable only on specific request. Where not specified the binding is cloth.

Those desiring to learn the entire publishing output of the month in any one field should look under one of the following MAIN HEADINGS:

SOCIOLOGY	HOUSEHOLD ECONOMICS	DRAMA
PHILOLOGY	FINE ARTS	GEOGRAPHY AND TRAVEL
SCIENCE	GAMES, SPORTS, AMUSEMENTS	HISTORY

Besides the titles listed under each of these headings cross reference is made from each to a limited number of cognate headings which collectively give all the new publications of the month in the given subject or group of subjects.

Inquirers looking for books on a specific topic should look under the general subject to which that topic belongs, i.e., GEOLOGY rather than SILURIAN PERIOD; MATHEMATICS rather than CALCULUS; ECONOMICS rather than WAGES. Books regarding specific Religious denominations, countries and persons, however, should still be sought for under their individual names.
